NIP PLOT TO PLUNDER U. S.

CHICAGO SINN FEINERS HISS WILSON'S NAME

Cohalan Forced to Quiet Crowd at Auditorium.

President Wilson's name, mentioned by Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of the New York Supreme court at the Auditorium last night, brought hisses that did not subside until the speaker dropped his topic to plead with the audience to desist.

Three thousand Chicago Irish had gathered to attend a massmeeting under the auspices of the committee of 100 for an Irish republic.

Mayor Thompson had welcomed Judge Cohalan in a short address. Mention of the president had been passed off with laughter and applause when Chairman George F. Barrett had referred to "Judge Cohalan's enemies," Mayor Thompson leading the applause.

Near the close of Judge Cohalan's address he referred to the refusal of the peace conference to hear the Irish plea for self-government.

Refers to Peace Jury.

"England does not want the Irish cause to be heard because she does not dare show the peace conference the terms by which she holds Ireland," he declared. "And yet the jury is most fair, certainly, even to England.

His sentence was cut short by hisses coming from the main floor of the house.

"No, no, don't do that!" exclaimed the speaker. "You must remember he is the president of the United States!"

A tense silence fell over the audience. Judge Cohalan cleared his throat and resumed. Members of the committee and Mayor Thompson, seated on the stage, shifted nervously.

Newspaper Gives Hint.

It was the only unusual incident of the evening. Copies of the Irish News and Chicago Citizen, circulated in the lobby, called attention to the meeting and said:

"Because of the refusal of the American delegation at the peace table to demand, or even to request, a hearing on the question of Ireland's right to self-determination and freedom the Auditorium demonstration is likely to develop the characteristics of an INDIGNATION meeting in spite of the great precautions of its managers."

There were times when the forecast seemed about to be fulfilled. As the chairman finished his introduction to the program a woman on the main floor screamed:

"Take down those British jacks!"

British Flag Lowered.

She referred to the British flags, a part of the decorations of the theater. Later she repeated her plea, but it was passed unnoticed. Some one lowered a British flag on the railing of the balcony and dropped a Sinn Fein banner in its place, but few noticed the action.

There were Sinn Fein flags of orange, white, and green, all over the place. They formed a part of the decoration of the platform from which Judge Cohalan spoke.

Judge Cohalan, declaring his patriotism and respect for British diplomacy at the outset, reviewed the 750 year fight of Ireland for freedom, told him how the election last December resulted in a 11 to 3 vote in favor of self determination despite the presence of armed British troops and constabulary in the island.

Stopped by Cheering.

"The Irish question has never been settled because the question has never been seriously considered before the American people," he said, and he was forced to stop to let the cheering subside. It was cheering, not applause, at every opportunity.

"England is on the verge of her greatest victory," he continued. "If she has her way at the peace conference the liberty of no land, including our own United States of America, will be safe. England, who did not win the war, is dictating the terms of peace to the United States, who did."

Again the crowd forced the speaker to pause.

After reviewing the part played by the Irish in every great American war Judge Cohalan said:

"The people of Ireland say that if the peace conference doesn't give them

CARLILE ASKS $22,000,000 FOR 4 MAIL CENTERS

Wants 3 Postoffices and Terminal for 7,000,000 City.

Postmaster W. B. Carlile launched a new project yesterday to provide adequate postoffice facilities for Chicago, even when it grows to 7,000,000 population.

Instead of a single new postoffice, to cost $7,000,000, he asks three such buildings and a $1,000,000 terminal for parcel post and second class mail matter—the latter at once. This would make the total cost about $22,000,000.

Mr. Carlile's conferees in the undertaking are Charles H. Wacker, chairman of the Chicago plan commission; Ald. Maurice F. Kavanagh and John J. Touhy of the council postoffice site committee; Congressman Thomas Gallagher, and Superintendent Denning of the railway mail service, Washington, D. C.

Fears Mail Breakdown.

The postmaster declared the Chicago mail service will break under the strain of congestion and bad working conditions unless temporary relief is afforded immediately. The emergency he would meet by an eight story terminal for parcel post and second class mail, to be built in connection with the new Pennsylvania railroad passenger station and leased to the government for ten years. If the deal is consummated the terminal will be ready for occupancy within a year.

Meantime Mr. Carlile proposes congress be asked to triple the scheduled appropriation and give Chicago major postoffices on the south, west, and north sides.

Post Facilities Lag.

In exhibiting tentative outlines of the undertaking he said:

"Chicago is no longer a big packing town and banking center. The postoffice facilities have not kept pace with the city's tremendous growth. Twenty-five years ago the territory now embraced in the Chicago postal area supported fifty separate and independent postoffices. With the huge increase in population today the postoffice, with forty-eight stations, is serving, or trying to serve, a territory of 200 square miles, containing more than 3,000,000 of the busiest persons in the United States.

"We are compelled to adopt the methods of New York and London or have our mail service break under the strain. The old building was too small; the temporary building on the lake front, which, by a lucky accident, turned out to be the best postoffice we ever had, sufficed for the time, and the present home will never be anything but a magnificent federal building suitable for courts and government offices."

Asks Organized Action.

In laying his cards on the table the postmaster urged a "postoffice committee of half a dozen leading representatives of the community be appointed to make a study of the situation and then bend every effort to procure the adoption of their ideas by congress."

"It is an offense against the interests of Chicago," he said, "that a question of such importance to the city's commercial development should be treated so negligently, especially when there is a general realization and agreement that decisive action is required.

Expects Wilson's O. K.

Postmaster Carlile believes the building of three huge postoffices in Chicago, breaking away from the small city fetish of one central office, will meet the approval of President Wilson, who recommended congress make appropriations for needed public improvements to maintain the industrial morale of the nation and furnish employment for returning soldiers.

The Washington committee representing Postmaster General Burleson recently visited Postmaster Carlile, and, after reviewing his plans, took them under advisement. The committee was headed by Supt. Denning.

CHILD KILLED SEEKING SAFE PLACE TO PLAY

Play space for children is scarce in the crowded district around Huron and Paulina streets. On Saturday afternoons a feller can't even find room on the sidewalks to play 'r anythin'.

So 8 year old Andy Zed of 1636 West Huron street bethought himself of a nice paved alley, just off Paulina street, and he took his tricycle there. He made one trip the length of the alley and on returning rode directly in the path of a big truck. His body was crushed under the wheels.

He was dead when John Smith, the driver of the truck, picked him up. Smith was held by the West Chicago avenue police pending the inquest at 10 o'clock Monday morning.

ARMY OFFICERS TAKEN IN DEAL FOR MILLIONS

Possibility of German Intrigue Is Suggested.

Detroit, Mich., June 7.—[Special.]—Department of justice officials in Detroit, working under the direction of Arthur L. Barkey, chief of the bureau, have nipped an alleged plot to defraud the government out of $30,000,000 worth of munition supplies which were to be disposed of abroad, presumably to the militaristic group in Germany.

Secret indictments, charging conspiracy, have been returned by the United States grand jury against:

Capt. Soterios Nicholson of Washington, disbursing officer and financial manager of the ordnance department, U. S. A.

Grant Hugh Browne, millionaire sporting and race track owner, prominently known in this city through his connection with the Devonshire race track in Windsor.

Fred C. Collins, vice consul of Greece and president of the Merchants' Realty company of this city.

A major in the United States army, now in France.

Held at Army Fort.

The men under arrest are being held for trial at Fort Wayne.

Nicholson and Browne were arrested at the Hotel Statler.

Bert Harris, wealthy junk dealer of New York, also implicated in the plot, was lured to this city by officers of the department of justice and was arrested in the Statler hotel Saturday morning. He will be arraigned before the grand jury Tuesday.

Browne is said by Mr. Barkey to be the instigator of the conspiracy. He is alleged to have approached Nicholson and asked him if he could not get some one on the "inside" to work with the group, and is alleged to have promised him that if he could arrange it it meant thousands of dollars to him (Nicholson).

Conspiracy as Alleged.

Nicholson is declared to have said he would try to do so and is accused of making overtures to the army officer mentioned, whose name is withheld, as he has not yet been placed under arrest.

It was agreed that bids would be made on munitions which the government was to salvage in Detroit, and that all bids excepting those sent in by the clique would be rejected.

Three bids are required by the government before any material can be sold. This is where Harris and Collins are said to have figured in the plot. They allowed the use of their names as bidders. Then Browne, it is alleged, would make the highest bid, which had already been agreed upon, and the contracts of sale would be awarded to him. The price bid was far below the value of the articles.

Young Army Officer the Sleuth.

A young army officer in the ordnance department discovered the alleged scheme and notified the department of justice. He was instructed to gain the confidence of the supposed plotters, which he did, and so far as they knew he was one of them.

Mr. Barkey put operatives on the case, and after two months of work they made the arrests.

Capt. Nicholson came to Detroit Feb. 18 and registered at the Statler. From the time of his arrival he was constantly under surveillance and a dictaphone, placed behind a picture on the wall of his room in the hotel, was constantly under the ear of federal agents.

Waited to Clinch the Case.

Many conferences were held in Nicholson's room and it was by "listening in" that the officers gathered much of their evidence.

While the facts of the conspiracy were known to the officials, they did not want to make an arrest until they had facts to clinch their case, so they waited until the first deal was made, it was explained.

Last week bids were submitted on $300,000 worth of munitions. Browne was the highest bidder and the government awarded him the contract. It was intended, it is alleged, to ship this material, which was mostly ammunition stock, to Mexico and thence to Germany.

Say "Spoils" Were Divided.

Thursday Nicholson went to Rochester, N. Y., followed by operatives.

YANK THIRD ARMY SHELLS MULHEIM, BUT BY ACCIDENT

COBLENZ, June 5.—Mulheim was shelled this afternoon when fire started in the 3d army ammunition dump near by. The population of German prisoners and U. S. soldiers took to the cellars and are still there. They are kept down by the intermittent popping of various charges. The train crews in the yards deserted their posts. Traffic was tied up until the soldiers got on the job and started the wheels again. An engineer was wounded by a fragment of shell while sitting in the cab of his locomotive. No other casualties are reported.

New U. S. Destroyer Goes 38 Knots in an Hour

Bath, Me., June 7.—All speed records of the Rockland trial course have been broken by the new torpedo boat destroyer Hale, according to an announcement by officials of the Bath Iron works today. A mean speed of 37.63 knots was made during builders' preliminary trials, while the fastest mile, with wind and tide favoring the ship, was made at the rate of 38.38 knots an hour.

DETROIT STREET CAR MEN START SUDDEN STRIKE

City Refuses a Higher Fare; Company Will Not Increase Wages.

Detroit, Mich., June 7.—Street car service in Detroit came to a sudden halt at 10 o'clock tonight when motormen and conductors of the Detroit United Railways company struck to enforce their demands for increased pay.

The action was taken on the recommendation of W. H. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employés, who was informed by President Frank W. Brooks of the traction company that a higher schedule of fares, upon which increased pay for the men was contingent, had been refused by the city council.

Theatergoers Are Marooned.

Following the vote, the car men were instructed to take their cars to the barns immediately. This left hundreds of Saturday night theatergoers and shoppers marooned in the downtown district, it having previously been announced the strike, if called, would not become effective until 4 a. m. Sunday.

Over 2,000 men are involved and the situation is unique in that the carmen claim the city council rather than the traction company is responsible for the walkouts. The men, union officials declared, are not resentful of the company's position and the company has announced that it will make no effort to operate its cars.

Company Appealed to City.

The decision to walk out follows several weeks of negotiations begun when the men asked an increase of 27 cents an hour. The company declared it was unable to meet the demands unless it was granted a higher rate schedule, and appealed to the city council.

In further negotiations the carmen agreed to accept an increase of 10 cents an hour and the council was asked to authorize a straight 5 cent fare, abrogate the 3 cent fare line franchises, eliminate the eight for a quarter workmen's tickets and allow 1 cent for each transfer. The council today agreed to all these terms but the 1 cent transfer charge and the strike hinged on this point when the men met tonight to vote on their action.

STRAIGHT LINES, LONG SKIRTS, ARE STYLES FOR FALL

Cleveland, O., June 7.—Straight fronts.

Straight backs.

Broader hips for misses.

Straight, classic lines for women.

These are fall and winter styles decreed today for women at the National Cloak, Suit, and Skirt Manufacturers' association meeting here.

Skirts will be long—instep length—with room enough to step comfortably.

Bright colors, with snappy reds and browns, compete for favor.

And then comes:

High rolling collars.

Buttons and more buttons, not merely for ornament but for real use, since most suits will fasten clear to the chin.

Pockets, tucks, stitchery, and cording.

Coats longer and more voluminous, with enormous armholes. Big collars of fur or shirred material.

EVANSTON GIRL'S WEDDING HALTED; BRIDEGROOM ILL?

There was food for gossip in Evanston and Jacksonville, Ill., yesterday when the wedding ceremony which was to have united Miss Elizabeth Andrews of Evanston and Edward Brown of Jacksonville was called off. The ceremony was to have been performed in the First Methodist church of Evanston and Dr. John Norris Hall, pastor of Broadway Methodist church of Chicago, was to have officiated.

The wedding was called off by Mrs. Andrews yesterday morning while the guests were preparing to attend.

At night when Mrs. Andrews was asked for an explanation over the telephone she declared it was "a calamity."

"The wedding was halted because of the illness of the young man," she said.

A wedding dinner had been ordered at the North Shore hotel, and this also was canceled.

"I was given to understand the wedding was called off for the time being because of the illness of Mr. Brown," said the Rev. Mr. Hall.

First Infantry, I. N. G., Again to Be Organized

Springfield, Ill., June 7.—An order for the organization of the 1st infantry of the Illinois national guard, of which Col. Joseph B. Sanborn remained commander throughout the war, was issued today by Adjt. Gen. Dickson. The regiment has been recruited wholly in Chicago.

Yaquis Kill 2 Americans, 30 Mexicans

Nogales, Ariz., June 7.—At least two Americans and thirty Mexicans have been killed by Yaquis and bandits in La Colorado district of Sonora, Mexico, during the last two weeks, according to the statement of nine American mining men who arrived from that neighborhood tonight.

The party of Americans, whose homes are in Arizona, Colorado, and California, have sent a statement on conditions in that district to the state department at Washington, with copies to Senators C. S. Thomas of Colorado, Hiram Johnson of California, and Marcus Smith and Henry F. Ashurst of Arizona.

One American Slain.

In the report on affairs in Sonora forwarded to the state department by the returned mining men it is stated that nineteen Mexicans were killed by Mexican bandits and one American, Charles Morgan, was shot in the foot in a raid at Navojoa; that five Mexicans were killed by the Mexican bandits at Nuri, twelve miles from where H. S. White, an American truck driver of Tucson, Ariz., was recently slain.

It is believed now that White was killed by Mexican bandits and not by Yaquis, as was first reported, since the tracks of his slayers showed that they wore shoes and not the Yaqui sandals.

The murder of C. W. P. Tevotee, mining engineer, three days ago, undoubtedly was the work of the Yaquis, say the returned Americans. Two Mexicans in the automobile with Tevotee and four other Mexicans accompanying the party on horseback also are reported to have been killed at the same time.

The mining men who arrived tonight also brought the news that after the Mexican truck drivers and helpers had been shot to death, the Yaquis or bandits burned two auto trucks belonging to J. F. McFarland, owner of the El Progreso mine, near La Colorado.

Part of Statement.

The statement continues:

"Why should Yaqui Indians be given safe harbor in the United States schools for their children, and then be allowed to bring back ammunition to Mexico from the United States and kill and pillage American citizens?

"It is current talk that ammunition is sold direct to Yaqui Indians coming and going from Arizona; also that the Papago Indians in the neighborhood of Indian's Oasis, southwest of Tucson, are furnishing ammunition to Yaquis.

"Cannot some pressure be brought to bear on the Yaquis of Arizona that will have the effect of stopping the murder of Americans in Sonora, Mexico? Are the Yaquis not at war with the United States the same as Germany, with their killing and pillaging of Americans?"

Who Holds Chihuahua?

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—A code message announcing definitely the capture of Chihuahua City by the Villistas was received in Washington today, but officials here doubt the report. The message was a code arranged some weeks ago by Villa agents on the border for dispatch to representatives of Angeles and Villa in various parts of the United States, and according to the Angeles representatives in Washington there is no doubt of the fact that Chihuahua has been captured.

Army officials expect a report within forty-eight hours from Maj. Gen. Cabell, commanding the southern army department, as to the necessity for mobilization of two Texas national guard cavalry brigades, requested by Gov. Hobby of Texas.

SUGGESTS X-RAY FOR REGIMENT TO FIND DIAMOND

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—Just before the 108th regiment of engineers departed from Camp Mills for Chicago, where most of the members live, several sought medical aid to find a missing diamond, owned until May 30 by Mrs. S. F. Gates of Villard avenue, Hollis, Queens.

The soldiers proposed to the regimental surgeons, it is reported, that each be X-rayed in an effort to ascertain who had the missing diamond in his midst.

The diamond disappeared while the soldiers were eating at the Jamaica canteen, after marching in the Memorial day parade, and there is a suspicion that a soldier swallowed the diamond in a sandwich.

Mrs. Gates is a canteen worker. She made many of the sandwiches which were eaten after the parade. She wore a handsome diamond ring when she began. Afterwards she discovered the stone had dropped from its setting. Careful search failed to disclose it. Mrs. Gates thinks it fell into a sandwich.

BELA KUN TELLS SOVIET HOPES AND PURPOSES

Says Whole World Will Accept Rule of Proletariat.

(Special Cable to Chicago Tribune.)

PARIS, June 7.—Next to Russia, the world's greatest experiment with communism is in Hungary. At Budapest sits Bela Kun, who, next to Nicolai Lenine, is the central figure in the Red galaxy of shooting stars. What further alibis or theories have these men to offer while about them millions are starving? These are the questions which took Farmer Murphy of "The Tribune" to Budapest. Here is Bela Kun's answer:

BY FARMER MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BUDAPEST, June 1 [via Paris, June 7].—[Delayed.]—The communist government of Bela Kun and his party in Hungary is based on hope and its lease of power is measured by that hypothesis. In other words, if Bela Kun's rosy expectations for outside aid are not realized there is no possibility of his communistic experiment in this city continuing long. This was the only conclusion possible from the statements which he made to me in the course of our interview.

Whether he himself has any real faith in the coming of that aid was not stated directly, but his discourse regarding the help from the outside was in such general terms as not to carry convictions to his hearers or to give an air of confidence to his own attitude.

Small Faith in Government.

Although the government now is functioning more smoothly and the men in control are learning now to do things, there are so many unstable features in it that its days, to observers, certainly seem numbered.

Not only are there members of the government itself who have no confidence in it and are not believers in its avowed principles but, on account of the business stagnation and the lack of buying power of the bolshevist money, the proletariat itself is beginning to get uneasy and sceptical. Workmen receive enormous wages but find themselves with their pockets stuffed with money but unable to buy anything with it.

There is almost nothing in the city to buy, and even when there is the merchants, on one pretext or another, refuse to accept the current money.

Many Wait for Audience.

I met the man who is second only to Lenine in importance in the bolshevist movement in his office in the palace of the former king of Hungary. It was a small, unpretentious room, furnished with a desk, a small table, and three or four chairs.

To reach the bolshevist leader one must pass through four large rooms, beginning with a large dining saloon, and every one of them filled in varying degrees by people who wished to see the head of the government. Some were long haired individuals and some had a prosperous look but a sad, discouraged cast of countenance. I noticed one blind munition factory worker who had been led in by a pale, undernourished boy.

Kun Resembles a Negro.

Kun himself presented not at all the appearance I had expected from the previous descriptions I had had of him, one of which said he was the ugliest looking man possible. He is about 5 feet 8 in height, with a bullet shaped head, closely cropped hair, brown eyes, and thick lips. His nose is not distinctly Jewish, and altogether he is much like a Negro in appearance. His dark skin assists in giving this conception.

Kun has been interviewed, and in his speeches and manifestos has given to the world his ideas of communism and its ultimate triumph, so there was little news to be sought from him in that regard.

What I wished to have him explain was the very concrete question of how, in the existing difficult circumstances, he expected to make a durable success of his actual government in Hungary.

Expects Outside Help.

"Mr. Kun," I inquired, "you have a communist government in Budapest which is keeping fair order. Your departments appear to be active, but most of your industries are idle. Intercourse with the outside world is cut off, and even with your own country, indeed, and you are surrounded on all sides by countries hostile to your ideas. Under such conditions how can you hope to go on?"

"We expect to establish relations with the governments around us and exchange the products we each need," he replied.

"But they refuse to do so as long as your party is in power," I said.

"Well, they may change their attitude," he answered.

Relies On An Uprising.

"How do you think such a change will be brought about?" I asked.

"By the rising of the proletariat," he said.

"The proletariat hasn't risen yet in the states around you. Do you mean Germany?"

"We still hope for a rising of the proletariat. In Germany the triumph of our ideals is inevitable, whether peace is signed or not," he said. "If peace is signed it means the end of capitalism. And if it isn't signed, then the proletariat will not fight. So in either case we gain our point."

Question after question of this sort was asked in an endeavor to elicit some substantial facts on which he based belief that his government would endure and always it came back to the same indefinite hope and expectation that the proletariat would rise. At no time did he offer any specific justification of his avowed confidence.

Asked if he had been approached recently by the entente, he replied that since Gen. Smuts' visit no official representation had been made to him, although some semi-official conversations had taken place, and he spoke of having had relations with Prof. Brown.

"All that we ask of the entente is to be let alone in our internal politics," he said. "They have no ground for complaint against us, for foreign property has been respected and will be respected."

I asked him if there had been any attempt by the French to advance from the south.

Says People Will Fight.

He replied that there had been none yet, but he added: "If there should be, the whole proletariat would rise in arms. All are ready to die to prevent such an advance. I've not lost confidence in the English and American public opinion to prevent a new war."

For this statement there is considerable support. I rode from Budapest south from the line of demarcation which separates the Hungarian Red guards from the French forces. In every town, village, and city there are hundreds of Red guards, drilling or in barracks, and at frequent intervals sentinels stopped every one going along the road to make them give an account of themselves.

Almost without exception, the soldiers are young men, fully half of them being mere boys. For the most part they lack discipline, and no arms larger than a rifle were anywhere in evidence.

Says Farmers Are Working.

I inquired if the government was doing anything to revive industry, and asked how the communication facilities were working out. Kun said that seven factories manufacturing agricultural implements were in operation, and that they were 200 per cent more efficient than under the old system, a statement which was ridiculed by the manufacturers. In reference to agriculture, he said there were a million acres now under the coöperative plan, and that 95 per cent was under cultivation, whereas formerly there was only 50 per cent under cultivation.

"If the farming population is supporting your communist government, why is it that they refuse to sell their products in this city and Budapest is without sufficient food?" I asked.

"There is plenty of food in Budapest," he replied.

"If it is here, why can't I get it at the hotel, where all it is possible to get for breakfast is half a slice of black bread and a cup of tea?" I asked.

"You get as much as any one else," he replied.

"Then there isn't enough," I said.

Can Give "Other Money."

"Well," he replied, "the reason for the apparent scarcity is that we are saving it. We are storing it up. We might be besieged. We are getting ready."

"If the peasants so heartily favor your coöperative system and your ideas, as you say, why can't they be prevailed on to bring food to feed the people who want it?" I asked.

"Budapest is a city of 2,000,000 and hard to supply," he said.

"I've been told that the real reason is that they won't take your money," I countered.

"There is plenty of other money," said Kun with a smile.

When I was told later in the day that the government had seized 200,000,000 crowns of "blue money" which was in the banks, the significance of his remark and his smile was more clear.

Engraved Plates for One Side.

By "blue money" is meant the bills of the old Austro-Hungarian government, which are blue in color, as opposed to the bolshevist money, which is plain white on one side. The reason for this is that the bolshevist government had no place in which to engrave the money, but it so happened that two plates from the government bureau in Vienna were in Budapest. They were the plates for the face of bills of 20 crowns and 200 crowns, but there were no plates for the back of these two denominations, so the bolshevists printed this money with the back blank.

Since no one wants to take this money the absence of intermediate and smaller denominations doesn't cause inconvenience, as one might suppose. It is just as easy to offer a 200 crown note for a car ride as the exact fare. In an effort to force the people to accept this white money the government this week tried a merchant who refused it and sentenced him to a year in prison.

Says Allies Cheated Him.

In speaking of the treatment by the entente, Kun said Hungary had purchased 100 cars of food from them, which had been paid for by the Karolyi government and partly by his in cash and that only twenty-five cars had been delivered, but he said the entente kept the money just the same. I learned from other sources that this statement was incorrect.

Kun answered all of the questions readily, but had a bad habit of casting his eyes down for a moment while thinking of a reply. He impressed me as a man of shrewdness rather than forcefulness, of cunning rather than intellectual power. In accepting an American cigaret he said: "I've not seen any of these since I used to get them when a prisoner in Siberia."

BIG FOUR FAILS TO DECIDE ON REPLY TO FOES

Britain and France Cannot Agree on New Terms.

PARIS, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Little progress was made today by the council of four in the attempt to formulate the reply to the German counter proposals. The attitude of the American commission remained that of mediator, but the French and English were as far apart tonight as they had been any time during the week. M. Clemenceau remained firm in his determination not to reduce the demands upon the Germans.

It is expected that a majority of the reports of the minor commissions will come before the council Monday, when it is possible more rapid progress will be made.

It has been pointed out to both the French and English delegates that virtually as much time has been taken by the allies in preparing an answer to the German counter proposals as was allowed the Germans to consider the treaty after its presentation.

The question of Fiume also was discussed today, but no decision was reached.

Modifications Are Considered.

The most important modification in the treaty under consideration, the question of reparations, probably will not involve any material changes in the treaty as originally presented.

Instructions to the reparations commission in the proposed agreement would enable the Germans to know at once the amount of reparations due under certain "categories" of reparations. It has been found impossible, however, to fix any total sum for all categories.

No change with regard to responsibilities, punishment of the former emperor, or the disposal of the German colonies is regarded as probable.

Deny Treaty to Senate.

The American delegation to the peace conference apparently is firm in its decision not to authorize the publication of the German peace treaty until it is signed and not even to communicate the official text in its present form to the United States senate.

A member of the American delegation, in discussing the complaint made in the senate concerning publication of the treaty in Germany and charges that copies were in the hands of New York bankers, said the delegation had not violated the pledge made to other powers not to give out the treaty until it is completed and will not do so. He added that, so far as he knew, Germany had not been requested to keep the treaty secret, as such a request to an opponent would not be in conformity with accepted diplomatic practice.

The delegate, in replying to an inquiry why the covenant of the league of nations had been published, said that, while the covenant was part of the treaty, it does not actually deal with the terms of peace, and, consequently, is essentially of a different character.

Seek to Find Leak.

The members of the delegation, disturbed by the report that copies of the German peace terms have reached New York, are undertaking to check up all the copies issued in order to ascertain if any are missing.

Virtually all the important commissions connected with the peace conference were in session today. The activity was due to the directions issued yesterday by the conference leaders that the work of the body should be speeded up as far as possible.

Not the Real Treaty.

PARIS, June 7.—[By the United Press.]—The document which Senator Lodge reports having seen in New York is not the one that will go down in history as the treaty of Paris. This is the reply of those close to President Wilson to the senator's charges that the text of the German treaty is in the hands of certain American private interests.

In other words, the treaty in its present form will not be presented to the Germans for signature. It is to undergo considerable revision.

Nevertheless, the entire American delegation is not in sympathy with withholding the full text of the treaty inasmuch as photographic copies are on sale in three languages in Germany, Switzerland, Holland, and Scandinavia.

"Can't Make Us Pay"—Dernburg.

LONDON, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Germany's inability to meet the financial demands of the peace terms and the inability of the allies to make her pay, are insisted upon by Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, the German minister of finance, in an interview telegraphed by the Daily Mail's Berlin correspondent. Dr. Dernburg reiterates his recent declaration that Germany will not sign the terms as presented, and continues:

"As a matter of fact, neither the entente nor Germany is capable of signing this peace. Germany cannot pay and the entente cannot make Germany pay. You can invade Germany and occupy the Ruhr basin and nobody will stand in your way if you wish to come to Berlin. But when you are there what are you going to do?"

"Flags of Mourning."

VIENNA, via Paris, June 7.—The Neue Freie Presse says: "Let us show flags of mourning." Commenting editorially on the terms of the Austrian peace treaty it says: "The conference imposes independence upon us and meanwhile makes us powerless in regard to economic legislation. The peace treaty is worse than the worst predictions. In Vienna and all Austria only one opinion reigns regarding the peace treaty—that it is unacceptable. An effort has been made to deceive the Austrian people. The world powers raised false hopes by diplomatic tricks and pushed the poor people to political and economical ruin. So former statesmen who claim to be destined to build up a new order in the world politically have made a treaty which is a naked breach of faith as never before was.

Slap at Entente.

The Tageblatt says: "The entente does not offer democratic peace and justice, but imperialistic peace and force."

The Journal says the worst predictions have been surpassed. "All that is offered Austria is death and destruction."

The Arbeiter Zeitung says: "They have taken all from us. German Austria was a state of 10,000,000, which by treaty becomes a state of 6,000,000. It is not necessary to say more to understand the treaty is terribly hateful and wrongs us. They have assailed powerless Austria; they have torn the living flesh from her body without shame, without compassion, without mercy. Out of the misery into which we are pushed by this treaty there is only one resurrection—a union of the great German people."

Germans Form Army.

BERNE, June 6.—[Delayed.]—Great activity is being displayed in Germany in recruiting men for the army and in gathering ammunition, the Independent Socialist organ, Die Freiheit, of Berlin says.

According to the Socialist Abend of Vienna, German recruiting agents are busy in Austria.

The Nachrichten of Basel says that the German recruiting bureaus are appealing for men to enlist and are offering various inducements, including pay of 9 marks a day and "fidelity premiums."

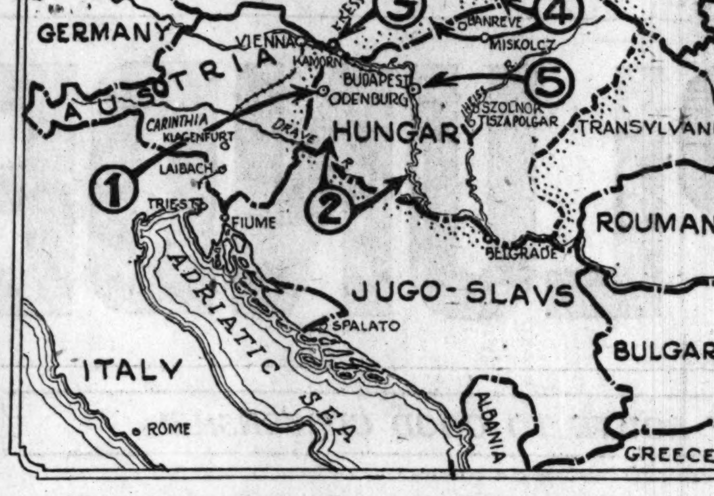
HUNGARIANS ATTACK CZECHS



1—Hungarian counter revolutionary forces have captured the western part of Odenburg, thirty-seven miles southeast of Vienna.

2—Uprising in southwestern Hungary by soviet troops is reported to have been suppressed mercilessly by forces led by M. Samelli, one of the Russian red leaders sent to Budapest by Nikolai Lenine.

3—Hungarian soviet troops are reported to have crossed the Danube at Gren in advance on Pressburg, in Czecho-Slovakia.

4—Hungarian soviet troops are reported to have crossed the Czecho-Slovak frontiers and gained minor successes at various points.

5—The food situation at Budapest is reported to have grown worse.

HUNGARY MAKES GAINS AGAINST CZECH TROOPS

VIENNA, June 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Hungarian soviet troops have continued to carry out minor successes against the Czechs. They have crossed the Danube at Gran, and Pressburg is menaced, notwithstanding the fact that two French generals have been placed in command of the Czech operations.

Hungarian counter revolutionary forces have become more active and have captured the western part of the city of Odenburg, thirty-seven miles southeast of Vienna.

There have also been uprisings in southwestern Hungary, which were put down mercilessly by M. Samelli, who was sent by Nikolai Lenine, the Russian bolshevik premier, to Budapest as a delegate to offer assistance to the Hungarian bolshevists. It is charged that the male population of cities where these outbreaks occurred were carried off by M. Samuelli's troops.

Bela Kun has issued a memorial to President Wilson and Premier Lloyd George, declaring that if Czech outrages against the Hungarians are not stopped he will retaliate.

The first strike under the Hungarian soviet régime was declared by railway men who objected to being paid in bolshevist money.

AVIATOR GIVES NOTICE OF PLAN TO FLY ATLANTIC

St. Johns, N. F., June 7.—In accordance with regulations established by the British admiralty after Harry Hawker and Commander Grieves, British aviators, had their narrow escape from death in mid-Atlantic, requiring four days' advance notice, Capt. Alcock, the Vickers-Vimy pilot, tonight gave formal notice of starting his trans-Atlantic flight on Wednesday.

This intention has been sent broadcast by wireless. The admiralty's purpose is to have all ships in the Atlantic on the lookout. A destroyer patrol at the far end of the course is also believed to be possible.

Vimy's trial flight has been announced for tomorrow night.

The Sopwith's undercarriage and wheels which Hawker dropped at the start of his flight were brought into Presque, Placentia bay, today by a schooner which found them off the Grand banks.

17,120 Arrested in Corea in April, Japanese Admit

San Francisco, Cal., June 7.—The Japanese-American, a Japanese language newspaper published here, printed today what purported to be an official statement from the Japanese government declaring that in Corea during April 17,120 persons were arrested for participation in outbreaks against Japanese rule. Of those arrested 10,776 received prison sentences, 6,327 cases are awaiting disposition, and seventeen persons are in prison awaiting formal charge.

Tension in French Strike Lessening, Newspapers Say

PARIS, June 7. — [Havas.] — The newspapers see a lessening in the tension due to the strike as the result of developments yesterday. The agreement reached by the miners and mining companies of northern France and the manifesto of the general labor confederation are taken as indicating that the present movement will not become more serious. The union of syndicates of the Seine today published a declaration appealing to the workmen to be calm and to maintain order.

Paris Conferees Receive Women's Peace Delegates

PARIS, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Jane Addams, Chrystal MacMillan, and the other delegates appointed by the women's international conference for permanent peace at Zurich to present resolutions to the peace conference have been received by Capt. Andre Tardieu of the French delegation, and Col. Edward M. House of the American delegation. One American delegate told them that women would participate in the various plebiscites provided by the peace treaty.

GERMANY CALLS RHINE LEADERS TO VERSAILLES

Seeking Facts About New Republic in Western Zone.

BY PAUL WILLIAMS.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

COBLENZ, June 5, via Paris, June 7.—Four political leaders on the Rhine have been summoned to Versailles by the German peace delegates to tell what they know about agitation for a republic in the valley. They left today.

They are Adenauer, oberburgomaster of Cologne; Loenertz, the Centrum party's most prominent representative at Coblenz; Louis Hazzen, and Soliman. Outside the Mayence bridgehead, where the French military authorities are in control, no one seems to want a republic.

Will Gain More Sympathy.

Although the movement may have uncertain success under its present leadership, Berlin has indicated a possible fear it might be more menacing if conducted by other hands. Therefore the Rhineland in the future will receive more sympathy. Reforms already are on the way. Certain district presidents and even the province president himself is to be replaced by men more acceptable from the strong Centrist faction in the Rhineland. Von Starck has been tentatively appointed head of the provisional government by Berlin. The district president of Mayence has been relieved. Whether his successor will be a man chosen by Berlin or Dr. Dorten, the self-styled provisional president of the new republic, depends entirely upon the attitude of the French military authorities.

Rhine State Issues Appeal.

COLOGNE, June 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Dr. Dorten, president of the new Rhenish republic, has telegraphed Sir William Robertson, commissioner of the British forces of occupation here, announcing the formation of the republic and repudiating any desire to evade a "just share in the reparation of war damages." He appeals to the entente powers to protect the new state against "inevitable revenge from Prussian militarism."

Opposition to Republic Grows.

WIESBADEN, June 6.—[By the Associated Press.]—Opposition to the Rhenish republic is growing here daily. The judges of the province are the latest to defy the new government, and, with court employés, have declined to recognize the legality of the régime headed by Dr. Dorten.

The French are reported to have made definite promises to the republic in the shape of officially settling wine and food prices on a peace basis, and also fixing the value of the mark arbitrarily at 1 franc 23 centimes. A general protest strike occurred here yesterday.

ANARCHISTS ON TRIAL BY SWISS

ZURICH, June 7.—Sensational statements were made during the trial of alleged secret agents and anarchists here today. Testimony was given to the effect that one of an anarchist band blew up a train in the Mont Cenis tunnel in November, 1917, in which hundreds of French soldiers were returning from Italy on leave. Bombs and arms found in the River Aar were of German manufacture.

Large sums of money which the Hindu leaders spent freely, it was declared under oath, were supplied, not by Berlin, but by Hindus in America, especially in California.

POINCARE INVITED TO BRUSSELS.

PARIS, June 8.—[Havas.]—King Albert of Belgium has invited President Poincare to visit Brussels on July 22, the Belgian national holiday. The holiday will be celebrated this year on a scale of unusual magnitude.

ESTHONIANS PUT REDS TO FLIGHT, REPORT STATES

Said to Have Taken Hesswegen, in Livonia.

COPENHAGEN, June 7.—The Esthonians are reported to have taken Hesswegen, in southern Livonia. They have begun to drive the bolsheviki in the direction of Kreutzburg, seventy miles southeast of Riga, it is said. The Lettish information bureau reports that Germans from Riga are advancing in the rear of the bolsheviki for the purpose of occupying the eastern frontier of Livonia.

Fighting Near Petrograd.

HELSINGFORS, June 6.—[Delayed.]—The bolsheviki unexpectedly opened fire on the front before Petrograd last night and the battle soon spread to the whole front, according to an official communique by the Finnish war office today. Finnish batteries in retaliation shelled Kronstadt, twenty miles west of Petrograd.

Leave Russia in Two Weeks.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Official announcement was made today by Gen. March that all of the original Archangel expedition will have sailed for home within two weeks. Companies E, G, I, M, and the machine gun company of the 339th infantry are now enroute for Brest, having sailed from Archangel June 3.

There will be left at Archangel temporarily the railway engineer units sent there recently to assist the withdrawal. Gen. March said he was unable to forecast the date for the withdrawal of the Siberian forces.

Cars Seized by "Squatters."

OMSK, Siberia, May 28.—The technical board in charge of operations on the Trans-Siberian railroad has completed an inspection of the line between this city and Perm and has returned here. It is awaiting the arrival in Omsk of John F. Stevens, chairman of the board, who is on his way to Omsk from Harbin. Members of the board believe that the most serious problem before them in the rehabilitation of the Trans-Siberian railroad lies in the ousting of some 14,000 persons who have taken possession of freight and passenger cars along the road. These persons are holding the cars, hoping that they will soon be able to return home, and are not disposed to relinquish the rolling stock which they have seized.

Fatal Wrecks in Siberia.

VLADIVOSTOK, June 5.—In the Amur and Maritime provinces in the last two days half a dozen wrecks have been reported, the rails having been loosened by the bolsheviki. Near Khabarovsk eleven passengers were killed and twenty-three injured.

More than a hundred Japanese soldiers are reported to have been killed or injured yesterday in a wreck on the Vladivostok-Khabarovsk line.

An official Japanese communication issued on the evening of June 2 says: "The reds attacked Ipolitovka station, fifteen miles north of Nikolskussuri, but were driven back to a position in the hills five miles distant, the Japanese losing eleven killed."

500 VILNA JEWS MASSACRED IN APRIL, REPORT

PARIS, June 7.—Evidence to back up the charges of cruelties practiced upon the Jews in Vilna by Polish troops has been collected by Dr. Rachmilevitz and sent to the premier of Lithuania and transmitted by him to the Lithuanian commission to the peace conference.

The document says that the same day the Poles occupied the Vilna railway station they began pillaging the houses of Jews under the pretext that they were searching for arms and bolsheviki. Soldiers of the Polish legion were seen from windows in the Vallstrasse forcing open stores closed because of the Jewish Sabbath.

Street fighting broke out, the document says, on the afternoon of April 22 after the city had been entirely cleared of bolshevik. A considerable number of Jews were killed or thrown into prison.

Prominent residents were killed. Reports speak of 1,500 persons having been killed in Vilna alone, while it is estimated that from 2,000 to 5,000 were deported from Vilna to Lida.

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Washington Bureau of The Tribune.]
WASHINGTON, D. C., June 7.

THE senate rules committe took a long stride today towards fulfillment of the Republican preëlection promise to curb government extravagance when it favorably reported the resolution of Senator McCormick of Illinois creating a special senate committee to devise a budget system. Indications are that the senate will adopt the resolution early next week.

CAPTURE of Chihuahua City in Mexico by Villista forces was reported to Washington agents of Villa and Angeles in a code message today, but the state department doubts the report. Villa's representatives here say that Villa and his forces had Chihuahua completely cut off from the outside world and they believe that the federal garrison there was starved into submission.

THE United States employment service directed to employment nearly 6,000,000 persons in this country between January, 1918, and May 24, 1919, according to a report published today. More than 50,000 were directed to employment in the week ended May 24.

THE army air service is interested in standardization of an aeroplane hospital ambulance that will have all the equipment of the present day motor ambulance and it predicts that the day is not far distant when established hospitals will have complement aerial ambulances for suburban and long distance emergency calls.

GEN. MARCH, chief of staff of the army, said today that the recruiting campaign for 50,000 enlisted men to take the places of national army men in Europe had been a success. More than the required number have joined the colors and 5,000 already have been sent overseas. As many of them did not express any preference as to where they wished to be sent, Gen. March said that some may be ordered as replacement troops to Siberia.

MEMBERS of the senate agriculture committee have practically agreed with the federal trade commission upon provisions of new legislation to regulate the packing industry. The framework of the original Kendrick bill, it is said, will be retained, but the measure is to be made more drastic. A licensing system is provided for and the secretary of agriculture given authorization to suspend licenses, the right of appeal to the courts, however, being granted to the packers.

THE military appropriation bill reported to the house by the committee on military affairs not only reduces the size of the army and the amounts asked by the war department, but serves notice that no more land may be purchased without express authority of congress. The bill provides for an army of 400,000 enlisted men and 22,149 officers, as against 509,909 enlisted men and 28,579 officers as requested. No attempt is made to work out a permanent reorganization scheme, which will be done later in the session.

HEARINGS of the house committee on expenditures in the war department will start probably on June 23. Representative Graham of Illinois, the chairman, announced that an impartial inquiry would be made for the purpose of furnishing full information to the public.

SECRETARY DANIELS has not relented in his opposition to the Navy league upon whose activities he placed a ban following its attacks upon him. He told the house naval affairs committee that he never would recognize it so long as he remains in office.

YANKS SEIZE OIL FROM POLE ARMY TO HELP AUSTRIA

Get 91 Carloads of Oil in Galicia Before Troops Arrive.

BY FARMER MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

VIENNA, June 1, via Paris, June 7.—The American relief administration just has succeeded in carrying out a brilliant maneuver for relief of the fuel situation in Austria and Czecho-Slovakia by bringing in ninety-one carloads of oil from Galicia.

As frequently pointed out, there is desperate need of coal and oil for fuel in all countries of the old empire, so coal is really a key to the whole disturbed situation here.

A short time ago Director Gregory and Col. Causey learned the Ukrainians had a large number of cars of oil in part of Galicia toward which the Poles were driving their attacks. The Ukrainians had agreed to sell this to Austria and the Czechs, if they could get it out of the country.

There was no time to lose, and a party of Americans headed by Col. William Jones and Capt. E. B. Mitchell were sent with a train to bring back this oil. They left about two weeks ago and arrived on the scene as the Poles were nearing the booty, but they got possession of and brought out ninety-one cars of oil before the Poles, who had advanced rapidly, could prevent it.

Part of the oil was delivered to the Czechs and the rest was brought here, where the party arrived Friday.

How close the race was was shown by the fact dispatches say the Poles have now confiscated all German, Austrian, and Hungarian properties in the oil region. Oil secured for Austria and the Czechs will not cure the fuel famine, by any means, but it will help cure it.

BERLIN DRILLS ITS ARMIES AS PEACE WAITS

Old Military Leaders to Front; May Not Sign the Treaty.

BULLETIN.

BERLIN, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—The street cars of Berlin ceased running at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon as a result of the declaration of a twenty-four hour strike by the Greater Berlin soviet as a protest against the execution of Levine Nissen, Bavarian communist leader, at Munich on Thursday. Only two of the morning papers appeared today and these in reduced form. The strike is not general, but is on a large scale.

BY RICHARD HENRY LITTLE.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

BERLIN, June 5. — [Delayed.] — While Berlin, on the eve of presentation to Germany of the revised peace treaty, outwardly was calm, there was much rattling of saber and bayonet by the military and great restlessness among the workingmen.

The newspapers today published a message from Noske to the troops, telling them not to be frightened at threats of boycott and unemployment. After their service had ended, he tells them, if they remain loyal to the government they will be protected.

Luttwitz, military commander of Berlin, and Schoeplin, governor of Berlin, had similar letters to the press calling upon the soldiers to remain loyal to the government in the "dark days to come."

New Troops Come In.

New troops continually are arriving in Berlin or taking up strategic positions outside of the city at Potsdam. Other garrisons are under marching orders ready to move at a minute's notice.

It is said by many well informed persons that the clanking of sabers means the government is determined not to sign peace and is preparing to put down by force of arms any outbreak of the independent socialists.

If the soldiers and workingmen, who really are with them, attempt to overthrow the government, the independent Socialists informed me today, they look for a proclamation any time making Noske military dictation, and he, Ludendorff, and Hindenburg would crush any attempt at revolution. Both Ludendorff and Hindenburg are in the saddle. This fact has done much to stir up feeling among independent Socialists and workingmen.

Most Unpopular Man.

Ludendorff easily is the most unpopular man in Germany, which is saying a good deal. Handbills constantly are appearing in Berlin demanding that "Ludendorff be stood up against a wall and be given a taste of his own medicine."

The government declares it must preserve law and order, fulfilling its duty by taking precautionary measures in preparing the army, calling on the best military geniuses to command it.

News of labor troubles in France has acted as a stimulant to activities of the workingmen, and independent Socialists, which, no doubt, are responsible for speeding up the military preparedness program of the Ebert government. Many people tell me the newspapers have given them great comfort as showing a weakening of the peace terms the allies finally will demand.

Pessimism in Berlin.

The general feeling in Berlin is one of great pessimism. Everybody seems listening for the tat-tat of machine guns, with which they are well acquainted.

The rich are exerting their efforts to get out with their gold before the crash. They are fleeing with their packs on their backs.

My washerwoman declined her weekly wage, saying:

"We don't have to work any more. In just a few days we will be in the houses of the rich. We will have all they have. They kept it from us a long time, but soon we are going to help ourselves."

A man told me he was leaving tonight disguised as a fireman on a railroad train. He was going to try to fire the wheezy engine all the way to the Holland frontier. He showed me his dinner bucket. Instead of black bread and dried herring it was filled with 10,000 mark notes. He was going to Denmark, Sweden, or Switzerland—any port in a storm for him. There are many others.

Nissen's Death Perils Cabinet.

BERLIN, June 7.—The political mistake of the Bavarian cabinet in permitting the execution of Levine Nissen, a leader of the Bavarian communists, it became apparent today is likely to result in another Spartacan attempt against the government.

The political effect of the execution asserted itself in Berlin. A general strike was ordered and the Independent Socialist organ Die Freiheit opened up an editorial broadside.

Angry at Slayers' Escape.

The Spartacan movement has been in course of preparation for several weeks on account of the outcome of the trials of the slayers of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg, the escape of military officers imprisoned for killing the Spartacan leaders, and the stern rule of Gustav Noske, the minister of national defense. The situation has furnished the Independent Socialists, Spartacans, and extremists with handy ammunition.

The political disaffection has extended to the majority Socialists and resolutions adopted by factory and workingmen's councils calls on the party convention, which will meet at Weimar Tuesday, to demand the retirement of Socialists from the present government. The radical opponents of the Ebert and Scheidemann governments are also using the tangled peace situation as another weapon with which to attack their former comrades.

VIENNA, June 7.—[By the United Press.]—Dispatches to the Politische Correspondenz from Warsaw today declared that war between Poland and Germany is regarded as inevitable. BROMBERG, Posen, June 3.—[Delayed.]—Bromberg and its surrounding neighborhood bring back some dim memories of Belgium and Serbia of early war times. Here one seems to stand again before the unknown in human experience. One has an uneasy feeling of uncertainty. There are portents of tragedy. The atmosphere is heavy with the burden of a flaming tempest.

I reached Bromberg at midnight on Sunday, and in its eery shadows the whole town seemed to speak of war. As I left the station a soldier pushed a slip of paper into my hand. It was a military permit, allowing me to be out after 11 o'clock, to go from the station to the hotel.

Sparks of War.

For here a "sharp-ended state of siege" prevails. Here is a predominantly German part of the province of Posen, just north of the demarkation line fixed under the armistice condition, but well within the great belt of territory which, in accordance with the terms of the peace treaty, will go to Poland, sparks of passion and war fly and racial antagonism mounts with every speeding hour. It wants but a hand to put a flame to the powder train—and then heaven knows what will happen.

Bromberg has five. Germans for every Pole. In the Netze region, through which runs part of that river and canal system which links the Vistula and the Oder—a great and important highway for German trade—there are 70 per cent Germans and 30 per cent Poles. At Schneidemuehl, just inside the "threatened region," the Poles form only 2 per cent of the population. To the south there stretches that vast part of central Posen to which Germany abandoned all claim. To the north there extends away to the sea territory which is in the main solidly German.

Vortex of Hate.

Between the Polish heart of Posen and the overwhelmingly German provinces of West Prussia and Pomerania the two races come into most violent conflict. It is here, throughout the broad belt between and including Bromberg and Schneidemuehl, that hate burns most fiercely. It is here that it may flare into war at any moment and cast the brand of battle to the whole angry east, only too ready, alas, to receive it and pass it on northward to the sea and southward to Silesia.

The entente fixed in the province of Posen the demarcation line beyond which the Poles and Germans should not go. There have been numerous German reports that the Poles had violated that line. I have seen with my own eyes that that is true.

Poles Violate Agreement?

Yesterday I visited the little town of Nakel. Looking out southward from a window in the mayor's office I could see the villages of Steinberg and Bruecken, roughly one-half mile away. These places are occupied by Polish forces which, according to the armistice terms, should be about nine miles distant from Nakel. The mayor's window had been pierced by a Polish bullet, and the house opposite had a deep dent of a Polish shell.

In and around Nakel the casualties inflicted by the Poles since the armistice was concluded amounted to seven soldiers and eleven civilians killed, and ten soldiers and twenty-eight civilians wounded. Between Feb. 20 and April 25, 220 Polish shells had been fired on Nakel and the district.

Poles Block Waterway.

Polish forces on the River Netze prevent traffic on the waterway, though that is essential to the proper distribution of food in the region. Trade on that waterway, too, will be brought to a standstill. Work in the fields within reach of Polish rifles and machine guns is impossible, as the workers are fired upon and have been in many cases killed or wounded.

The general state of affairs in the whole Netze region has aroused passions on both sides which it is impossible to exaggerate. There are strong Polish forces on the other side there are German troops, and the people, too, are armed.

U. S. STOPS LOVE SONGS OF POTE SENT BY MAIL

Life as it seems to me,
From start to end,
Is just a chance to be
Some lady's friend.
—Charles E. Munce.

Michigan has developed a new pote, rival of the Indianian who wrote "The Wreck on the Monon."

Charles E. Munce, 48 years of age, a bachelor employed by the Duplex Press Manufacturing company and living at 28 Holland street, Battle Creek, is the Michigander genius whose future has been somewhat curtailed by Gen. James E. Stuart, chief postoffice inspector in Chicago.

Gen. Stuart yesterday obtained Munce's promise he would desist from addressing his songs to Chicago women by mail, owing to the embarrassment it occasioned the recipients and their husbands.

'MEN WITHOUT A STATE' BACK IN CITY FROM WAR

Three Hundred Expatriated Blackhawks Arrive from Camp.

Three hundred expatriated Blackhawks, the hard-hitting and long-suffering Illinois backbone of regiments in Virginia's famous Blue Ridge combat division, came home yesterday.

It sounded like a riot and looked like a cyclone when the Chicago and Illinois fighting men tumbled into Chicago yards of the Burlington railroad. After eighteen months of exile and a heart-breaking wait for orders moving them from Camp Lee, Va., they put on a new war of their own with Chicago as the main objective. Their cars, they said, were "too near the Mason and Dixon line" in the race for discharge. So they climbed aboard the engine pilot to be first in on the homecoming.

"Original Hard Luck Gang."

"We're the original hard luck gang of the world war," declared Sergt. H. L. Pfaff, 3245 Ridgeway avenue—"lordy! Look there. That street car out there is headed right into the loop, lucky street car! As I was saying, we left the loop for Camp Grant and found it right nice.

"Everybody in the Blackhawk division hit the ball hard those days to make an Illinois outfit the state would be proud of. Then they kidnaped us and sent us to Camp Lee as replacements for the Blue Ridge division, and say, those folks evened up on us for all that was left over from the civil war. We were tickled to death when we got into the Argonne with nothing but a few boches to handle.

Sent Down South Again.

"Everybody got so sick for the sight or sound of Illinois that a home paper was worth a month's pay. Instead of shooting us back home when it was all over, they shipped us in to Newport News and then to Virginia. Of course we were the last on the discharge list."

Sergt. Samuel C. Vail of 1001 Sheridan road, Evanston, fell into the arms of his waiting family when the train arrived and shared the contents of a hamper of homecoming food with his buddies. Among the other Chicago men in the contingent were H. G. Rundquist of 5488 Blackstone avenue and Ben Hersh of 2329 West Rice street.

TRAPPED, PLEADS SHE STEALS TO KEEP CHILDREN

"I'm Mrs. Frederick Olsen of 516 East Forty-seventh street, and this woman tried to snatch my purse," announced one of two women encountered by Policeman Edward Brockow of the traffic squad yesterday afternoon in Van Buren, near State street.

At the Central detail station the accused woman said she was Mrs. Katherine Golden, 42 years old, and that she was compelled to pick pockets and steal purses to support her two children, who live at the Bangor hotel, Eighteenth street and Indiana avenue. She matriculated in her profession at Cleveland, she said.

She will be arraigned tomorrow morning in the South Clark street court. The complainant said later that her name was not Olsen, but had used this name because she did not wish publicity. She did not give her [illegible] name.

The woman under arrest is said to be the wife of a prominent Chicago lawyer.

MEMORIAL FOR OUR DEAD TO BE BUILT IN ARRAS

Within a week American contractors will sail for France to begin the construction of the $200,000 American Memorial hospital to be erected in Arras in tribute to those who fell on the field of action, according to announcement made yesterday by Mrs. Benjamin Lathrop, president of the American Fund for French Wounded, who has made a tour of the United States raising subscriptions for the memorial.

Mrs. Lathrop addressed delegates from many women's civic bodies at the home of Mrs. Russell Tyson, 20 East Goethe street. It is the plan of the women's organizations to raise sufficient funds to endow at least one bed in the hospital in memory of Chicago's fallen heroes. The endowment of this bed will be in addition to the endowments already made by relatives of A. Courtney Campbell, member of the famous Lafayette escadrille, and Mrs. Wallace Winter in memory of her son, another Chicago aviator killed in France.

Of the hundred beds of which the hospital will consist seventy have been endowed and as soon as subscriptions have been obtained for the remaining beds Mrs. Lathrop will return to France to superintend the construction and opening of the hospital. The memorial will be devoted to the caring of French children of the Arras area.

CHICAGOANS AND FIRST REAL WAR BABY RETURN

Newport News, Va., June 7.—Chicagoans in the 315th, 357th, and 359th infantry (90th division), heroes of St. Mihiel and the Meuse, Argonne, arrived today on the transports Huron and Wilhelmina, proudly proclaiming themselves godfathers of the first baby born in the American expeditionary force.

The infant came back on the transport Huron, swinging in a hammock like the husky tars who brought him, his mother, and his father safely home. The baby's father is Top Sergt. James Conway of Philadelphia, 6th marines, hero of Chateau Thierry and Belleau Wood. His mother is a young French woman, whom the sergeant met, wooed, and wed while in France. The baby is the first ever to come through this port.

Chicagoans in the 359th pointed with pride to Capt. L. C. Davison of Company A, winner of the D. S. C., croix de guerre, and medal of the Legion of Honor.

SEEK MISSING RETIRED BROKER.

Capt. Max Nootbaar of the Hyde Park station was asked yesterday to search for Herbert Harris, 72 years old, reputed to be a wealthy retired broker, who disappeared from the Hyde Park hotel, where he lived, on June 5. The request was made by Harris' nephew, A. W. Hobson, 5328 Dorchester avenue.

LAST GUARDS AND NATIONAL ARMY MEN QUIT FRANCE

Sixth Division Begins the Movement Home of Regulars.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Homeward movement of national guard and national army combat units from France is complete, Chief of Staff March announced today, all units having embarked for this country.

The movement of regulars has begun, Gen. March stated. The 6th division began its sailing this week.

The army, Gen. March said, was 68 per cent demobilized June 5. In France there remain 494,745 officers and men.

Records Broken in May.

All embarkation records were broken in May, he said. Sailings from France totaled 333,383.

Enlistments in the regular army to date total 46,023 men. These figures do not include enlistments at army camps this week.

Since the recruiting campaign started five battalions of troops, totaling 4,929, have sailed for France to replace emergency men in regular army units.

Men for Siberia.

Replacements for the emergency men in Siberia will be made from men who have not asked for service in any special place. Gen. March said he expected no difficulty in solving the problem of obtaining the 10,000 men necessary for replacements in the Siberian expedition.

"The Siberian problem is a problem by itself," Gen. March said, "and the war department will be in a position to solve it. In the general list of figures you will note the places to which the men wish to be sent:

France	10,219	Panama	154
Siberia	40	Honolulu	1,336
Philippines	2,046	Alaska	24

"Those who have specified their place of service aggregate about 14,000 out of the 50,000. We have, therefore, 36,000 men who enlisted without saying to what place they wish to be sent, and of course, they will go where they are sent. In the meantime, the option continues for those who wish to enlist to specify their place of service."

Gen. March gave figures which showed that in the recent A. E. F. rifle matches the lowest score made by a man using the Springfield rifle was higher than the highest score made by substitute Enfields.

WAR FIRES BURN OUT STAIN ON ROBBER'S SOUL

"Million Dollar Burglar" Returns to the City as Wounded Hero.

War's an ugly game that kills and maims and makes cripples of men; it's a hard game on the bodies of men, but it makes their souls as white as the snow and as big as cosmos. Wherefore a reincarnated "Ike" Kaminsky—ah, Sergt. Isaac Kaminsky, if you please—has come back from the battlefields—back to Chicago whence he fled "because there's no place here for a man with a burglar's record."

You remember the "million dollar burglar's trust?" Perhaps you do, hazily. May be, you recall how the papers printed stories about State's Attorney Hoyne putting it out of business and sending its members to the penitentiary. But the chances are that your memory isn't long on such things, so to refresh your recollection——

Settles in Ghetto.

Ike Kaminsky came to Chicago fifteen years ago a thin, hungry Russian Jew boy who couldn't speak more than fifty words of the English language. He settled in the ghetto district, where the boys hang around the poolrooms at night and take lessons in the art of picking pockets from smooth, shifty-eyed, sharp-faced young men, and tales of night prowling and second story work are boastfully told.

Ike met the gang first at the corner mailbox where they drop their letters to their pals at Joliet. They appraised him, bought him a feed, and he became good timber in their hands.

We next meet Ikie as the leader of the "million dollar burglar trust." This was about four years ago. The police surprised the gang—five of them—in a "job" one ill-starred night and hauled them in.

Paroled to Rabbi.

The story of their confessions, their trial and conviction is written on the credit side of the record of State's Attorney Hoyne. Ike turned state's evidence. For this he was paroled not long after he went to the penitentiary to Dr. Rudolph I. Coffee of Temple Judea, who has faith in what the cloth calls the "fallen" even though they fell.

Ike came back to Chicago with Dr. Coffee. He tried hard to make things go, but soon he went to his friend and told him goodby.

He went to Pittsburgh. For a few weeks he worked in the steel mills there, and then the United States entered the world war.

Gassed at Chateau Thierry.

Kaminsky enlisted. He became a private in the 59th infantry, regular army, in July, 1917. In March, 1918, he was overseas and at the front. He was "missing in action" at Chateau Thierry and reported dead. The truth of it was that he was badly gassed and so he wasn't released from the hospital until Sept. 26. Then he was sent to Brest to take charge of German prisoners of war. Yesterday he came back to Chicago—discharged.

"I want to see now that Sergt. Kaminsky is placed in a good position," said Rabbi Coffee last night. "I have the best of recommendations for him. One of his officers wrote me that he was placed in charge of the German prisoners because he displayed 'remarkable executive ability. He's my boy and he's gone through a fire that whitens the soul and cleanses the heart.'"

"Please be careful what you write about me," the sergeant said. "In the old days I didn't care what the papers said about me and I felt proud when they called me a 'million dollar burglar.' But Dr. Coffee has taught me better now and I feel bad about my past."

GIRL SUES FOR $50,000 BALM FROM BROKER

Claiming that Frank Marshall Kattenstroth, a wealthy Chicago horseman and broker, with offices at 29 South La Salle street, has refused to make good his promise to marry her, Doris Hutchinson, 24 years old, of Philadelphia, filed a $50,000 breach of promise suit against Kattenstroth yesterday.

According to the story told by Frank C. Hill, who is representing Miss Hutchinson, she came to Chicago two and one half years ago to become a moving picture actress. At that time she met Kattenstroth, who finally dissuaded her from this idea, the attorney said.

"After a time he proposed marriage," Hill continued, and Miss Hutchinson, thinking no wrong in it, did not object when he introduced her to his friends as his wife.

"Kattenstroth advanced her money recently to meet a bill at the Great Northern hotel. Now he says he can not marry her, as he has a wife. Miss Hutchinson has letters that show Kattenstroth's sentiments towards her and his intentions to marry her."

Miss Hutchinson rode Kattenstroth's entry at the South Shore Country club horse show some time ago. She is said to be a niece of Gen. Ben Inness of the British South African army.

U. S. Citizens Ask Billion of Germany for Damages

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Claims of American citizens against Germany because of submarine warfare and the action of the German government against American property in that country aggregate nearly $1,000,000,000, congress was informed today by Acting Secretary Polk. The claims growing out of submarine warfare alone aggregate $600,000,000, Mr. Polk said, and claims on other accounts are constantly reaching the department.

A. W. O. L. TO SEE WIFE; WHAT FOR? ONLY TO KILL HER!

The major was very busy.

So were other officers at central department headquarters, where after war tangles of the middle west are unraveled. But the major was not too busy to see and interview the longest, best natured, and blackest soldier of all the nondescript company waiting to tell why they were absent from various posts without leave.

"Boy," said the major. "What do you mean by sneaking away from camp?"

"Yas, sah," said the culprit. "All 'em officers in Camp Grant like me a lot, yassah. Ah don't like to bothah 'em with askin' 'em for no pass, so ah just come long to Chicago 'thout botherin' 'em at all. Come in to see mah family and mah wife."

"Well. you chase back to Camp Grant and report yourself, and the next time it's going hard with you—whoa. Wait a minute. Boy, what's that you got in your hind pocket—what, a Colt .44. Where did you get that gun, and what you carrying it for?"

"That gun, sah? O yes; that li'l gun. Y'see ah borrow that from a frien' of mine."

"What are you going to do with it? Give it here."

"Me? Yassah. O ah wuz goin' to shoot mah wife. We's had some trouble!"

FAT POLICE AND FAT POLICE JOBS PUT UNDER BAN

Aldermen Want More Work Done by the Department.

No more too fat cops.

No more first and second deputies in the police department.

No more "passing the buck."

The city council committee which has been studying the police department for weeks is determined to shatter it to bits and then remold it.

"Make the chief the sole and responsible head of the department," suggested Ald. Walter P. Steffen, chairman of the committee. "Abolish the offices of first and second deputy, with their ordinance prescribed duties. Make them assistants to the chief. Put promotion on a merit basis. Establish age and weight limits. These are some of the things we propose to do.

Need New Ordinance.

"The whole police reorganization ordinance should be rewritten, made more up to date, and more suitable to conditions as they now exist. From the start there have been many flaws and inequalities in the ordinance which should be smoothed out.

"I believe also that we have too many commanding officers. We have a larger percentage of officers on our police force than any large city in America. The ratio is something like one officer above the rank of patrolman to five patrolmen. This should be done with the end in view of increasing the number of men on the street traveling post.

Real Detectives Wanted.

"The detective bureau is another branch of the department that should be reorganized. The reorganization here should be along scientific lines. It is here that crimes of magnitude and mystery cases come for solution. Men with scientific minds should be placed in the detective bureau; men who could go at these matters in a scientific way, and not by the old method of getting at crime and criminals through 'stool pigeon' and third degree methods.

"Promotion in the department should be based solely on merit. A daily record should be kept of the doings of each officer and his efficiency based on it, so that promotions, demotions, and removals, as the case may be, could be made. There is no promotion scheme in the department today on the basis of achievement, with the result that the departmental morale has been nearly destroyed. It should be what a man does that would entitle him to the higher place, not whom he knows.

Wants Captains Responsible.

"The captain of each district should be held responsible for every crime committed therein. Records here should be kept also.

"An age limit for retirements should be definitely established. This is a question open to debate, but I would say 62 years, for instance, the army age limit. Men who for any reason are suspected of being physically or mentally incapable of holding their jobs should be subjected to examinations every six months to determine their fitness."

The investigation of the committee has disclosed that there are now many men on the department too old for active duty. For this reason Chairman Steffen will prepare an amendment to the present ordinance embodying his ideas.

ALDERMAN MEETS JUDGE WHO BELIEVES IN GUN ORDINANCE

ALD. ULYSSES S. SCHWARTZ of the Third ward appeared before Judge Dennis W. Sullivan of the Hyde Park Municipal court yesterday and pleaded for clemency in the case of William P. Elles, colored chauffeur for Dr. Samuel L. Weber, 4336 Grand boulevard, who was arraigned on a charge of carrying concealed weapons. Judge Dennis W. Sullivan heard the alderman's plea.

"Let me see," he commented, "Aren't you one of the aldermen who voted to increase the fine for carrying concealed weapons from $100 to $200?"

"Yes, your honor, I voted for the measure," said the alderman.

"And didn't you also join with other aldermen in their attack on the judges for being lenient with gun toters and other criminals?"

"Yes."

Then the judge set Elles' fine at $200, but later granted a continuance.

"This continuance doesn't mean I have changed my mind," the judge said. "I intend to stand pat on my decision whether the case is decided today or next year."

60,000 CALLED OUT ON JUNE 11 FOR WIRE STRIKE

Western Union Officials and Others Doubt Menace.

Sixty thousand telegraph and telephone workers throughout the United States, members of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, have been ordered out on strike June 11 by S. J. Konenkamp, the international president. The order was issued yesterday afternoon. Information is conflicting as to how far the order will be obeyed.

Over 3,000 Western Union operators were called out several days ago in the southeastern portion of the country, but it is not known how generally this was put into effect.

The original demands of the union were for more pay, better hours, better working conditions, and the right of collective bargaining. The start of the strike was in protest against the discharge of telephone operators in Atlanta, Ga., from that to a fight on the Western Union.

Others May Go Out.

Mr. Konenkamp says he expects the electrical workers and other wire employés will also strike.

Originally intended to be directed at the wire administration under Postmaster General Albert S. Burleson, the strike now appears to be directed at the Western Union company, although the Postal Telegraph company, the American Telegraph and Telephone company, the Mackay Cable company, and the North American company and all associated lines and wires are involved.

About 4,000 telegraph and telephone workers in Chicago will go out, according to Secretary Campbell, but Chicago officials of the wire companies deny the claims of the unions.

Western Union Undisturbed.

"The Western Union would like to assure the public that there will be no delay in handling their messages," said Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union in New York. "The small number of union employés who obey the strike call will not affect our service." Mr. Carlton added that the company had questioned all its employés and that only 147 out of the 8,000 in the territory to which the strike was to be extended had replied they would walk out. These had been discharged, Mr. Carlton said.

Evan T. Jones, chief operator for the Western Union, said last night that his company here was not interested or involved.

B. E. Sunny, president of the Chicago Telephone company, gave out a statement some time ago that the telephone girls did not belong to the union and would not strike.

Claim Railway Aid.

The union men say the railway telegraphers are a different organization, but would refuse to handle commercial business because they are said to have passed a resolution in St. Louis at their recent convention that such business would be banned in case of a strike.

President Konenkamp left Washington Friday night on his way to Chicago, but stopped off yesterday in Pittsburgh. He is due to arrive in Chicago this morning. He will direct the strike from here.

Konenkamp's Statement.

"We will win the fight," said Konenkamp in a special telegram from Pittsburgh to THE TRIBUNE last night.

"The strike of commercial telegraphers scheduled for next Wednesday will determine whether grievances of long standing can be remedied by force. Peaceful means of adjusting our grievances have been sought for nearly a year. Mr. Burleson has said no union worker should be discriminated against, but when we complained of discrimination Mr. Burleson said we were a lot of agitators.

"Mr. Burleson has said we are underpaid. But, he then turned around and inaugurated customs which reduced our earning power further. Mr. Burleson promised last August that every one who has been discharged by Newcomb Carlton of the Western Union for membership in our union would be reinstated.

"Now Mr. Burleson turns the management of the Western Union back to Mr. Carlton, while these men Carlton discharged are still waiting for Burleson to keep his word.

Assails Carlton.

"Mr. Carlton says it is unfair to discriminate against union workers, but it was the Western Union discrimination that brought about government control and is now bringing about this strike.

"Leased wire and broker operators have not been called at the present time. It is to be determined later when they will be called.

"Telephone operators will be ordered to strike throughout the country on June 16. At this time it is expected that the electrical workers will also be called out."

ALD. CAPITAIN ACTS TO SPEED TRACTION BILLS

Resolutions will be introduced into the council Monday by Ald. Henry D. Capitain, chairman of the local transportation committee, urging that body to go on record as requesting the legislature to enact traction legislation.

"The four bills," said Ald. Capitain in a statement, "if enacted at this session will enable the city to negotiate a settlement with the transportation companies. These bills were up for consideration in the utilities committee of the house Wednesday. The city was criticised for coming in at such a late date. This, however, was successfully met by the fact the bills had to be worked out and adopted by the new council.

"If the city fails at this time to have this legislation enacted it will mean a delay of at least three years."

His resolution concludes as follows:

"Resolved, by the city council of the city of Chicago, that the members of the fifty-first general assembly, and particularly those representing districts located within and adjacent to the City of Chicago, be respectfully requested to do their utmost to secure the passage of this necessary legislation."

GOODRICH COMPANY STOCK INCREASE.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—The stock exchange has received notice from the B. F. Goodrich company of the proposed increase in capital stock from $84,600,000 to $109,600,000 by the issuance of $25,000,000 preferred stock.

A. F. OF L. TO BAR DEBS; SEE FIGHT ON PROHIBITION

Atlantic City, N. J., June 7.—[Special.]—Organized labor today repudiated Eugene Debs and all other agitators who were convicted of efforts to embarrass selective draft law. A resolution appealing for clemency for Debs precipitated a storm in the convention this afternoon of the metal trades department of the American Federation of Labor. An overwhelming vote proved the hopelessness of reviving the controversy. It is expected that a similar defeat awaits the radicals in the general convention next week.

Followers of President Gompers point out that today's action is a certain indication that the radical element opposing him will have no weight at the convention.

Two millions stronger in membership than when America entered the world war, the American Federation of Labor will go into general conventions here on Monday. A demand for government action against all forms of profiteering in food products is a certain development of the convention. One of the biggest battles in the convention in all probability will center upon the prohibition question.

Left "Waiting at Church" Girl Sues for $50,000

Miss Rosie Marie Lietz of 2991 North Lawndale avenue, filed suit for $50,000 in the Superior court yesterday against Lonie Boyd Williamson of Columbia, S. C., alleging breach of promise to marry.

According to Ernest Stout, attorney for Rosie Marie, this is how it happened:

Miss Lietz was engaged in war work when, on March 25, 1919, she was introduced to Williamson. A whirlwind courtship followed and the wedding was set for June 4, 1919. On that date the bride to be, the clergyman, and wedding guests waited in vain for the groom to appear.

MURDER TRIAL OF SEA CAPTAIN AND SON ENDED

New York, June 7.—Capt. Adolph C. Pedersen, skipper of the barkentine Puako, who is being tried here in the federal court, with his younger son, on a charge of murder on the high seas in connection with the death of Axel Hansen, a seaman, admitted today under cross-examination that he did not order his crew to pull in a line to which Hansen is said to have clung after leaping into the sea. Pedersen said he saw at the end of the line "only spray."

After he had admitted having had one quarrel with Hansen on the voyage Capt. Pedersen repeated his contention that it was impossible to turn his ship around to pick up Hansen, because of the gale he said was raging. Capt. John H. Cameron declared the Puako could have put back to Hansen's rescue.

Edwin E. Baldwin, William H. Box, and Harry F. Glaze, Los Angeles policemen, were called by the defense to testify that Hansen had been "an I. W. W. agitator of the worst type" and had advocated "destruction of ships and cargoes." The defense had claimed that Hansen attempted to start a mutiny.

The trial ended late today. Judge Hough told the jury it could find young Pedersen guilty of second degree murder and Capt. Pedersen guilty of manslaughter.

BOY SEES FATHER, FORMER CAPTAIN, KILL HIS MOTHER

St. Paul, Minn., June 7.—Dr. J. M. A. Gravelle, St. Paul physician, recently discharged from the army, in which he held a commission as captain in the medical corp, is held by the police, charged with shooting and killing his wife at their home here today.

The shooting occurred shortly after 1 p. m. A 16 year old boy, son of the couple, according to the police, witnessed the shooting.

Mrs. Gravelle died at a hospital shortly after she was removed there.

CRIMES TRAIL IN WAKE OF POLICE ON CITY CLEANUP

Store Robbed, Girl Hit by Pirate Auto as 200 Hunt Crooks.

With 200 of Chicago's best police out all over the city on the hunt for vagrants, suspicious characters and known criminals of all kinds last night—

A colored man got off his bicycle, robbed the Walgreen durg store, 3900 Cottage Grove avenue, obtained nearly $400, and wheeled away again.

A big black automobile, believed to have been stolen, speeding north in Lincoln avenue without lights, struck Miss Alma Odin, 26 years old, 4247 Lincoln avenue, rushed over her, and hurried on. Her brother, Eugene A. Odin, a former pilot in the air service, took her to Ravenswood hospital. Her shoulder is broken and her legs and ankles are fractured.

Send 200 on Cleanup.

The 200 men who were mobilized from all the police stations in the city were given instructions by Chief of Detectives Mooney and William A. Luthardt, secretary to Chief Garrity, and then sent out.

They were to make arrests of vagrants, especially after 10 o'clock, Luthardt said, "so the judges couldn't stall."

"Arrest a vag after 10 o'clock in a saloon or poolroom," he said, "and the judges can't keep away from the fact that he is a vag. Search everybody for weapons.

"You've all got descriptions of the cars stolen during the last twenty-four hours and their numbers. Be on the watch for them. Shoot if you have to. Clean up. Fill the cellrooms downstairs. The crooks have to be put under lock and key."

Hunt Murder Suspect.

The squad, consisting of Chief Mooney, Lieut. Michael Hughes, and Detectives Birmingham and Winge, went among other places to Dunkel's saloon, Twelfth and Wood streets. They had information Tom O'Connor, wanted for the murder of Dennis Tierney, special policeman at the I. C. station, who was shot a little more than a year ago, might be there. He wasn't. But the police raided the house back of the saloon and arrested three men and a woman.

Eighty detectives went out in automobiles, four to a car, most of the autos having been loaned by members of the police reserve. The others went on foot, each squad assigned to certain districts, with orders to visit especially all saloons, poolrooms, and tough dance halls.

At midnight the 200 had landed fifteen men in jail.

Seize $1,800 Pay Roll.

Eighteen hundred dollars pay roll money was obtained by three bandits during the day at the Perfection Bedding company, 2501 West Forty-eighth street. The money was for employés of that and a subsidiary concern, the Illinois Silk company.

The bandits used an automobile stolen from Benno F. Nell of 4836 Dorchester avenue, president of the Allbright-Nell Machinery Manufacturing company, 5315 Western avenue. They entered the offices of the bedding company while J. B. Clark, president, and W. F. Hoest, vice president and cashier, were in their private office.

One of the bandits held them prisoner.

Austrian Army Captain Sentenced to Die as Spy

PARIS, France, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Capt. Funck of the Austrian army has been tried and sentenced to death as a spy by a secret court martial here. It appears that Capt. Funck was in Paris before the war began and remained in the city throughout the hostilities, and it was alleged at the trial that he made the enemy acquainted with information regarding air raids.

DANIELS FLAILS THE OFFICIALS OF NAVY LEAGUE

Secretary Says That Leaders Are Guilty of Deceit.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—Testifying before the house naval affairs committee today, Secretary Daniels denounced the officials and members of the Navy league, characterizing them "as much an enemy of the country as any anarchist," and asserting that he would not recognize the organization or allow it to take part in any naval activities while he is secretary of the navy.

This arraignment was provoked by Representative Fred Britten of Illinois asking whether the bar which Mr. Daniels placed on the league as the result of charges regarding the Mare island fire should not be lifted.

"The Navy league is capable of doing a great welfare work in the navy," Mr. Britten said, "and it would be glad to do it if the bar was removed. Inasmuch as the country needs to save all the money it possibly can, don't you think it would be wise to recognize the organization?"

"Men Guilty of Infamy."

"Never," Mr. Daniels replied, emphasizing his determination by pounding the table. "These men were as guilty of infamy as any man arrested during the war, and they should be accorded the treatment they deserve. While I am secretary of the navy they can never have anything to do with the navy.

"In the midst of war, this organization issued a formal statement," added Mr. Daniels, "that was a false and infamous slander on one of the best men in the navy, charging him, at the instigation of labor organizations, with committing a crime. After the explosion at Mare island they accused me of shielding the men responsible and conducting a half-hearted investigation. It was a base lie, and those who said it realized it was a lie."

"But the organization has changed," interjected Mr. Britten. "The officials are different men. Why should they be held responsible for something others did?"

"Expert on Camouflage."

"I am an expert on camouflage," replied the secretary. "And I can see through camouflage of that organization. Besides, we do not need a league to help us which gives prominence to men in it for personal glory.

"We do not want any sideshows that stab us in the back. The league of which President Wilson is president and of which I am an executive is all the show we need. Nor do we want a wet nurse to the navy. The people of the country are behind the navy and we do not need this organization."

The naval affairs committee expects to complete the naval bill early next week. Following out the policy of retrenchment decided upon by the steering committee, the committee will make radical reductions in the expenditures of the navy. It is estimated that the personnel of the navy will be reduced to 200,000 and that of the marine corps to 27,000.

MANY LEADS, NO ARRESTS OF REDS

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—Although, according to Chief William J. Flynn, there are a hundred leads in connection with the recent bomb outrages, there is no prospect now of immediate action, either in the way of arrests or in a roundup of radicals. The hope now lies in the chance of unearthing something by keeping a strict watch on the known radicals.

As a precautionary measure a list is being made of all the persons who may have incurred the enmity of the radicals, in the discharge of their official duties or otherwise, and a careful watch is to be kept on their homes.

Special precautions will be taken on Tuesday, which is the anniversary of the execution of the anarchist Ravachol, who threw a bomb into the French chamber of deputies. Ravachol was guillotined on June 10, 1892.

The reds have frequently observed the anniversary of his death by the use of dynamite, and there is a picture of his crime which many reds like to keep and look at. Abano and Carbone, the two men convicted in connection with the St. Patrick's explosion in 1915, had copies of this picture.

STELK BARS $25 CASH BONDS AS SPEEDERS DODGE

Slipping a cash bond of $25 to desk sergeants by speed maniacs is to be brought to a sudden halt by Judge Stelk. This action has in many instances kept the offenders from appearance in court, they preferring to allow the deposit to go by default.

William Luthardt, private secretary to the chief of police, was sent for yesterday by the judge and in open court requested to issue an order to all desk sergeants not to accept cash bonds of less than $100 hereafter.

"Too many offenders have been guilty of making no court appearance, preferring to allow their cash bonds of $25 to be confiscated," Judge Stelk said to Luthardt. "On Monday I will have a certain sergeant before me because he disregarded the advice of a motorcycle policeman and accepted such a bond from a speeder who was making thirty-eight miles an hour.

KEEP AMERICA FREE OF BRITAIN, PLEA OF IRISH

Resolutions Oppose Nations League as Framed by England.

Justice Daniel F. Cohalan's welcome by the committee of 100 for an Irish republic at a dinner at the Chicago Athletic association last night was prefaced by stout resolutions denouncing Great Britain.

"We set ourselves to preserve America and American institutions against the influence of native and foreign tories and traitors whose design is to make America subservient to Great Britain" was one striking clause, another expressing opposition to the league of nations, as a "document framed by England."

Judge Cohalan's response to his greeting was no more brusque in speaking of Great Britain than was Judge Kickham Scanlan's welcome.

"No other nation except England would think of opposing a free Ireland," declared Judge Scanlan. "Lord Northcliffe has done the propaganda work, his influence having been extended more and more.

Praise for Senate.

"That was a revolution yesterday," said Judge Scanlan, speaking of the senate's resolution for Irish freedom, and at another point he said: "The great problem is not only a free Ireland, it is whether this country shall remain free or become a vassal of Great Britain. There is a conspiracy against the liberty of America. The financiers are using their money to the advantage of England and against the advantage of the United States. Why, a short time ago the head of the New York Life Insurance company told a bankers' convention in Chicago that this country would be better off if we were again in the position we were before the revolution! And to this day no United States official has mentioned indicting him, though he should be hanged for treason."

Says U. S. Is Awake.

"Our duty is to insist on a free Ireland," said Justice Cohalan, in response, "because we can do no greater duty to America.

"If this pact known as the league of nations goes through it means that the American revolution has been defeated.

"But after all I do not despair American liberty—the American people are awake to the fact that English friendship was pretense for the most part, the part of their game—what we know as bunk.

"That resolution in the senate indicates what America thought, and as for the one who voted against that resolution I am glad he did. I refer to Senator John Sharp Williams, who opposed the measure.

"But I want to congratulate Chicago especially on having Gov. Dunne as a member of the Irish delegation sent to the peace conference and to Ireland. He did most admirably. There was little impression, so Mr. Ryan told me, while they were in Ireland when he was introduced as Gov. Dunne, for the governors over there run only prisons. But when he was brought out as a former lord mayor of Chicago he was the only member they wished to hear."

Naval Ensign Marries Daughter of Brooklyn Family.

Ensign and Mrs. Albert Merritt Billings

The wedding of Ensign Albert Merritt Billings, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings of New York and Santa Barbara, and Miss Margaret Shaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Guthrie Shaw of Brooklyn, N. Y., took place yesterday at Holy Trinity church, Brooklyn.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Erskine C. Paris, as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were: Mrs. Guthrie Shaw, Miss Priscilla Murdock, Miss Zorka Polak, and Miss Mona Keene, all of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Miss Florence Lowden of Springfield, Ill.; Miss Marion Cheney of South Manchester, Conn.; Miss Caroline Stieman of Lancaster, Pa.; Mrs. Edwin Stroh of Grosse Point, Mich.

Mr. Billings was attended by Lieut. Commander John Latham, U. S. N., as best man, and the ushers were Albert H. Cornell, Caleb Bragg, Archibald MacLeish, H. H. Ramsey, Frank Blossom, Dwight Weiman, Wilson Foss, George Bourne, Frank Jefferson, and Robert De Vechhi.

HERE'S TEST OF VAUDEVILLE; TRY IT ON THE JUDGE

Enter actor. Sings a mock ballad; in the chorus of the song the drummer in the pit rings cowbells, etc., breaking actor up so he cannot continue.

Actor—Stop! [Going over to drummer.] Say, what in the world are you trying to do?

Drummer—I'm helping you drive the cows from the pasture.

Actor—I don't need any of your help; what are you trying to do, spoil my act?

Drummer—No, I was putting a little comedy in it for you.

Etc., etc.

The above is taken from a petition filed in the United States District court yesterday by Attorney Leslie A. Gilmore, representing William A. Foster, "team of Foster & Foster, y'no." Mr. Foster seeks to have the court issue an injunction restraining the team of Ross & Ross from "stealing his stuff," as he alleges.

It's not an ordinary suit for infringement of copyright, by which Mr. Foster alleges his act to be doubly protected, but it's the idea, you see. Actor being interupted by trap drummer, argument, and a lot of snappy repartee between the pair. Get the idea?

CHICAGO SINN FEINERS HISS WILSON'S NAME

Cohalan Forced to Quiet the Crowd at the Auditorium.

the God given right they will fight 700 years more. Every other white race has its freedom. Why not the Irish?"

Refers to Japan.

His comment on the Asiatic situation was received in a contrasting silence to the shouts which greeted every reference to Ireland.

"Japan, England's greatest ally, has become the second greatest power in the world since the start of the war because of England's protection," declared the judge. "She was given 40,000,000 people of Shantung, 15,000,000 of Corea—why? Because England wanted her to have them.

"Give the Japanese five or six years and what will he have there when you consider that the little brown man is the best military tutor? Especially when experts say that the Chinese of Shantung are the best of military material."

To the self-proposed question of why some of the prominent Irish in Ireland are content with British government, Judge Cohalan advanced the British pay argument used by the Sinn Fein.

Hints at Venality.

"Why shouldn't they, when you consider that the president of the United States draws only $75,000 a year, but that the lord lieutenant of Ireland gets $125,000?"

Other salaries of Irish officials in British pay compared with this illustration, he pointed out.

"England made $250,000,000 from Ireland in the year preceding the war," he continued. "Of this $105,000,000 was in the form of taxation. The remainder represented the profit of Irish commerce with other countries, all of which had to be handled through England."

Says Taxes Are Unfair.

He pointed out that the act of the union, under which Ireland pays its taxation, was reported unfair to the Biritish government by their own representatives years ago, but that no action has ever been taken by the British government for its repeal, despite the heavy overtaxation admitted.

"Who is going to stand in the way of England's aspirations for world domination except the people who first felt her oppression?" was a question that brought a storm of cheers.

"England's possession of the press, magazines, and her force of diplomats, which she has sent to every corner of the world, have made her the power she is today."

Mayor Reads Welcome.

Mayor Thompson, in his welcome address, read from prepared notes, explained that he was present as "your mayor to welcome the distinguished speaker."

"I am here to say a few words in sympathy and apprecation of the part played by the Irish people of America in the great conflict," said Mayor Thompson. He proceeded then to read his welcome talk, laudatory of all Irish and things Irish and then retired to his seat beside the Very Rev. F. X. McCabe, who joined in lustily in the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," which followed. It was observed that the mayor was not "in voice."

PEACE JUBILEE LACKS PEACE AND JUBILEE

Had Herr Erzberger signed his name on the dotted line, some one besides the backers themselves might have attended the Charity Peace jubilee at Riverview park yesterday afternoon. The outlined object of the jubilee was to celebrate the signing of the peace treaty and "to promote good will and strengthen the unity among all classes of Americans and forget whatever rancor and animosity we may have felt."

"We were a little premature in setting the date for the jubilee," said Judge John Steik, explaining the lack of attendance at the park picnic grounds. "There is no jubilee because as yet we have nothing to be jubilant about," he said. The judge is chairman of the program committee.

Most of the committeemen said that they were not downhearted over the failure of a crowd to show up, and predicted a large attendance at the jubilee this afternoon. Mayor William Hale Thompson, Congressman William Mason, and Ernest E. Cole, assistant superintendent of schools are announced as speakers for this afternoon.

DUNNE REPORT CLAIMS TROOPS MURDER IRISH

Says That Cruelties Have Taken Place in the Jails.

PARIS, June 7.—[By the Associated Press.]—Within the last few months at least ten citizens have been killed in Ireland by soldiers or constables under circumstances found by coroner's juries to have been willful murder.

This charge is made in the report on observations made in Ireland by Frank P. Walsh, Michael J. Ryan, and Edward F. Dunne, delegates of the Irish societies in the United States.

The report, which was made public tonight, was sent to President Wilson, along with the demand that the peace conference investigate the Irish question.

Charge Atrocities in Jails.

Numerous and specific charges of atrocities committed in Irish jails are contained in the document. Charges are made that hundreds of men and women were put in prison without any specific accusations being made against them. The document says that at least five men died as a result of atrocities in prisons and that many prisoners are confined in cells of inadequate size and given insufficient and unwholesome food.

It also is alleged in the report that punitive measures of the prison authorities included drenching with water, in which the prisoners were obliged to remain all night in unheated cells, bringing on pneumonia. Solitary confinement and withholding of rations also is charged.

Hundreds Sent to Jail.

It is stated further that the heads of hundreds of families were sent to jail or deported, leaving dependent women and children without means of support and to become objects of charity.

The report says that Messrs. Walsh, Ryan, and Dunne visited Ireland with the assurance from Premier Lloyd George that they would be given full freedom to investigate.

GIRL FALLS FROM SPEEDING TRAIN WHEN LOCKED UP

Miss Jennie Johnson of Gibson City, Ill., sustained a fracture of the skull and internal injuries when she fell from the Olympian, a limited train of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, yesterday morning at Cicero and Pensacola avenues.

She had entered a dressing room and the conductor locked the door as the train approached the city limits. She attempted to attract attention by rapping on the door. No one came to her assistance. She then opened the window of the compartment and attempted to make her way to the next window, which opened into the coach proper. She lost her grip and fell.

Residents saw her and notified the police. She was removed to St. Anne's hospital, 4900 Thomas street, and regained consciousness long enough to tell her story. She is not expected to live. Her father arrived from Gibson City last night.

Volunteer Taxi Driver Injures Fare; Arrested

Joseph Frank, 1442 Jackson boulevard, left his cab at Madison and Halsted streets and went to get a shave. William Penrose, 2524 Blaine place, his wife, and Peter Blavat, 1014 West Monroe street, wanted to go to La Salle and Madison streets. Isadore Marks, 2620 Potomac avenue, sitting at the wheel of Frank's taxi, volunteered to drive.

He stopped the cab with a jerk to avoid hitting a street car. Penrose fell against a cab window and was badly cut. He was taken to the Iroquois Memorial hospital.

Marks was arrested, charged with driving without a license.

I buy DIAMONDS for less money and I sell them for less!

I AM the only Diamond merchant in the world who buys diamonds from people who need the money, from estates, auctions, etc. As I sell to Jewelers and Diamond Brokers all over the world, I only buy if I can undersell the established wholesale market. My price to the individual customer is the same as my price to the dealer—your dollar buys the same diamond value from me as the jewelers'! My "overhead" expense is practically nothing, and my sales are enormous; so it pays me in the long run to take a $10 profit on a $300 deal. I protect you with a real MONEY BACK guarantee with legally certified carat weight, etc. My guarantee is dependable because I am financially responsible (references, 2 National Banks). MAKING PENNIES COUNT FASTER

Irving Park City Market Opens; Does Big Business.

Hundreds of Irving Park housewives went to market yesterday. And they found bargains—attractive bargains—at the municipal market at Irving Park boulevard and Elston avenue. There were lots of choice vegetables, real country eggs and butter, and other things good to eat, at prices with some, at least, of the middleman's profits cut off. Music, flowers, and speeches by Ald. Watson and Ald. Armitage marked the opening ceremonies.

UNIONS FAVOR MOONEY STRIKE

With the returns all counted, the Mooney strike vote appears to have run 40 to 1 in favor of the strikes in an effort to obtain a new trial for the convicted California labor leader. These figures are from the returns of about 25 per cent of the local unions all over the country. About 75 per cent of the unions ignored the strike vote because it has not the backing of the American Federation of Labor or the international unions.

Joseph Hanson, in charge of taking the returns, refused to give out the exact figures on the number of unions that voted. He issued a statement showing the coal miners, the oil workers, railway carmen and metal miners have voted 10 to 1 in favor of the strike, while the barbers and printers voted 8 to 1 against the strike.

Hanson will leave tonight for Atlantic City, N. J., to show the returns and figures at the convention of the American Federation of Labor, which opens there tomorrow, in an effort to get the approval of the proposed strikes.

U. S. Agents and Military Police to Play Baseball

Lincoln Park 'Santa' Puts Joy in 37 Kids' Hearts

Here's a good habit to acquire in Chicago parks.

On the rarest day so far in June Miss May Selover and Miss Lucy Shafner, teachers in the Franklin school, took thirty-seven of their charges into Lincoln park to enjoy the kind of lesson that comes only in the days of real sport. The little procession was passing under one of the bypath bridges when a man leaned over the rail above them and something fluttered from his hand.

"Give 'em a treat," he said when he saw his $5 bill had fallen safely into the hands of one of the teachers, and disappeared before the company could voice thanks. The class promptly raided an ice cream parlor.

JUVENILE COURT TO TRAIN GIRLS FOR HOME JOBS

Finds Domestic Workers Save While Office Aids Lose.

BY LUCY CALHOUN.

What is Chicago doing for its girls? Here is a new plan which is to be experimented with next week at the School of Domestic Science in the Tower building.

It has been discovered from figures in the office of Mrs. Katherine Shannon of the child placing department of the Juvenile court that over one hundred girl wards of the court who have been placed at domestic service in Chicago have reported to the probation officers in charge of them that they have been able to save some money each week out of their salaries.

Clerks Fail to Save.

Of a number of girls who have been given stenographic and clerical work to do not more than ten or twelve reported any money saved. The domestic workers have been in almost every case untrained.

It is now the plan to give the Juvenile court wards a course of intensive training at the School of Domestic Science and to discover if they cannot be so prepared that they will become really efficient helpers for the family of moderate means and thus relieve the shortage of domestic help.

The school is paying half of the expense of the experiment and the other half is being met by a private individual whose name is withheld.

Classes Open Monday.

The first of the Juvenile court classes will be held Monday at 1:30. There are at present fifteen girls in the Mary B. home on the west side and eight in the Mary A. on Kildare avenue, and the girls best fitted for domestic work in the two homes are to have the advantages of the experiment. The girls are between the ages of fourteen and eighteen. Miss Lillian Kemp of the School of Domestic Science will have charge of them.

OAK PARK VOTES MORE TAXES TO HELP SCHOOLS

Oak Park at a special election held yesterday redeemed its grammar schools by balloting in favor of an increase of school taxes to grant increases in pay to the teachers and to build additions to several schools. The referendum brought out the largest vote ever cast at a special election in Oak Park.

The count showed 1,158 had voted in favor of raising the school tax from 2 per cent to 3 per cent, while 40 voted against the passage of the measure.

The increased tax will be levied from Jan. 1 and will mean that approximately $400,000 will be available for school purposes this year. Most of the school teachers, beginning with the September term, will be granted an increase in pay of from 10 to 15 per cent. Some of the teachers now receiving but $650 a year will be given a raise of $250.

NATION BUDGET PLAN PUSHED ON BY COMMITTEE

Senate Gets McCormick Resolution; Seems Sure to Pass.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—A long stride towards fulfillment of the Republicans' preëlection promise to halt extravagance and waste in federal exptnditures was taken today when the senate rules committee reported the resolution of Senator McCormick of Illinois creating a special senate committee to devise a budget system.

The text of the resolution as amended by the committee reads:

"Resolved, That there be appointed a special committee to consist of six members of the majority and four of the minority to devise a plan for a budget system, and that said committee shall report a plan for a national budget not later than Sept. 1, 1919."

Indications are that the senate will adopt the resolution without delay to enable the proposed special committee to begin work at once. Prediction was made today that before the end of the present congress a national budget system will have been established.

Will Venture Cautiously.

In framing a budget system congress will proceed with the utmost caution through fear of permitting the executive branch of the government to get too strong a grip on the national purse strings. This objection is made to practically all of the plans so far submitted for the establishment of a budget system. It is not improbable that congress will content itself by beginning with the creation of a permanent national auditing bureau, entirely divorced from the executive departments. It is also likely that congress will create a congressional committee to check up on expenditures.

Both political parties have indorsed the budget system. Practically every member of congress says he favors it, but when it comes to voting upon a specific plan objections always arise to block it. The opposition usually can be traced to the big committee chairmen, who don't take kindly to the idea of giving up their power in the preparation of appropriation bills.

Representative Goode's Plan.

Representative Goode of Iowa has a bill pending to create a federal bureau of the budget headed by the director general of budget. This bureau would be charged with the duty of preparing the estimates of the various executive departments. The measure also would create a controller general to audit all expenditures. The controller would be kept out of politics by life appointment.

Senator Kenyon of Iowa, one of the chief promoters of the budget system, predicted today that the establishment of a new auditing system would be accomplished speedily.

"It is utterly absurd to permit each department of the government to audit its own accounts," Senator Kenyon said.

Army Officers Will Aid in Military Law Reform

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—The war department announced today that four army officers had been directed to report in Chicago Monday morning to appear before the military law committee of the American Bar association, which will resume its hearings on the subject of military courts martial and reform of military justice. The officers directed to attend the hearing are Gen. Robert Alexander, Col. Harvey C. Carbaugh, Col. Charles H. Paine, and Lieut. Col. Eugene R. West. Lieut. Col. West is attached to the judge advocate general's department.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Four Chicago men and one woman were included in the list of citations made public by the war department today as the basis for awards of the distinguished service cross.

Miss Jane Jeffrey, an English woman, serving as an American Red Cross nurse, was cited for extraordinary bravery in action. While on duty in a hospital she was wounded by an exploding aerial bomb, but refused to leave her post "though suffering great pain; her devotion to the task of helping others was inspiring to her associates."

Other awards of the distinguished service cross announced today were:

First Lieut. Harrison A. Dickson (deceased), Springfield, Ill.; Second Lieut. John C. Lee (deceased), Chicago, Ill.; Sergt. James Jackson, Calumet, Mich.; Corporal Eugene McIntyre, 113 East Austin avenue, Chicago; Privates Horace Smotherman, 2803 Elmwood avenue, Chicago; Robert W. Lindsay, Morris, Ill.; Harry E. Single Tax Party to Have Candidate for President

New York, June 7.—The Single Tax party will place a presidential ticket in the field in the national election of 1920, it was announced at its headquarters here today. To effect this a national convention of the party has been called to meet in New York June 28. The party maintains organizations in a dozen states, but has never before had a separate candidate for president.

Surgeons and Medicine Rushed to Alaskan Bay

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Naval ships carrying surgeons and large quantities of medical supplies have been dispatched to the Bristol bay region in Alaska to combat an epidemic of influenza which threatens about 5,000 persons, most of them employed in the salmon canning industry.

FIGHT ON WILSON TO BE BASIS FOR 1920 CAMPAIGN

Republicans Plan to Make Fate of League Leading Issue.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—Although the presidential election of 1920 is more than a year away it already is becoming apparent that the contest is going to be more desperate and of greater moment to the nation than any since the civil war.

Whether President Wilson does or does not become a candidate for a third term there is every indication that measures are going to overshadow men in the consideration of the voters. Whatever the paramount issue, the great question before the electorate will be whether a continuation of the radical policies of the president and his Democratic administration is desired or a return to the more conservative policies of the Republicans.

Revolves on League.

Many public men believe that the senate will refuse to ratify the president's league of nations covenant before the election and that this whole question will go to the voters for a decision. Such a development, they believe, would compel Mr. Wilson to stand for reëlection and seek a vindication of his course in seeking to commit the nation to his peace plan.

Other keen judges of the trend of affairs political are quite as confident that the covenant will have been ratified before the campaign begins and that the domestic policies of the administration will be chiefly on trial before the people.

Cite Praise of Lenine.

Republican leaders already are beginning to attack the radical tendencies of the administration which they believe account for the encouragement given bolshevistic movements in this country.

President Wilson's praise of the Lenine and Trotzky régime in Russia in December, 1917, is cited, as well as the utterances of many administration officials assailing capital in the manner of socialistic agitators. That the administration should countenance the conduct of Immigration Commissioner Howe, who presided at a soviet meeting in New York, and the president's selection of George Herron, the radical Socialist and free love advocate, for a diplomatic mission are mentioned as indicative of the tendency of the Wilson régime.

Holds President Responsible.

There is going to be some frank discussion of these matters in congress shortly in connection with the subject of the recent bomb outrages. At least one Republican senator is preparing a speech in which he will hold the president responsible for radical preachments encouraging agitators against the established form of government to carry out their cherished ideas of gaining their ends by violence and terrorism.

The Democrats are prepared to meet these attacks with charges of political partisanship directed against the Republicans and with defense of the president and his policies at every turn.

The Republicans are confident that a reaction against the Democratic régime is already in evidence. They point to the refusal of the people to sustain the exercise in his appeal for the return of a Democratic congress in the election last November.

In 1916 the president was reëlected by a popular plurality of 581,940. In the congressional election of 1918, however, there were 6,622,734 Republican and 5,428,165 Democratic votes cast, a Republican plurality of 1,194,569. The Republicans carried twenty-nine states and the Democrats nineteen. If the Republicans can hold these same states in 1920 their electoral vote will be 342, compared with 189 for the Democratic candidate.

The Michigan state election last April is cited as the latest manifestation of the swing of the political pendulum back to the Republicans.

The gain in Republican strength was over 87 per cent, more than twice the increase of only 40 per cent shown by the Democrats.

One of the big aims of the Republicans in 1920 will be to break the solid south. Chairman Hays of the Republican national committee is devoting much attention to this proposition now, encouraged by Democratic disaffection in a number of southern states, notably Missouri, Kentucky, and North Carolina.

U. S. EMPLOYMENT SERVICE PLACES MILLIONS IN JOBS

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—Nearly 6,000,000 persons were directed to employment by the United States employment service from its organization January, 1918, to May 24 last. Of this total, over 4,500,000 reported back to the service that they had been placed.

Figures made public today by the department of labor show that in this period, and with the returns for April and the first three weeks of May not yet complete, 6,578,086 persons applied at the offices of the federal employment service for employment of all kinds, from unskilled labor to positions calling for men and women of professional and technical training. Of this number 5,979,233 were directed to positions and 4,574,287 reported placed.

With returns for six states missing during the week ending May 24, the United States employment service placed 52,000 persons, of whom 42,826 were men and 9,174 were women.

BAKER PRAISES Y. M. C. A. WORK IN WORLD WAR

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, who recently inspected the American armies in France and Germany, also made careful inquiries while abroad regarding the work of the Young Men's Christian association.

Mr. Baker, in awarding the Croix de Guerre to three Y. M. C. A. workers who served in France, now has taken advantage of the opportunity to pay the red triangle force high tribute.

"By reason of its longer establishment, its larger experiences, and its larger facilities," he says, "the Y. M. C. A. had a greater part of the welfare work to do, especially abroad," and he continues:

"The Y. M. C. A. has represented the heart of America and has carried to soldiers abroad our affections and our ideals for them."

"No matter how hard you may try, you will not be able to forget 'Broken Blossoms.'"—Virginia Dale in Journal—Illinois.—Adv.

WOMAN WITNESS THREATENED IN 'TRIBUNE' TRIAL

Warned to "Be Careful" What She Says on the Border Situation.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Mount Clemens, Mich., June 7.—[Special.]—Mrs. W. T. Ritchie of Columbus, N. M., one of the witnesses brought to Mount Clemens to testify for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE in the Henry Ford libel suit, was approached in the hallway on the second floor of the Hotel Medea this morning by a young man, who warned her to be careful how she testified.

"He came up to me in the hall near my room," Mrs. Ritchie said, "pointed his finger at me and said, 'Be careful what you say on the witness stand; you may not get your compensation from the government.'"

Woe if Rangers Catch Him.

Mrs. Ritchie ran down to the lobby and told the incident to a group of her Texas ranger friends, who have come here at the request of THE TRIBUNE to tell of outrages on the Mexican border. These friends started out on a hunt for the young man. Mrs. Ritchie said it was rather dark in the hall, but she thought she would recognize him again. If he is found he will be brought before the court on the charge of attempting to intimidate witnesses.

Mrs. Ritchie and her husband ran the Commercial hotel in Columbus at the time of the raid by Mexicans March 9, 1916, when many Americans were killed and the town burned.

Her husband was among those killed. The "compensation" referred to is a possible payment by the United States government for her husband's death as the result of lack of governmental protection in Columbus. There are two bills on this matter pending in congress.

Will Ford Take Stand?

As the case approaches its fifth week of trial in Judge Tucker's court, one of the chief things that interest every one is when Henry Ford will take the stand.

This question was raised incidentally in court yesterday when Attorney Elliott G. Stevenson of THE TRIBUNE, in the course of an argument concerning the admissibility of certain evidence, cried out in a challenging tone to the Ford bench of lawyers: "Where is Henry Ford? Why don't you bring him in here?"

Attorney Alfred Lucking passed this off jokingly.

"O, that's what's worrying you, is it?" he said; "well, we are the judges of that."

It is thought generally that Mr. Ford will be placed on the stand last in the rebuttal for his side of the case. His cross-examination, in this event, by Attorney Stevenson, who has known Ford and the Ford factory ways for many years, and who defeated Ford in the Dodge Bros. suit, is looked forward to with keen interest by lawyers and visitors. It is possible the Ford attorneys will not put the plaintiff on the stand at all.

Lawyers Make No Announcement.

It is prophesied in some quarters that THE TRIBUNE attorneys will put Mr. Ford on the stand, but prophecy is poor business in this case, and there is no announcement from either side.

Mr. Ford has been in court but one-half day since the trial began. This was the day that his attorney, the eloquent ex-judge from Detroit, Alfred J. Murphy, spoke in such terms of admiration and emotion concerning the virtues of his wealthy client that there were tears in his own eyes.

It was announced soon after by Mr. Ford's Mount Clemens news bureau, which still is functioning at the rate of 1,500 words a day, that Mr. Ford had decided to spend the summer in Mount Clemens, and that all his enormous business interests would be conducted from here. But Mr. Ford is missing the trial and the transcript is poor reading.

"Tribune" Officials Ready.

When Attorney William Lucking asked THE TRIBUNE attorneys the other day if they intended to produce in court Clifford Raymond, writer of the editorial; E. S. Beck, managing editor of THE TRIBUNE; Tiffany Blake, chief editorial writer, and others, instead of having their depositions read, he turned to THE TRIBUNE table and said:

"And I see Col. Robert R. McCormick is here. I assume he will testify."

"Yes," said Attorney Weymouth Kirkland, "you have been seeing him here every day for a month—facing you."

Attorney Stevenson yesterday announced to the court that he withdrew his motion to strike out all the evidence relating to the financial and family connections of the editors of THE TRIBUNE which was put into the case by the plaintiff in the effort to prove unworthy and selfish motives for attacking Mr. Ford.

Wants to Answer Insinuations.

Col. McCormick told his lawyers that he wanted a chance to rebut this testimony in view of the fact that the charges had been spread broadcast.

The court had already referred to this line of testimony as "remote" and "far fetched" and had refused to admit some of the evidence.

THE TRIBUNE will show by rebuttal testimony, even more effectually than in the cross-examination in the depositions of Standard Oil and International Harvester officials, that officials of these companies never had any relations with THE TRIBUNE editors in a way that would touch the policy of the paper. Not only were they ignorant of THE TRIBUNE'S Mexican policy, but these companies appeared to have no particular policy of their own in reference to that country which they were anxious to have THE TRIBUNE or any other paper advocate.

CORP. M'INTYRE OF 108TH SANITARY TRAIN WINS D. S. C.

CORP. EUGENE McINTYRE

Just before the C. O. bawled, "Fuurward——hoooo," in the last Prairie division parade one Chicago boy received the surprise of his life. He is Corporal Eugene McIntyre, formerly of the 130th ambulance company of the 108th sanitary train. Corporal McIntyre was sent home last January as a casual, having been wounded while carrying injured soldiers during the Argonne battle on Oct. 10, 1918.

When the parade formed Corporal McIntyre was once more in charge of his squad.

"Corporal McIntyre!" yelled the company commander.

"Yoo," the corporal answered.

"You will receive the D. S. C. in a few days from Washington," announced the company commander, "for unusually meritorious conduct just before you were wounded."

It was the first Corporal McIntyre had heard of the decoration. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. V. McIntyre, 18 Chalmers place.

Free Marriage Offer Fails to Win Soldiers

"What," mused Justice Samuel Harrison of Evanston last night, "is more rare than a day in June?"

After that thought from Mr. Lowell he added that though he had tried "earth if she be in tune" and done considerable "looking" and "listening" no veterans of the world war appeared eager to accept his offer of free marriage ceremonies.

Seven days and nary a free wedding is the judge's record—for which he is herewith given a service stripe of an orange blossom rampant on an Evanston sundae.

CANADA AND U. S. PUTTING BRAKES ON BOLSHEVISM

Join to Keep Reds Under Surveillance; Labor Unions Helping.

BY ARTHUR M. EVANS.

Winnipeg, Man., June 7.—[Special.]—The United States and Canada are working in conjunction against the spread of bolshevism in the northwest section of the continent.

Information brought here by high government officials today is that a careful canvass of radical circles has been made with the aid of organized labor in the United States with a view of bringing revolutionaries under international surveillance.

The survey has shown that the agitators for a long time have been congregating in the Pacific coast cities. New York is said to have lost many of the wildest leaders, who were thick with Trotsky in the days when he lived in the tenement districts of Manhattan, and they have appeared out west as promoters of the "one big union" idea and "proletarian dictatorship."

Select West for Test.

Other cities of the east and the middle west have also had a migration of extremist leaders to the coast.

The section from Seattle to Vancouver was picked as where the soviet idea was first to be established, the plan being to get a foothold and then drive it eastward. The Seattle strike was to have been followed by a tieup at Vancouver, but the breaking of the I. W. W. at Seattle led the leaders to pick Winnipeg as the spot for starting their Canadian movement.

The boundary line has been nothing of a barrier so far, but the authorities on both sides are now using it as an agency for checking up on the radicals. At present, according to word brought back from Washington by Canadian officials, most of the chief disturbers are now on the dominion side of the boundary. The United States is taking measures to keep them from crossing back.

Keep Radicals Out of U. S.

Instructions have been issued to inspectors from Montreal to Vancouver to redouble their vigilance. No traveler suspected of being a "red" is to be allowed to reënter the states without going through the fullest inspection provided in the immigration regulations. They will be required to produce birth certificates or naturalization papers. If not citizens of the United States they will not be allowed entry. By far the greater part of them are of foreign birth and if naturalized they will have to prove up to the satisfaction of the authorities.

Secret service men in industrial centers where radicilasm has been rampant both in the states and the dominion have for some time been working in conjunction. Indexes of the more rabid revolutionaries have been prepared and in some instances the secret service men have been furnished with photographs and full descriptions.

Leaders Won't Call Off Strike.

Despite terrific pressure from union men representing the faction demanding a settlement of the Winnipeg general strike, the central strike committee declined this afternoon to call off the sympathetic walkout, notwithstanding intimations that such action probably would lead to adjustment of the general labor controversy.

W. E. Barker, chairman of the conciliation committee of the railroad brotherhoods, announced late today that indications were that no settlement could be brought about before next week. The brotherhood executives obtained settlement proposals both from the metal trades council and the industrial employers, but the employers, with the federal, provincial, and municipal governments solidly behind them, insisted that peace cannot come until the sympathetic strike, the leading weapon of the one big union promoters, had been repudiated.

Threaten to Extend Strike.

"Instead of going back, we are extending the strike. Let no one talk of starting work next week. No local will go back, but will try hard to pull out one or two thousand workers who today are unorganized." This was the reply of the Western Labor News, the official organ of the strikers.

Union telegraphers on strike postponed until tomorrow the meeting set for late today to decide whether they would return to work. This action was taken at the urgent request of strike leaders, who told the operators "that a settlement seemed to be in sight." It is understood that the strike leaders wanted the vote postponed until Monday, but the operators refused to delay action more than twenty-four hours.

Winnipeg was orderly today, thanks to the activities of more than 2,000 returned soldier constables. There were no parades, although union men again protested that Mayor Charles F. Gray withdraw his proclamation prohibiting such demonstrations. The only gathering of importance was a strikers' mass-meeting at which the mayor was the leading speaker.

Canada Unions Lose Charter.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Martin F. Ryan, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Car Men, has revoked the charter of two local unions of that order at Winnipeg and a thrid at Edmonton, Canada, it was announced at American Federation of Labor headquarters, on the ground that action of their members in appropriating money for organizing the "one big union" which led to strikes now progressing in western Canada is a disregard of union law. Other heads of international unions are said to be preparing similar orders affecting their crafts.

INDICTED

Millionaire Sportsman Accused in Plot to Swindle Government Out of $30,000,000 in Sale of Munitions.

Grant Hugh Browne

PLOT TO PLUNDER MILLIONS FROM U. S. IS ALLEGED

Army Men Indicted in Munitions Net; Hint German Hand.

There he met Browne and Harris. The operatives say Browne passed $5,000 to Nicholson as his share of the profits, and from this Nicholoson is said to have given the young army officer who was working with the department of justice officers, $2,000. Each of them then is said to have made up a purse of $1,000 by donating $500 each, which was given to Collins for the use of his name as one of the bidders.

When arrested at the Statler, $3,000 was found on Nicholson.

Nicholson was arrested Thursday. His arrest was kept a secret, for it was feared that if it became known the others in the alleged plot would leave the country.

Browne and Harris were lured here and arrested at the Statler on Saturday morning. Collins was taken into custody at his office.

Harris was communicated with by mail by an officer of the department of justice, who made arrangements to meet him at the Statler Saturday.

In "Who's Who" Soterios Nicholson is given as:

"Lawyer (name adopted); born, Kalliani, Greece, April 7, 1885; son of Nicholaos Papasoteriou and Erdokia, daughter of Soterios Kerasiotis, educated in public and private schools at Athens and Tripoli; came to United States in 1903, student at Emerson institute, Washington, D. C., LL. B., George Washington university, 1911; married Anna C. Bresnan of Washington, D. C., 1916; attorney for Greek legation, Washington, D. C.; campaign speaker for Republican national committee, 1916; became naturalized citizen of the U. S. in 1910; commissioned captain O. R. C., ordnance department, financial division, Dec. 11, 1917. Member of the bar of the United States Supreme court and of the District of Columbia. Author of 'War, or a United World' and others."

Were to Be Used by Kaiser?

Department officials refuse to reveal details of the alleged plot. They made known, however, that the charges against the men involved the acquisition, through fraudulent manipulation of bids, of a considerable quantity of salvaged munitions at a very low price.

It is averred that the munitions were to be resold to German agents in Mexico City at a large profit. These agents, government officials say, were eventually to go to Germany to assist the kaiser's supporters in overthrowing the republic or for use against the allies in the event the Germans refuse to sign the peace treaty.

Probe Made in Chicago.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—Indictment of army officers and business men at Detroit was the first step by the department of justic and army intelligence service, it was said here today, in a campaign against alleged authors of fraudulent plots against the government in connection with the munitions supplies.

Chicago, Pittsburgh, and Boston were among the cities mentioned here as being other centers of the investigation.

Browne Has Varied Interests.

New York, June 7.—Grant Hugh Browne has been identified with New York and London financial affairs for many years.

He was for several years mathematician in the department of statistics of the New York Life Insurance company and later was associated with the Mutual Life Insurance company and with the Morton Trust company of this city.

He severed his connections with the Morton Trust company in 1907 and since that time has devoted most of his attention to steel, lead, and cobalt interests in Canada.

He is president of Steel and Radiation, Ltd., of Toronto, a director in the Page-Heiser Iron Tube and Lead company of Toronto and president of the United Cobalt Exploration company. One of his recent ventures was a syndicate in London in August, 1914, which purchased the British steamer Viking to bring home Americans stranded in Europe.

AT WORK IN CHICAGO.

It was reported last night that Chicago department of justice and army intelligence officials have been working in connection with the munitions scandal, but as yet no local firms have been implicated. Developments are expected, it was intimated, but as to their magnitude nothing was said.

GEN. LAUCHEIMER SEES ARMY DRILL AS AID TO NATION

Universal military training will increase, rather than diminish, the recruits of the nation's volunteer naval and military organizations.

So declared Brig. Gen. Laucheimer, inspector and adjutant, United States marine corps, who stopped over a few hours in Chicago yesterday on his way to inspect the marine stations on the Pacific coast.

1,500 MORE GOBS TO BE DISCHARGED AT GREAT LAKES

Once more there are smiles on the faces of Great Lakes gobs.

It was announced yesterday in the Great Lakes Bulletin that orders have been received from Secretary of the Navy Daniels to cut the personnel of the station 10 per cent by July 1. Reserves and men who enlisted in the regular navy for the duration of the war are affected.

"This will be the last big cut in the station's personnel," says the Bulletin. "All men who are not released under this order will be those who are absolutely essential to maintaining the machinery of the station."

On June 1 there were 14,827 men at Great Lakes. The order means "civies" for about 1,500 bluejackets.

The Phonograph made by the World's Greatest Music House

The AEOLIAN-VOCALION

WHEN the Aeolian Company decided to build a phonograph, it brought to the problems involved an experience and resources unparalleled in the music industry.

This Company, through its genius in developing new musical instruments, and its success in raising the standard of those already established, had assumed a position of unequivocal leadership in the music industry.

It had become the largest manufacturer of musical instruments in the world with 14 factories in America and Europe and branches and representatives in all the world's important cities.

It had originated the Pianola, the first and most widely known of the modern instruments called "player pianos" and the one that has always been recognized as the standard of all instruments of this type.

It had developed the modern residence pipe-organ and had become the largest manufacturer of these costly and magnificent instruments.

It was responsible for the greatest of all pianofortes—the Steinway, the Weber and the Steck Grand Duo-Art Pianos.

And it was credited with having done more towards raising the standard of piano tone and quality than had ever before been accomplished by any single manufacturer.

The Tonal Superiority of the Aeolian-Vocalion

It was this imposing and successful music house from which the new type of phonograph—the Aeolian-Vocalion—sprung.

With the Aeolian Company's knowledge of tone production through various mediums—strings, pipes, sound-chambers and resonant surfaces—this Company experienced little difficulty in improving the phonograph tonally.

Faults, which others with less knowledge and experience in acoustics had been unable to remedy, were wholly or in great part overcome.

In the Aeolian-Vocalion, stridency or muffling of tone were absent, surface scratch was almost eliminated, depth and free natural tones of correct timbre were secured.

The Graduola Makes the Phonograph a Real Musical Instrument

Important as was the tonal development of the Aeolian-Vocalion, however, this instrument represented in another way a still greater advance in phonograph development.

Tone or expression control, as offered by its new and exclusive feature—the Graduola—is what essentially makes the Aeolian-Vocalion the phonograph of ultimate type toward which progress has been tending.

No music-producing means ever devised that did not afford opportunity for spontaneous and artistic expression control has been seriously considered by musicians or taken a permanent place in the music-world.

This opportunity, for the first time in a phonograph, is offered by the Aeolian-Vocalion.

How vastly it improves the phonograph, how much more interesting it makes both the instrument and its records, and how satisfactorily it meets the desire that practically all human beings feel, for some way to express their music thought, is written in the wonderful success that has been so quickly achieved by the Aeolian-Vocalion.

The Phonograph You Will Want In Your Home

The Aeolian-Vocalion is the ultimate phonograph. Actually it would be difficult for imagination to picture a more completely satisfying instrument.

In addition to its tonal superiority and the new and wonderful privilege it offers for playing and coloring its music with your own feeling, it offers the great advantage of playing all records, thus making the performances of not one group but practically all the world's best musicians available to the owner of an Aeolian-Vocalion; while its cases are far from more attractive than any phonographs have hitherto possessed.

Vocalion prices: Conventional models, $50 to $350; with Graduola, $115 up. Period styles, up to $2,000. Vocalion catalog and other literature sent on request.

Rosa Raisa's singing is reproduced in Aeolian records exclusively

Aeolian records are tonally better, and occupy a third longer time in playing, than the usual phonograph records.

Last Big Low Price Closing Sale Day

TODAY, SUNDAY, JUNE 8th

Britigan's Portage-Park Properties

After Today You Will Be "Too Late"

Today marks the last day of the greatest home-property sale ever held with such remarkable rapidity and success. The selling of this property has resulted during the past seven weeks in the disposal of all but seventy-six lots. These lots should all be disposed of today, so that this sale marks the end of the greatest residence property sale of the old ridge lands.

95% of Those Who Bought Here Will Build Homes and Flats Themselves

In all our experience we have never seen the people take hold of a property with such energy as the people of Chicago have done in our Portage Park properties. The people who bought here did not buy for speculation. They bought for building purposes and many have already planned to begin building operations. On one corner fronting the park an 18 flat building will soon be started. A large number of lots have been paid for in full, so that bungalows, homes and flats can be erected thereon at once. The kind of people who bought here is an assurance that there will be a very high-class population in this subdivision and that the character of the property as well as its use will result in very much higher prices as this building movement develops.

Some of the Most Valuable Lots Still Unsold

The Wm. H. Britigan Organization, of itself, could not have sold this property in the short space of time occupied by this sale merely by sales effort. The fact of the matter is that the people came, they saw—and they bought. The property sold itself. Its very location, its surroundings, its aspect are sales arguments which induce the purchasers to put their money in the property, without any argument from a salesman. If you have not seen this property yourself you have missed the greatest opportunity given to Chicago people in a real estate investment in many years. The lots that still remain unsold are among the best bargains in the subdivision and each one is a real investment of merit and value.

Only 76 Lots Remain Unsold—So Come Out Early Today

When a great subdivision like this is sold, when building has been begun, when its character as a high grade, beautiful property has been established — then each lot is worth considerably more per front foot than original purchasers paid for it. A visit to this property will convince you that there will always be a demand for it because of its exclusive character as home property, its cleanliness, its location, its home advantages. There is a big probability also that into this district will be extended in a short while the Logan Square Branch of the "L". Today this district has excellent transportation facilities, and if the Elevated is added it will have all of the transportation advantages of any North Side property.

Today Is Your Last Chance to Buy at Our Prices

Today is the last sale day (the end of the big offer) that the Wm. H. Britigan Organization will conduct on its Portage Park properties. If you don't buy now—today—you will be forced to pay the advanced prices that will obtain when this sale is over. Your purchase from this organization assures you that the goods you buy are honest goods at honest values. It assures you that the development of this property will be so guarded and restricted as to preserve these values. Back of your purchase is the honesty and integrity of the Wm. H. Britigan Organization. This means high grade development and steadily advancing values.

SCOUTS PARADE WITH THE SNAP OF YANK MODELS

Storm Loop in Campaign for 1,000,000 Boys in the Ranks.

"Red" was there, and so was "Skinnay." The tiny boy who has to be coaxed to "blow hard" trotted alongside his "big bruvver" and every kid in line had his face polished as if the cat had licked it—because 3,000 Boy Scouts were on parade yesterday on Michigan boulevard.

Sober faced old business moguls smiled as the men of tomorrow marched. They couldn't help it. Neither could any of the other thousands of spectators who crowded the curbstones in the loop. It was almost as inspiring as if the boys were returning from war.

Seek 1,000,000 Scouts.

The occasion was the opening drive of the Scouts' association for 1,000,000 members. They paraded yesterday, but today they will enter churches and shout their motto on the baseball fields, bathing beaches, and in playgrounds.

It was a big day for every scout. Hundreds had gathered before noon in Grant park, so they'd be on time. They couldn't miss this opportunity to traverse the same streets as Reilly's bucks, the 13th engineers, and the Prairie division. Some of them snapped along the boulevard with the remains of their lunch peeping out of their back pockets.

In front marched a cordon of police. Next came Col. Le Roy T. Steward, the marshal. Behind him were 300 of the boys from "back o' th' yards," with a dandy fife and drum corps.

Squads from Edgewater, Logan Square, Hyde Park, Woodlawn, the west side, and Englewood followed. The northwest siders displayed the only float, a scout camp in the woods.

Like Real Soldiers.

When the reviewing stand at Michigan and Congress was passed the youngsters clicked their "eyes right" with the snap and precision of real soldiers. The salutes of the squad commanders were returned from the stand by Robert J. Thorne, president of the Chicago council of Boy Scouts; H. P. Zimmerman, J. P. Newell, and W. G. Edens.

During the parade sixty-two girls from the Progress club of Montgomery Ward & Co. solicited memberships for the scouts. They were in charge of Miss Emma Steger.

The campaign will continue for one week.

LITHUANIANS OPEN CONVENTION HERE TONIGHT

The Lithuanian national convention is to hold its first session at the Auditorium tonight. It will ask recognition by the United States of "Lithuania's hard won freedom."

Lithuania has established a republican form of government and is asking recognition of its independence at the peace conference. It wants the congress of this country to recognize it as an independent state.

Gov. Lowden is to be one of the speakers. A liberty bell, symbolic of the new born freedom of the new republic, will be presented. An "honor troop" of young girls dressed in Lithuanian costume, with an escort of American soldiers of Lithuanian origin, will surround the bell. Later the bell will be taken through the country, as the medium of collecting funds.

The sessions of the convention will continue tomorrow and Tuesday at the Morrison hotel, and there will be a banquet Tuesday night.

Jim Markham Captures Suspected Thief on Car

Detective Sergeant James Markham of the bureau, one of the veterans of the police department, always keeps a keen watch for transgressors. When a man in a State street car shouted he had been robbed yesterday afternoon Markham arose and seized a colored man who was endeavoring to sidle past. The purse was found in his coat pocket. At the bureau he gave the name of Albert Howard. He has a record as a pickpocket, the police say.

Old Clothing Is Sought for Armenian Sufferers

Clothing of all kinds, no matter how torn it may be as long as it is wearable, will be sought in every section of the city during the next week by Armenians coöperating with the American committee for relief in the near east. It will be sent to the destitute peoples of Asia Minor, now almost naked as well as starving.

GREAT CHARITY PEACE JUBILEE

Sun., June 15—DANISH NATIONAL DAY

MOUNTAINS SEND GREAT CROWD TO YORK'S WEDDING

Governor Officiates; Nuptial Feast Follows.

Nashville, Tenn., June 7.—[Special.]—On a green hillside in Fentress county, Tenn., beside the big spring from which the Yorks have drawn their water for a hundred years or more, Sergt. Alvin C. York, hero of the Argonne drive, wedded Miss Gracie Williams of Pall Mall, Tenn., today. Gov. Albert H. Roberts performed the ceremony.

People came down from the mountains for miles around to attend the wedding and welcome the soldier home, bringing baskets filled with chicken and ham and pies and cakes of every description. They spread their dinner as a nuptial feast.

Dine Upon the Best.

The big sergeant and his bride were dined upon the best the Cumberland mountains afforded. People crowded around the bridal pair to shake hands and express wishes for their happiness. They knew York only as a hard working, simple country boy and not as a hero acclaimed by millions. They knew his bride as the prettiest girl in Wolf River valley and daughter of one or the county's leading citizens.

Miss Williams, who is 17, is fifteen years the junior of her husband. She wore a new pink silk dress embroidered around the bottom in red and blue flowers. It had two wonderful little pockets, on each of which were embroidered flags of the allies sent to his girl sweetheart by Sergt. York on silk handkerchiefs from France.

His Wedding Suit.

The sergeant wore a new serge uniform with the congressional medal of honor and the croix de guerre. He was attended by the Rev. Mr. Pile, the Holiness preacher who converted York from the rounder and gambler to the third elder in the Church of Christ in Christian Union.

For a honeymoon the sergeant and his wife plan to go to Salt Lake City as the guests, respectively, of the Chattanooga and Nashville Rotary clubs. The party will leave Pall Mall tomorrow and reach Nashville Monday. They will be accompanied that far by Mrs. Mary York, the sergeant's mother. She has not been as far away from home as the county seat of Fentress county more than twice in her life, and has never even so much as cherished the hope of going to Nashville.

Pistol Expert Takes Job as La Grange Police Head

Ward Douglas, veteran, son of a Texas ranger and said to be one of the handiest men in Chicago with a revolver, has taken over his new job as chief of police of La Grange. Previous to his appointment as police chief, Douglas was employed as an examiner at the soldiers and sailors' employment bureau, 120 West Adams street. He was commissioned in October, 1917, in the ordnance department.

When they catch their breath they spend it in adjectives praising the beauty of "Broken Blossoms"—Illinois Theater.—Advertisement.

POLES HEATEDLY DENY PLANS FOR A POGROM HERE

130 Policemen Held in Reserve to Prevent Gang Fight.

John A. Wedda, in charge of the executive offices of the national Polish department, contradicted last night published reports that 5,000 Poles would meet in Douglas park today and march into the Jewish quarter to conduct a "pogrom."

The report said Chief of Police Garrity had assigned 250 policemen to suppress the anticipated disorder, which was to center in Twelfth street and Kedzie avenue.

The district was in terror, the report continued, and families were preparing to flee.

Calls Entire Story False.

"The story," Mr. Wedda declared, "is a fabrication in its entirety. Poles of Chicago are bound to commit no excesses. They are American citizens and will conduct themselves toward other American citizens as American citizens should.

"No such organization as that described has been formed; nor will any demonstration of Poles take place in Douglas park today.

"Last Sunday afternoon, not 5,000, but 50,000 Poles assembled in Humboldt park and participated in a demonstration concerning the raising of funds to aid Poland. There was no disorder, directed against the Jews or any one else.

"The publication of reports of impending 'pogroms' and other such nonsense, merely tends to create trouble and to array two elements in our population against each other when they desire to live in peace and friendliness.

Denies Pogroms in Poland.

"Our information, too, is that no pogroms have been staged in Poland, despite assertions to the contrary. And we are ready to submit Poland's case to the public opinion of the world whenever all the facts may be known."

John F. Smulski, president of the department, is en route to Europe. He will visit Poland before his return to the United States.

At the Fillmore street police station it was said eighty patrolmen had been ordered held in reserve. Fifty policemen will come to the station from other districts.

"I believe the gang fight which has been scheduled for tomorrow is intended to bring about a final settlement of the dispute between the two factions," said Chief Garrity. "Indications point to plans for a desperate struggle."

DISMISSES STREETER CASE.

Ejectment proceedings started two years ago by Capt. George Wellington Streeter to recover land in Streeterville against the Chicago Title and Trust company were dismissed yesterday when Streeter failed to appear.

Exhibition Pianos and Inner-Players

CONVENTION Week is over. During the past six days America's greatest Piano builders and merchants assembled in Chicago for their Annual National Convention.

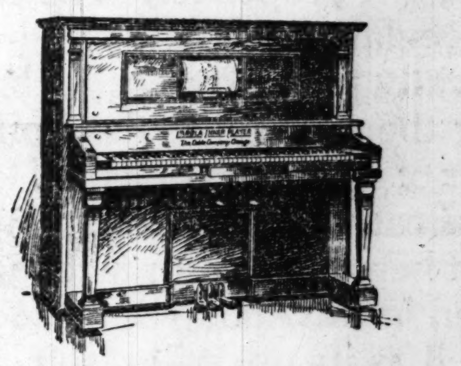
One of the interesting features was our special display of Cable-made Pianos and Inner-Players.

Here, in our centrally located music rooms, our own factories exhibited the finest of their products—instruments which had to meet the critical inspection of the leading representatives of the piano industry.

Now that the convention is over we place on sale these beautiful exhibition pianos—arranged, for your convenience, in four groups.

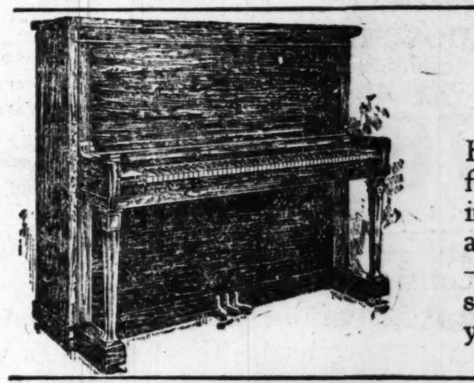
Grand Pianos

Seldom has Chicago witnessed such an imposing display of Grand Pianos. Beautiful Conover and Cable Grands in many sizes—Studio Grands, Parlor Grands, Baby Grands and for the first time the new Fairy Grand.



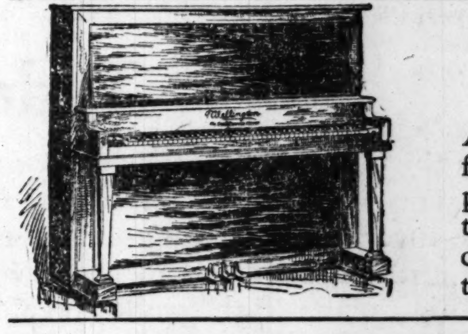
Inner-Player Pianos

First place is given, of course, to the celebrated Solo Carola—aptly termed the "Miracle Player"—the most highly perfected Player in the world. And then there's the Euphona at a more moderate figure—the biggest value Player in the lower-priced field.



High Quality Uprights

Here, too, you'll find the beautiful Conover and Cable Pianos in handsome upright models—and the well-known Kingsbury—made famous by its guarantee slogan "your money's worth or your money back."



Moderate Priced Uprights

And for the home desiring the finest Upright in the moderate-price field, we show the true-toned Wellington in a variety of designs and finishes—a model to suit every taste and purse.

This is your opportunity to secure one of these beautiful Convention Pianos—instruments built with special care in every detail. Every popular style and finish is included—but of course the number of each is limited. It is a case of first come, first served.

These instruments will be placed on sale on Monday morning—tomorrow. We suggest an early selection. Any of these models will be sold on convenient terms.

TEETH PULLING LECTURE AWAITS PULLING OF HAIR

But the Landlady at 4862 Sheridan Road Gets $22.50 Rent.

Ten members of the Northwestern University Dental school sat in the large drawing room in Mrs. Wendell's apartment, 4862 Sheridan road, last Friday night awaiting the arrival of Dr. Henry P. Westaby, professor of radiography, who was to make an impromptu lecture. Rain was falling on Sheridan road and the "prof" was late. . . .

"Can you imagine this?" asked A. L. Johnson. "Here are ten good men waiting for a dry lecture on radiography and we should be romancing."

"O—hum. Wish he'd get here," drawled Clarence Burr, who became used to thrills while serving with the Canadian army.

"This is about as exciting as a couple of mummies playing chess," said Jack Smith, who just happened to be home.

"Wish I was back in Whiskey Point," announced Johnson.

"Too quiet—too still," murmured Deacon Wilber.

Crash! Bang! Wowie! (Screams from female throats.)

Force Sidetracks Science.

Dr. Henry P. Westaby, sedate little man with black bag in his left hand, hurried along Sheridan road.

"I'm late—the young men will be asleep." He put on more speed.

But his heart sank as he neared 4862 Sheridan. A large crowd was in front of the door—also a patrol wagon.

"Goodness," exclaimed the professor. Then he tried to edge his way through the crowd. A copper stopped him. The professor begged information.

"Well, there's been a battle between a couple of wimmin in there," said the Irishman. "Mrs. Wendell and Miss Dorothy Judge—last one's beautiful—put on a hair pulling match."

Joseph Kelley, the policeman, told his commanding officer later that Miss Judge had neglected a matter of rent and that Mrs. Wendell had used physical force in an effort to collect.

"Some battle, too," reported Kelley, but he wouldn't say who won. He did admit that Mrs. Wendell collected some of the rent—about $22.50.

Science Wins in End.

Romance of N. W. U. Announced at Dinner.

Miss Lillian Capron
PHOTO-TOLOFF

Another romance of Northwestern university came to light yesterday with the announcement of the engagement of Miss Lillian Capron, daughter of Mrs. Delia Capron of Marion, Ill., and Henry Rader Jr., 1631 Hinman avenue, Evanston.

The announcement was made at a dinner given at the home of Mrs. O. E. Strehlow, 727 Michigan avenue, Evanston.

Miss Capron is still attending the university and is a member of the Pi Beta Pi sorority. Mr. Rader was graduated from Northwestern with the class of 1917 and is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

WILL HONOR MORTENSON.

A dinner will be given in honor of Peter A. Mortenson, newly appointed superintendent of schools, and the members of the new board of education by the Principals' club at the Blackstone hotel Saturday, June 21, it was announced yesterday.

WANT COCKTAIL AFTER JULY 1? BRING BOOZE

Cafe Men May Furnish Tools and Recipes for Drinks.

Provided the Ultimate Consumer's cup of joy be not brimming over this morning, the following potion may be essayed: Hotel rates will advance from 25 cents to $1 or more after July Curst to requite proprietors for the bar revnue of which the prohibition order deprives them.

But (steady, there, men, don't crowd) what we started out to say was that on and after July 1 "those who wish cocktails or highballs," the Hotel Sherman announced yesterday, "when dining there, may bring their own liquors. We will be prepared to furnish recipes for cocktails, the shakers and glasses, and supply nonalcoholic ingredients."

The company declined to amplify the notice and it is left for the thirsty to decide whether the action is legally proper and whether under the search and seizure law the clause prohibiting "transporting of liquor on public highways" might not deter patrons from reaching the sanctuary of the inn.

Bar Makes Half of Profits.

Concerning the advance in rates, Ernest J. Stevens of the Hotel La Salle said:

"Yes, they are going up. They must. We can't get out from under any other way. The bar of a hotel has invariably made about half of that hotel's profits."

"Fifty per cent of our revenue has been from the bars," said Joseph Byfield, president of the Hotel Sherman company, which also operates the Fort Dearborn hotel. "We shall necessarily have to boost room rates from 50 cents to $1 a day and restaurant prices accordingly."

Roscoe Thompkins of the Blackstone hotel and president of the Chicago Hotelkeepers' association, said the rates would not advance immediately, but would take effect gradually, following the readjustment due to the prohibition order.

Hope Which Springs Eternal.

The hope which springs eternal in the breasts of saloonkeepers manifested itself yesterday in the declaration that the war dry law stopping the sale of all liquor on July 1 would remain effective only about two months. It's this way:

The saloonkeepers claim to have learned on high authority that the proclamation declaring the national army demobilized will be issued not later than Labor day, or Sept. 1, this year. This would automatically rescind the order, giving us several months of wet weather—specifically, until Jan. 20, when the constitutional prohibition amendment becomes effective.

"As July 1 draws nearer," read an order issued to police captains yesterday by Chief Garrity, "the saloonkeepers are becoming bolder. They don't care now whether or not they lose their licenses. Take particular precautions to see that the Sunday closing ordinance is enforced."

JUDGE RULES ON WIPING OUT JURY REPORT TUESDAY

Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh in the Criminal court will rule Tuesday on arguments on the motion of Municipal Judge Irwin R. Hazen to expunge from the court records sections of the report of the April grand jury.

Former Judge Charles N. Goodnow represented the Municipal court judge in arguing yesterday that the motion be allowed on the ground the grand jury went beyond its powers and province in making the reports.

In the report the jurors made a scathing denunciation of the Municipal court judges. They referred to one case in particular, not by name, in which Harris Kazakones, a west side barrel dealer, was given his liberty in the Municipal court by Judge Hazen.

Kazakones was indicted, tried before Judge Robert E. Crowe, and acquitted. In the Municipal court Ald. Fick and Franz appeared in behalf of the defendant.

The entire grand jury was in court yesterday listening to the argument to expunge the report, and prepared to resist the motion.

TALK TO 'CRONES' IN ARMY ABROAD UPSETS THEORY

"Tribune" Reporter Says Descriptions Fail to Tally.

BY K. C. ADAMS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[By Special Cable.]
[Copyright: 1919: By the Tribune Company.]

ST. ANDRE, via Paris, June 3.—[Delayed.]—John Kreutzler, reported by the Chicago police to be Jean Crones, is mess sergeant of the officers' mess headquarters of the 311th engineers, now stationed at St. Andre, near Bordeaux.

In my opinion, and those who read the Chicago's police description, he is not Crones.

I talked to Kreutzler Thursday. In every particular except two his description corresponds to that given by the Chicago police in a cable describing Crones. The index finger of Crones' right hand is said to be missing. Kreutzler has perfect hands. Crones is described as having high cheek bones. Kreutzler is full faced.

Service Record.

Kreutzler's service record shows:

His home is at 5218 South Campbell avenue, Chicago. He was born in Alhoc, Hungary, and enlisted in Chicago Sept. 22, 1917, at the age of 25 years, 5 months. He reported the same day at Camp Grant and was assigned to company E, 311th engineers, with which organization he came overseas and to which he still belongs.

As between his service record and what he told me there are several discrepancies. When he enlisted he gave the name of his mother, Mrs. Theresa Kreutzler, as his nearest relative, and said her address was 5218 South Campbell avenue, Chicago. He gave his address at the time as 5218 Campbell avenue. He told me his mother had been dead four years, but thought it best to give her name when he enlisted.

Question of Trade.

Kreutzler's service record gives his occupation as restaurant keeper. He told me he had been a butcher in Chicago six years and also operated a billiard room on Campbell avenue.

Kreutler's service record shows under heading "pre-war employer," Waldorf-Astoria, New York. He told me he worked for the Astoria as a waiter before going to Chicago. He said he had been steward on Great Lakes boats.

Kreutzler says he has a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Seibold, living at 5218 Campbell avenue, with her husband, who also is a butcher.

When I went to talk to Kreutzler I said: "Well, how do you like the army, Crones?"

It didn't faze him a bit. "Getting kind of tired of it, like everybody else," he said. "I want to get home."

I addressed him again as Crones when I put another question to him, and then he said his name was Kreutzler, not Crones.

He was very much at ease until after he got the idea I suspected him of being Crones. This was after I told him about the Crones case. Then he got very angry and threatened to beat me.

"Lillian Gish, actress of the child and her imitation of outward signs, first, sickening fear and then paralyzing terror, is one of the finest bits of acting that has ever come to my notice."—O. L. Hall, Daily Journal—"Broken Blossoms"—Illinois.—Advertisement.

BLOW UP PRISON, RELEASE I. W. W., PLEA IN LETTER

Note Taken in Raid Urges Radicals to Arm Selves.

A letter seized in a raid made recently upon the home of a woman I. W. W. sympathizer by detectives and secret service operatives has been found to have been written by one of the ninety-three I. W. W. now in the Leavenworth penitentiary, sentenced by Judge Landis for violation of the espionage law.

The letter, written April 9, says, "The only way to get us out is to organize a machine gun company, swoop down upon the penitentiary with high powered automobiles, and blow this place into seven heavens.

"When workers begin to take such action, I shall become interested. I am far from being downhearted. I believe the government will keep on messing things until the bolsheviki come over here and blow them from the face of the earth.

Urges I. W. W. to Act.

"Another good way is for every member of the I. W. W. to carry a .44 Colt or a sawed off shotgun with his membership card and make a new brand of salt and pepper shakers out of our government officials. I am tired of trying to get justice through the courts."

Immigration Inspector Harry R. Landis announced yesterday he had ordered the release of Eimilo Mari, an I. W. W., arrested in a raid by Detective Sergeants Egan and McDonough at 503 West Division street. Mr. Landis said the department had no tangible evidence Mari was a red. Mari admits that he is an I. W. W., but denies he is anything more radical.

He is alleged to have operated a clearing house at 1337 Grand avenue, at which the I. W. W. and radicals received their mail.

Harbored Wilson Foe?

He also is said to have harbored Pedro Pieri, held under an indictment in Kansas City charged with threatening the life of President Wilson. Pieri was released from Leavenworth last November and is supposed to have been chosen by lot to take the life of the president.

When released he came to Chicago and was shadowed by secret service agents, but eluded them, only to be arrested in Cleveland several months later.

The letter, which was from Ed Hamilton, one of the I. W. W. leaders sentenced by Judge Landis last September, is declared to bear out the theory national bomb plots were conceived in Leavenworth.

MEANS TO GET DEPOSITIONS.

Commissions to take depositions of witnesses in various parts of the country were issued yesterday by the clerk of the Superior court in the million dollar damage suit of Gaston B. Means against the Northern Trust company. He charges conspiracy and it is understood he hopes to show the company financed the prosecution in the case in which he was tried in connection with the death of Mrs. Maud A. King.

HARRIS FAMILY TRIANGLE COMES TO END IN COURT

Husband Put on Probation and Wife's Sister Sent Home.

Claude Harris, 6317 Parnell avenue, who was arrested after he had spent too much time with his wife's sister, Jane Neill, 19 years old, 5838 South Michigan boulevard, was arraigned in the Court of Domestic Relations yesterday. Harris was found by his sister, Mrs. Clyde French, 6437 Normal avenue, after she had already taken Jane to the station. Both were booked on charges of disorderly conduct.

Judge Fry put Harris on probation for one year and fined him $200. Jane was ordered to go to her home in Mitchell, Ind., and never enter the Harris home again.

Husband's Sister Blames Girl.

"The farther she goes the better," said Mrs. French. "My brother loved his family and was a model husband until that came," and she nodded at Jane. "I have pleaded with her a number of times to leave him alone, but she would not listen."

Jane was at a loss to explain why she went with her brother-in-law, but told the judge emphatically that she had not fallen in love with him.

"The trouble started when my sister came to see me when my last baby was born," said Mrs. Harris. "Jane stayed with us six weeks, and then Claude began to go with her. He was all right before she came."

"I am willing to go home," said Jane, "but I left a coat in South Chicago. I can't go until tomorrow."

Ordered to Leave at Once.

The judge insisted that she go at once.

"There's a train at 6 o'clock," said Assistant State's Attorney Michael Rosinia.

Claude ventured a final act of gallantry. "I'll get your coat for you," he said.

"That won't do," expostulated the court. "The romance is over, beginning now."

ROAD FIRES TWO SERVICE MEN AS OTHERS RETURN

Alonzo Dellinger, 6544 Yale avenue, and Otto Mohr, 526 West Eightieth street, both overseas veterans, said yesterday they had been discharged from the freight auditing department of the Rock Island railroad with only two days' notice. The two former members of the 361st aero squadron said they were asked to make room for men employed by the road before the war.

Paul Peters, freight traffic auditor, said last night the boys were discharged under general order 27 of the railroad administration, providing the last employé hired shall be let out to give employment to former clerks being discharged from the army.

Dellinger and Mohr are both 22 years old and were getting $87.50 a month, the fixed minimum wage for senior clerks.

SOLDIERS WILL FIGHT MOB RULE, SAYS COL. CLINNIN

"Mob and bomb rule and all attempts at reigns of terror must be met by the strong arm of the law," said Col. John V. Clinnin of the 130th infantry, speaking last night before the alumni of Kent College of Law.

"The soldiers, sailors, and marines of America will not tolerate these demented agitators who are trying to wreck this country. The I. W. W. and other anti-Americans will speedily find that the men who fought for the flag are behind the government."

Earlier in the day Col. Clinnin addressed veterans of Company K of the old First Illinois infantry at the Morrison hotel.

CENSUS OF M. E. CHAPLAINS.

A census of all Methodist churchmen who served during the war as chaplains, Y. M. C. A. workers, and in special services is to be made by Chaplain H. E. Rompel, pastor of the Methodist church of Waukegan, for the purpose of forming a parade of war workers at the Columbus Centenary exposition, which begins June 20.

ROADHOUSE TOUR BRINGS WOE TO 'SINLESS SINNER'

Mrs. Schwabacher Charges Attempted Attack by Hotel Man.

Mrs. Madeline Schwabacher weeps again.

"Life is so hard," she says.

Her husband left her some years ago and went to France. She was lonesome. She thought he never would return to her. She broke the conventions. She wrote him, told him she had "sinned without sin," was to be the mother of a child.

He filed suit for divorce. The child was a boy. She named the child after him, Herbert J. Schwabacher Jr. A few months ago the boy died. Mrs. Schwabacher was all alone, without friends or relatives. It took her last dollar to bury the boy.

Invited on Auto Ride.

She was singing in a cabaret, living at the Hotel Morlonde, 4946 Sheridan road. She became acquainted with the proprietor, William H. Morse. Friday night, she said, he invited her to accompany him on an auto ride.

She accepted and they visited two roadhouses north of the city. She does not know the names of the places nor their exact location, except that they were on or near the "Milwaukee road."

She had been drinking gin, she said. She became ill while they were driving home and, asking Morse to stop the machine, she got out and walked around "to refresh herself." Then, she told Judge Carpenter yesterday, Morse attempted to attack her.

Abandoned in Country.

Mrs. Schwabacher said she struggled with him, and he became angry, jumped into the car, and left her.

Some time later, she said, Earl Charleston, 5452 North Paulina street, and Morton Neeham, 1836 Wilson avenue, drove up. She waved to them. They stopped and took her to the Summerdale police station.

Morse was taken to the station and was released on bonds.

Judge Caverly asserted more evidence was needed, and ordered the roadhouse owners and waiters brought in. The case is set for June 17.

MEETS LAWYER IN LOOP; THREATENS TO KILL HIM; JAIL

Ernest Stier, a waiter, 52 years old, 32 South Desplaines street, was arrested yesterday after he had threatened to kill Frank H. Stephens, an attorney, 155 North Clark street, at North Dearborn and West Madison streets.

With an oath, the waiter, unarmed, ran up to Stephens and cried out: "I'm going to kill you." Pedestrians and Traffic Policeman Maloney, who was stationed at the corner, grabbed Stier. He also threatened the life of Maloney, and when he was taken to the Central station, said he would kill John Sullivan, the lockup keeper, and Patrick Brady, the desk sergeant.

Stier will be examined for his sanity.

Forty Years Married Life Ends on Desertion Charge

Alfred L. Sproule, 819 Dempster street, Evanston, was granted a divorce yesterday from Mrs. Frances W. Sproule after he had told Judge Brothers in the Circuit court that she left him in February, 1917, and refused to return. "She left me after we had lived together for about forty years, going to visit my daughter in New York, and she has been there ever since," testified Sproule.

CATTLE PRICES DROP, BUT WHO GAINS IS RIDDLE

Meat Lower, Says Dealer —Live Stock Expert Denies It.

Since early in March there has been a decline in market quotations on beef, pork, mutton and other animal products. The drop in prices, it is declared, should represent a saving for consumers.

Everett C. Brown, president of the National and Chicago Live Stock exchange, says it does not.

Sol Westerfeld, former president of the Chicago Butchers' and Grocers' Retail association, says it does.

Here are both sides of the case:

"The profits which should result from recent declines in cattle prices have been eaten up by the retailer and the middleman," said Mr. Brown last night. "The manner in which the retailer has been taking the profits out of the mouths of those who really need it is nothing short of a calamity. It is a condition that should not be tolerated, that may put the farmers out of business and the average consumer farther on the way to the poorhouse. It breeds bolshevism in both classes.

How Both Are Hit.

"Here is an example of the way the producer and the consumer are hit. March cattle were quoted at $24. Last week top price was $16.25. Last Thursday it showed at $15.75.

"On June prices we can figure the average conservative decline on 250,000 head of cattle is $40 a head. This shows a total decline in round figures of $10,000,000. Yet the housewife is not benefited. She continues to pay the same prices as during the war. It's a shame."

Mr. Brown also stated sheep and lamb have gone off from $300 to $500 a car; hogs have declined with the last market quotations at approximately $250 to $350 a car. He says the retailer is taking the "cream."

The Retailer's Side.

On behalf of the retailers Mr. Westerfeld says:

"Although Mr. Brown is in a position to know conditions, he apparently does not. I have been observing the windows and have talked with meat dealers during the last week. I can state with authenticity they are selling their products at declines of from 2 to 4 cents under two weeks ago. I understand this is true throughout the country.

"The high cost of living is down and it will continue to decline. The housewife has realized it by this time. The prices in my market are lower than they have been at any time during the war.

"Mr. Brown may have some isolated cases in mind, but as a general rule he will find the retailer is not taking the profits.

Price War Is On.

"At present dealers all over the city are competing in an effort to get the trade of rivals by offering lower prices. This is bound to bring the prices still lower.

"The dealers are unable to price their products with current market quotations, because it takes nearly a week before they are able to get the meats being quoted. This may be one of the reasons Mr. Brown believes the retailers are not lowering their prices."

PROVIDE MORE DRASTIC RULE OVER PACKERS

Washington, D. C., June 7.—[Special.]—After a long series of conferences, members of the senate agriculture committee and the federal trade commission practically have agreed on the provisions of the new legislation to regulate the packing industry.

The framework of the old Kendrick bill will remain, but, in some respects, the measure will be made more drastic. The licensing scheme remains in the measure but in a modified form. The secretary of agriculture is authorized to suspend a license, but the right of appeal to the courts is granted to the packers. Pending the outcome of the appeal the suspension order is not effective.

Under the original bill the secretary of agriculture was authorized to suspend a license only after the licensee had been convicted of violation of the anti-trust laws. The federal trade commission contended this was wholly inadequate and urged the extension of blanket authority to some government agency to suspend licenses. The committee decided to compromise by making a suspension order effective only after the outcome of an appeal to the courts.

The new measure also provides for the taking over and operation of the stockyards by a federal corporation in case the packers are unable to dispose of the yards to interests divorced from the packing industry. The original Kendrick bill ordered the separation of the packers and the stockyards, but made no provision for the disposition of the yards.

The provision in the Kendrick bill for taking the refrigeration cars away from the packers remains.

The committee has under consideration the administration of a new section establishing public markets under federal license throughout the country for the benefit of the consumers. The recent announcement of the war department of its inability to market 350,000,000 pounds of surplus meats prompted the drafting of this section.

The revised bill probably will be ready for introduction in the senate some time next week.

Tag Days for Two Charities Will Be Held on June 16

Two tag days will be held June 16—one for the Chicago Woman's shelter, 1356 West Monroe street, an institution which provides a "temporary home for the stranded, out of work girls and women," and the Frances E. Willard National Temperance hospital, 710 South Lincoln street.

50 YEARS WEDDED

Celebrate Golden Anniversary in Home Occupied 36 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ostrom

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Ostrom are celebrating their golden wedding anniversary today in their home at 2832 Palmer street. They have lived at that address for thirty-six years. They have lived in Chicago since before the big fire, at which time they were "burned out." They have two daughters, Miss Hazel Ostrom, and Mrs. Olga Sorensen, wife of Samuel Sorensen, 2510 North Rockwell street. There are three grandchildren, Jeannette, William, and Nellie Sorensen.

Y. W. C. A. WORK HELPS DOWN RED FLAG, SAYS WOOD

"Nothing has added more to the content of soldiers in cantonments than the hostess houses maintained by the Young Women's Christian association," said Maj. Gen. Leonard A. Wood yesterday at the luncheon of Y. W. C. A. campaigners in the Hotel Sherman.

"In these days when chaos threatens anything you can do to add to the contentment is so much toward stabilizing things. In its plan for providing girls happiness and recreation in their leisure hours the association is doing as much for the cities as it has done for those in camp.

"There is no room here for more than one flag; by keeping conditions right, as the Y. W. C. A. aims to do in aiding the city's young women, the danger of the red flag is removed."

Yesterday's total of subscriptions was $54,599, making the total $247,295. The drive will continue until Wednesday noon.

DIG IN ON LAKE SHORE DRIVE SOON

They start this week to dig in on the Lake Shore drive—the diggers to be Italian children from the Twenty-first and Twenty-second wards. Victory gardens are to flourish from their tending, there are to be prizes for the youngsters, and more than a half mile of the tract south of Oak street will be tilled.

Miss Rebecca Gallery, chairman of the garden committee, announced the plans yesterday.

Mrs. George Higginson Jr., Mrs. W. J. Chalmers, Mrs. Addison Stilwell, Miss Carolyn Kirkland, and Mrs. Robert H. McCormick compose the committee.

RESIDENTS GO BACK TO HOMES IN REIMS RUINS

Return to Wreckage of War Torn City by Thousands.

BY FAITH HUNTER DODGE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Special Correspondence.]

PARIS, May 24.—Chicago, second American city in point of size, and second to none in its desire to prove itself American, has made known its wish to take on a colossal task as its voluntary part in the reconstruction of devastated France. Its citizens have cabled the minister of the liberated regions asking that they be allowed to adopt the city of Reims.

The committee named to push the project is composed of Max Pam, chairman, senior member of the law firm of Pam & Hurd; Charles L. Hutchinson, vice president of the Corn Exchange National bank and president of the Art institute; R. T. Crane of the Crane company; Archibald Freer, author; Edward F. Dunne, ex-governor of the state, and 100 other prominent Chicagoans.

Reims has 10,000 of its homes completely destroyed, its cathedral in ruins, its commerce and industry wiped out.

Returning to Homes.

Parts of many houses are still standing; the fronts have been so boarded and bricked that they are again quite respectable—from the street. People wherever possible are returning to their shattered homes, covering the holes in the stone and plaster, and putting tar paper where the tile roofs used to be. Besides their furniture and trees and gardens, their business and their bank accounts are gone.

The streets of Reims have been kept in constant repair. Having been mended with old stones, it is hard to believe in passing over them that they have been full of big shell holes. And still there is enough of ruin, ashes, dust, and destruction. The ground is covered deep with broken stones, balls, cartridges, shells, and fragments of shells, grenades, and barbed wire. THE TRIBUNE correspondent, convoyed by three doughboys from the middle west and a troop of French children, saw the latter pick up German hand grenades, which they toyed with and offered as souvenirs—until the doughboys yelled, the grenades were thrown down, and the correspondent involuntarily sprinted a winning Marathon. Fortunately none of the machines of hell exploded, but there they are in the shell holes and cellars of unoccupied houses waiting for children to come and find out what they are.

Many Are Back.

Almost 2,000 families—of the 115,000 former inhabitants of Reims—have come back to struggle with a thousand difficulties and obstacles in an attempt to forge a new existence among the ruins of their firesides. Today there are 300 boys and girls in the city schools.

But the work is not finished. Just ten years ago I watched 3,000 tiny boys and girls march by the statue of Joan of Arc in front of the Reims cathedral and drop bouquets of flowers at the feet of Dubois' great masterpiece.

There were three thousand of them then! Not all of them will return to Reims. In one deserted, torn, and broken house we saw bits of earthen ware, vases of fine porcelain and glass, hanging from the second story fireplaces, open to the four winds, and a cradle with its hand embroidered sheets and pillow cases left precipitately by its little owner. In the garret were samples of lace made by childish hands. A pretty doll which had lost its left arm and the rosy paint from off its cheeks was wondering why its mother didn't come. I picked it up and kissed its dusty hair. And not a doughboy laughed. For a neighbor had told us the little girl who used to live in that house was killed by a shell, which entered the unoffending roof, passed through the ceilings, and exploded in the quiet garden.

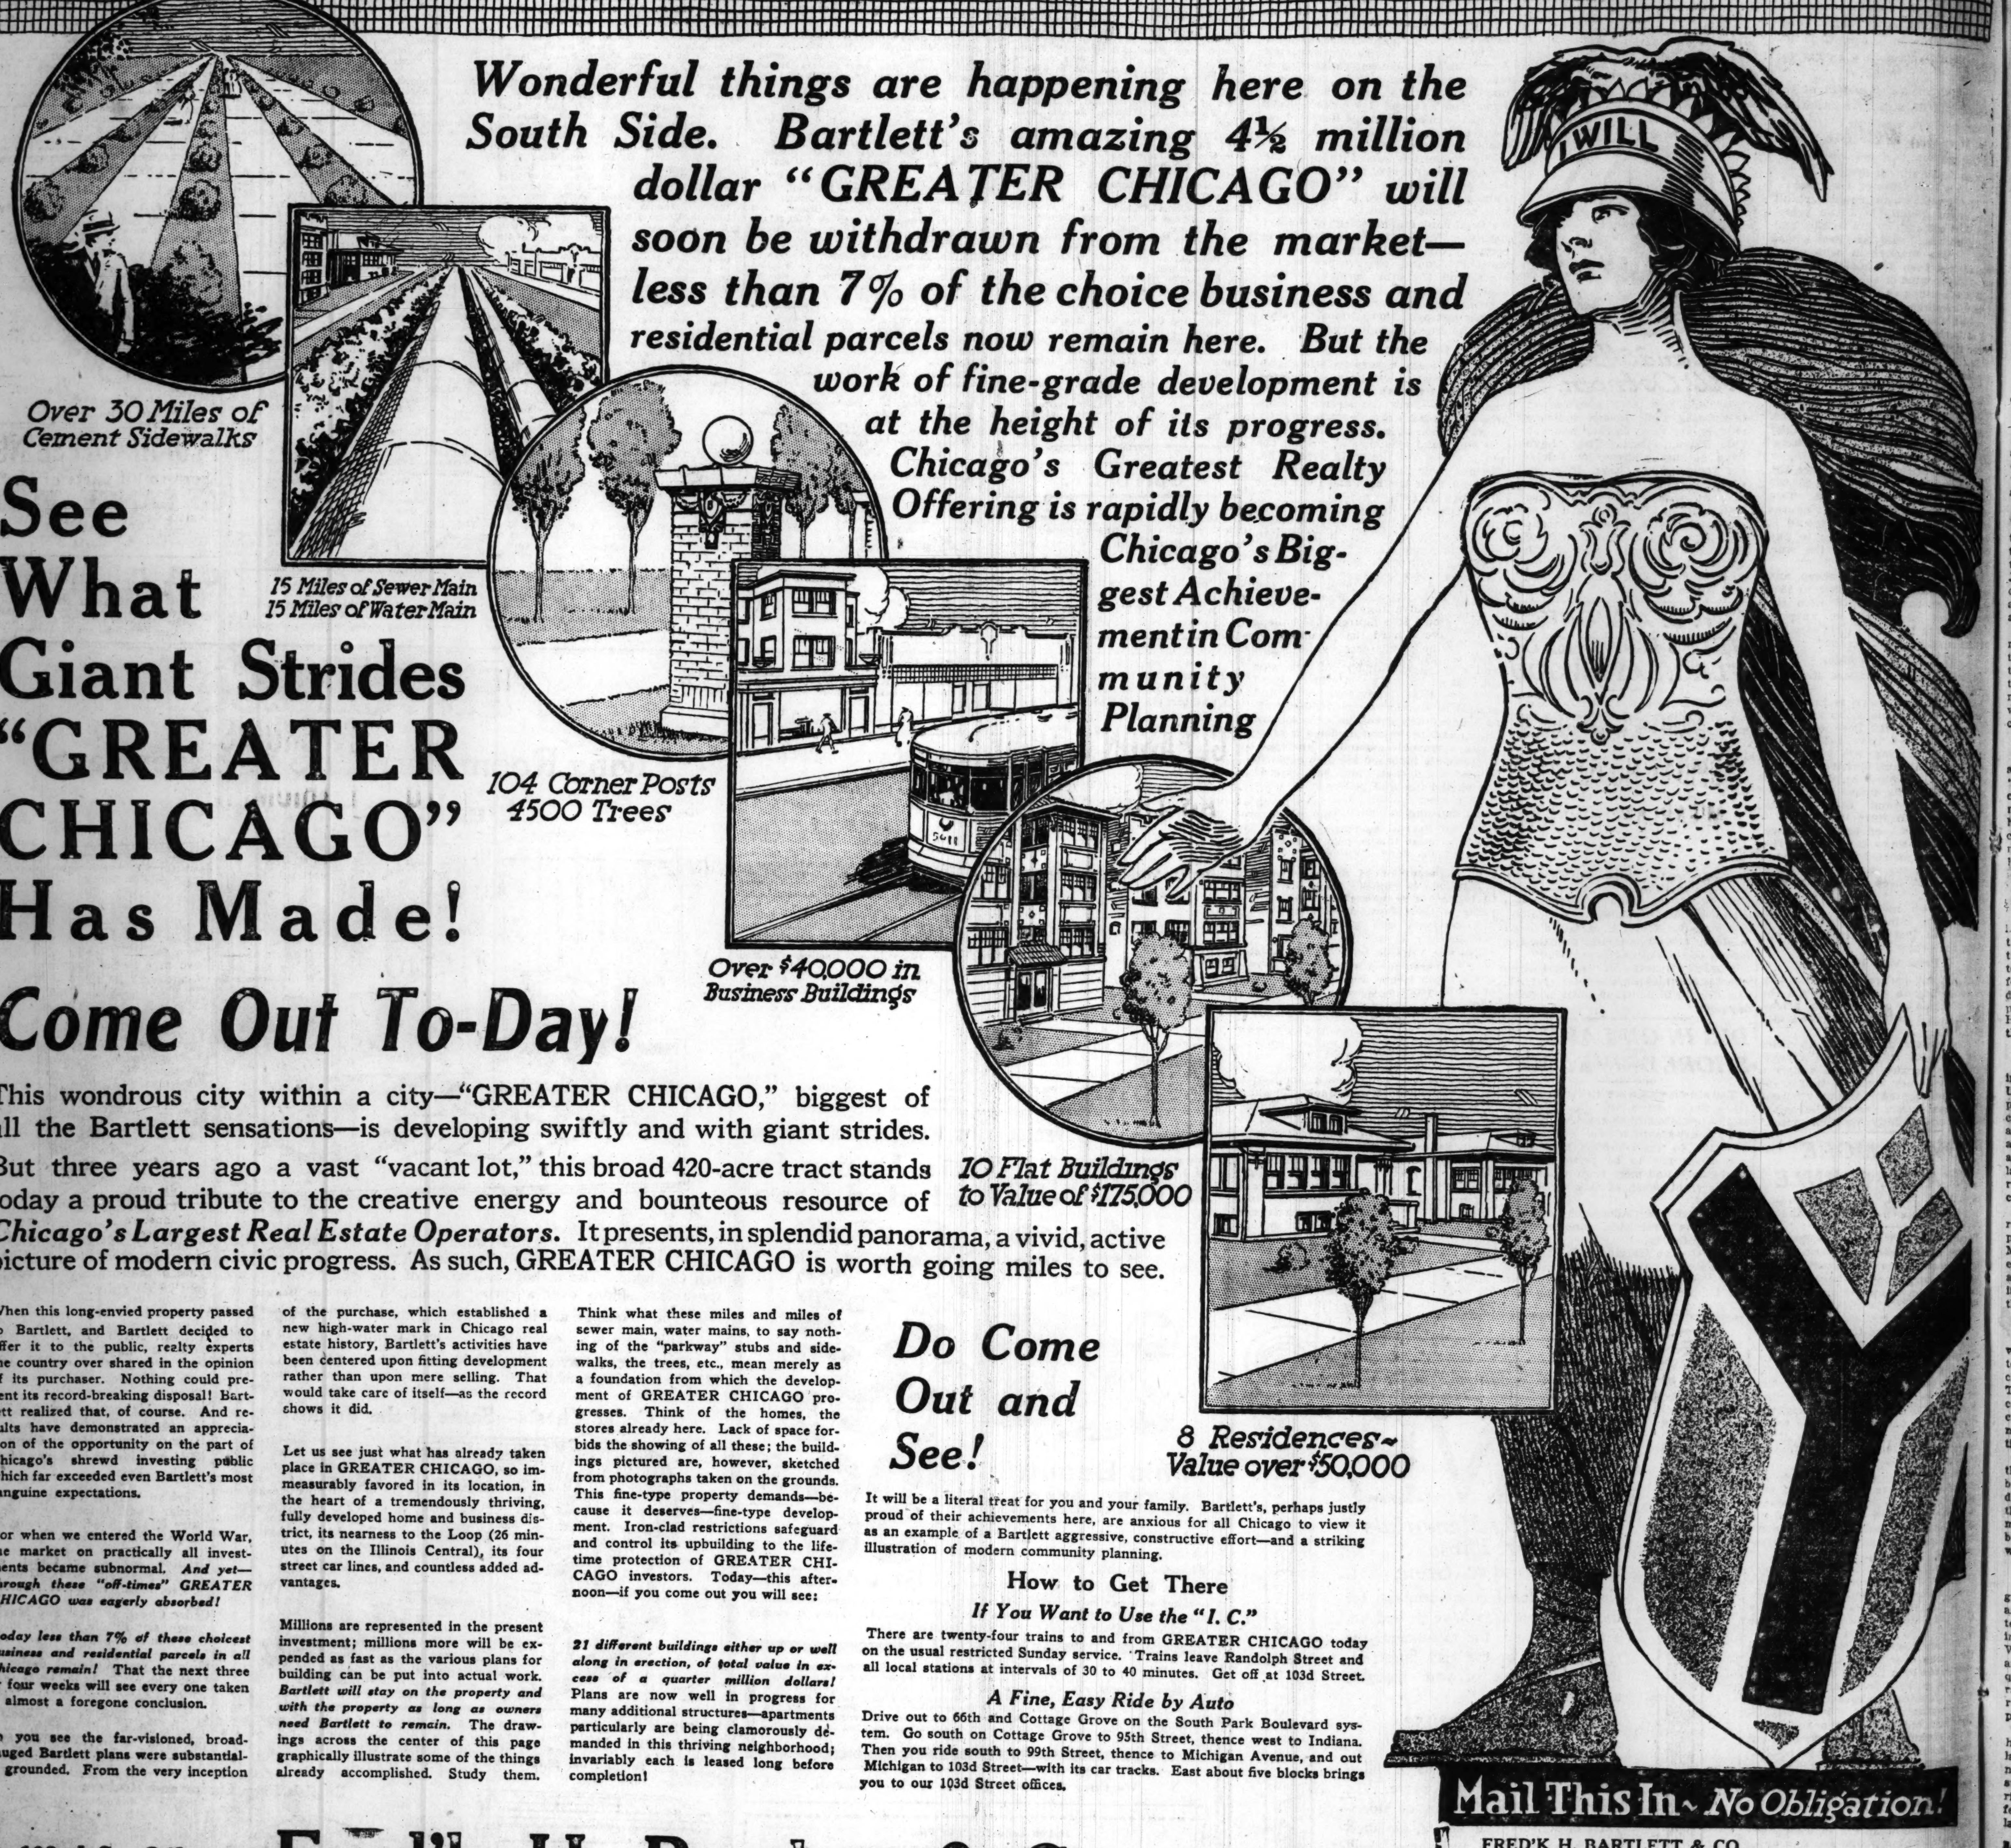
The "City" that Bartlett is Building

Wonderful things are happening here on the South Side. Bartlett's amazing 4½ million dollar "GREATER CHICAGO" will soon be withdrawn from the market—less than 7% of the choice business and residential parcels now remain here. But the work of fine-grade development is at the height of its progress. Chicago's Greatest Realty Offering is rapidly becoming Chicago's Biggest Achievement in Community Planning



Over 30 Miles of Cement Sidewalks

15 Miles of Sewer Main
15 Miles of Water Main

104 Corner Posts
4500 Trees

Over $40,000 in Business Buildings

10 Flat Buildings to Value of $175,000

8 Residences—Value over $50,000

See What Giant Strides "GREATER CHICAGO" Has Made!

Come Out To-Day!

This wondrous city within a city—"GREATER CHICAGO," biggest of all the Bartlett sensations—is developing swiftly and with giant strides. But three years ago a vast "vacant lot," this broad 420-acre tract stands today a proud tribute to the creative energy and bounteous resource of Chicago's Largest Real Estate Operators. It presents, in splendid panorama, a vivid, active picture of modern civic progress. As such, GREATER CHICAGO is worth going miles to see.

When this long-envied property passed to Bartlett, and Bartlett decided to offer it to the public, realty experts the country over shared in the opinion of its purchaser. Nothing could prevent its record-breaking disposal! Bartlett realized that, of course. And results have demonstrated an appreciation of the opportunity on the part of Chicago's shrewd investing public which far exceeded even Bartlett's most sanguine expectations.

For when we entered the World War, the market on practically all investments became subnormal. And yet—through these "off-times" GREATER CHICAGO was eagerly absorbed!

Today less than 7% of these choicest business and residential parcels in all Chicago remain!* That the next three or four weeks will see every one taken is almost a foregone conclusion.

So you see the far-visioned, broad-gauged Bartlett plans were substantially grounded. From the very inception of the purchase, which established a new high-water mark in Chicago real estate history, Bartlett's activities have been centered upon fitting development rather than upon mere selling. That would take care of itself—as the record shows it did.

Let us see just what has already taken place in GREATER CHICAGO, so immeasurably favored in its location, in the heart of a tremendously thriving, fully developed home and business district, its nearness to the Loop (26 minutes on the Illinois Central), its four street car lines, and countless added advantages.

Millions are represented in the present investment; millions more will be expended as fast as the various plans for building can be put into actual work. Bartlett will stay on the property and with the property as long as owners need Bartlett to remain. The drawings across the center of this page graphically illustrate some of the things already accomplished. Study them.

Think what these miles and miles of sewer main, water mains, to say nothing of the "parkway" stubs and sidewalks, the trees, etc., mean merely as a foundation from which the development of GREATER CHICAGO progresses. Think of the homes, the stores already here. Lack of space forbids the showing of all these; the buildings pictured are, however, sketched from photographs taken on the grounds. This fine-type property demands—because it deserves—fine-type development. Iron-clad restrictions safeguard and control its upbuilding to the lifetime protection of GREATER CHICAGO investors. Today—this afternoon—if you come out you will see:

21 different buildings either up or well along in erection, of total value in excess of a quarter million dollars!* Plans are now well in progress for many additional structures—apartments particularly are being clamorously demanded in this thriving neighborhood; invariably each is leased long before completion!

Do Come Out and See!

It will be a literal treat for you and your family. Bartlett's, perhaps justly proud of their achievements here, are anxious for all Chicago to view it as an example of a Bartlett aggressive, constructive effort—and a striking illustration of modern community planning.

MICHIGAN TAKES RECORD MEET, WITH JOHNSON BRIGHT STAR

OCEANS OF RAIN ROB RING RIVALS OF ARENA DRILL

Copious Leakage Prevents Willard and Dempsey from Workouts.

BY RAY PEARSON.

Toledo, O., June 7.—[Special.]—It rained—O, how it rained in Toledo today. Anybody who thinks this fight town is dry is badly mistaken. There may be a bunch of dry throats, but that's a more or less internal condition due to legislative action. Externally atmospherical conditions were favorable for the webfoots.

A few paragraphs will suffice to tell of the doings at the training camps of Champion Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey, for the copious leakage knocked out the program at both camps. Light exercise, indoor work alone, was possible, for outdoor work was out of the question. About the only beneficial work done by either Willard or Dempsey was the morning roadwork.

Rain Disappoints Fans.

There were some five hundred interested fans who had decided to spend their Saturday half holiday watching these big fellows who are to battle on July 4. They landed at the champion's camp early, for Jess does his ring work at 2:30, while Dempsey goes into action at 3:30.

Willard had donned his togs and was ready to travel from his quarters to the ring when the skies darkened and the deluge came. The disappointed throng willing to part with the five jitney pieces was keenly disappointed. So was Willard, for in these days no one can afford to snub a two-bit piece.

Jess Regrets Loss of Workout.

Willard wasn't as much disappointed at losing the coin as he was at being "gypped" out of his workout. Jess cannot afford to miss a day between now and the date of the battle, for he has a world of work to do to get in condition. No one realizes that fact more than the champion himself, and he showed it when he dressed and left the camp for his living quarters in Toledo west end, where he is living in an exclusive section.

Dempsey also was disappointed, but his physical condition right now is such that a day lost to training now and then will do no harm. Jack refused to be knocked out of all his exercise, for aside from the roadwork and indoor stuff he found rowing just as appropriate in damp weather as in clear. He pulled an oar for a spell, for he thinks rowing great sport.

Fans to Travel in Planes.

In one way this championship is going to be a bit different from others. Unless things fail to pan out as expected some rabid fight followers will come to Toledo by aeroplane. It looked as if Tex Rickard, who is busier than a young hornet these days, will have a new job on his hands in finding a landing field for these flying fans. Already three applications have been received for "parking space."

Investigation by city authorities has revealed the information that the aeroplane fans may land on an island in Maumee bay. This island is considered of sufficient size to accommodate a huge number of machines. However, it hasn't been definitely decided that the island will be the landing spot.

Fears Tumble from Skies.

Frank Flournoy, associate promoter with Rickard, had an interesting interview today with a young man who claims to be an expert cloud sweeper. This young man is seeking a job which consists of flying over Toledo and principally over the arena on the afternoon of July 4 and dropping advertising literature on the assembled fans. Flournoy listened with politeness, then said: "The idea may be all right, but you might make the mistake of dropping yourself and the literature on the ringside fellows. Why, that would mess up the whole party. I'm sorry, but I guess it would be too late, so we'll not make any decision now."

Strike Situation Serious.

The strike situation in Toledo has grown to serious proportions, but Rickard, Flournoy, and others actively interested in the championship see nothing ahead to interfere with the fight. With the employés of the Overland automobile plant out and riots of frequent occurrence, disturbance in the ranks of the restaurant waiters and railway employés, the industrial field presents anything but a peaceful front.

The news today that an injunction had been secured enabling the Overland people to put their men to work next week indicated the possibility that such action might result in further rioting. In case of this it is said federal troops will be called and martial law declared.

Miske to Fight Levinsky Near Toledo on July 3

Toledo, O., June 7.—Billy Miske, the St. Paul light heavyweight, and Battling Levinsky of New York, have been matched for a twelve round contest at Rossford, just outside of Toledo, on the night of July 3. An open air arena seating 10,000 persons will be erected.

Toledo FIGHT NOTES

Toledo, O., June 7.—[Special.]—Tex Rickard left for New York today to attend to some oil business.

Jess Willard has not yet picked a mascot for his camp.

One of the surprising things at the training camps is the number of women who have been out to see the workouts of both Willard and Dempsey.

Larney Lichtenstein of Chicago is here, but he won't tell what he's here for. It is hinted he has landed the lemo concession for the arena.

The ticket sale continues fair, and everybody seems satisfied there won't be many vacant seats on July 4, for there is plenty of time to dispose of a lot of ducats. The sale is over the $300,000 mark.

They are laughing around Toledo about that alleged knockdown of Jess Willard in his workout with Jack Hemple. Jess wasn't knocked down—in fact Hemple was four feet away from him when Jess' heel caught in a loose section of the canvas, tripping him and causing him to sit down.

RICKARD RING JUDGE, COMBAT NO DECISION, M'FARLAND PREDICTS

Joliet, Ill., June 7.—[Special.]—Packey McFarland thinks Jess Willard will retain his title in that little affair over at Toledo on July 4. Packey today said there wasn't much chance of the big fellow losing his crown when he meets the challenger.

Packey also thinks Tex Rickard will referee. He predicts that at the last minute it will be announced the affair will be a no-decision bout and that there will be either another match or Jess will retire and turn his title over to the challenger.

Match Doesn't Excite Him.

Packey spoke right out and said he did not think an awful lot of the title match.

"Jess Willard has just finished a motion picture out west. That picture, so far as I know, has not been released. If Willard loses his crown the picture is not going to be worth much. If he retains the title, the movie should go big.

"They made the bout over the twelve round route because Willard cannot possibly be beaten in that time. He can stay from Dempsey that long, and all he has to do is cover up his midriff and he won't take any punishment.

Forecasts No Decision Bout.

"I have an idea that in a week or so they'll announce from Toledo that owing to the opposition of the ministers, etc., and to show opponents that it is not a pugilistic contest, but an exhibition of boxing, no decision will be given. That will protect Willard's title.

"Another thing. They haven't agreed on a referee. The bout is only about three weeks away and they are not even talking of selecting an official. There are lots of good men for the job. Matt Hinkel, Ed Smith, and scores of other capable men are available. Why don't they pick one of them?

See Rickard as Referee.

"I'd bet the Masonic temple against a doughnut that Tex Rickard will be the third man in the ring. They'll say they cannot agree on a referee, and will compromise on Rickard, just as they did at the Johnson-Jeffries affair. And Rickard knows as much about refereeing a prize fight as I do about editing a newspaper.

"The newspapers, as usual, probably will have to decide the winner; then, of course, it will not be official. If it ends in a draw, or if there is no decision, another bout will be arranged. Or, maybe, Willard, in a couple of months, will tell Dempsey he is the most likely man in the heavy class and turn the title over to him.

Suggests Twenty Round Scrap.

"The best way to have established the public's faith in the bout would have been to stage a twenty round affair, pick the referee right away, and go to it."

Packey is going to assist Navy Rostan, the Joliet welterweight, who will meet Jock Malone of St. Paul in the semi-windup at Toledo, to train for the affair. McFarland says Rostan is the hardest hitting welter he has seen in years.

J. Ritchie, Back from War, Will Run Meet for Scots

Joe Ritchie, former president of the Central A. A. U., who served with the engineers in France, will have charge of the Scottish A. A. U. track and field games at Riverview park on July 4. Entry blanks will be issued this week and all entries will close with Ritchie at 4313 Cottage Grove avenue.

HERE'S THE DOPE ON RIVAL BOXERS BY TAPE MEASURE

Willard's Reach 5 Inches Longer than Dempsey's; Weight 258 and 192.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Toledo, O., June 7.—[Special.]—Imagine two huge specimens of mankind, one standing 6 feet 6 inches skyward and the other extending 6 feet 1½ inches.

That is a picture of how Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey will look when they square off for the battle, which promises to be one of the greatest title combats in history. That matter of height presents a strong contrast, but possibly not as great as the weight machine will show. Willard weighs 258 pounds, Dempsey 192.

Jess' Reach Is 83 Inches.

The official measurements as given out at the training camps, the only tape figures that will be permitted for publication, show that Willard and Dempsey compare favorably in few respects. In reach the champion stretches from finger tip to finger tip just eighty-three inches. That's five inches more than Dempsey measures in this particular.

With the advantage in height and reach, most folks are prone to concede a great advantage in favor of the champion. It is figured the challenger will have a hard time reaching Jess' chin if he stands erect while battling. It is doped that Jack may find it hard to get inside Willard's guard because of his superior reach.

Chest Measures 46 Inches.

Now take the matter of chest measurements. Willard displays a 46 inch chest normal; expanded, the figures show 49½ inches, a 3½ inch expansion. Dempsey has a 42 inch chest and a 46 inch expansion.

But it isn't the chest that's going to win this fight. The arms, which propel the terrific punches, will tell the story, and in this respect there is some interesting dope. Willard has a biceps development of 16 inches. Dempsey measures 14 inches. Each has a forearm of 14 inches; this is where the punching force comes from, so they are on equal terms.

Now the wrist, the big aid to the forearm. Folks who read this may be prepared for a surprise, for Dempsey has a larger wrist than the champion. The place where Jack wears his watch measures 9 inches, ½ inch more than Willard's.

Neck Sizes Almost Equal.

It's almost neck and neck between them in the collar measurement. Willard has a 17¼ inch neck, one-quarter of an inch more than Jack. The tape shows Willard's waist is six inches larger than Dempsey's, the champion being 38 inches around. There's two inches difference in the thigh of these two big fellows, Willard being bigger with 25 inches.

Here's another point that is surprising. Dempsey has an ankle the same size as Willard's, each measuring nine inches.

Let the man who tries to pick winners consider that Jess Willard is spotting Jack Dempsey thirteen years and that Dempsey in return meets the physical advantages held by Willard, including some fifty-eight pounds in weight. There's something that requires tall thinking.

PENN SPRINTERS SET FOUR MARKS IN RELAY RACES

Philadelphia, Pa., June 7.—Four world's records were broken today at the Meadowbrook games on Franklin field when four University of Pennsylvania sprinters lowered the relay figures in the 400 meter, 440 yard, 800 meter, and 880 yard events.

The records for the 800 meter and the 880 yard events were the first to go. W. C. Haymond, F. S. Davis, Sherman Landers, and E. W. Smith, running for Pennsylvania, won the 880 yard race. Two strings were put up, one at 800 meters and the other at 880 yards, and two sets of timers were used. The time of the Pennsylvania quartet was 1:26 1-5 for the 800 meters.

The new time for the 880 yards was 1:27 4-5, breaking the old record of 1:29 2-5, made by a University of Chicago team in 1915.

The new figures for the 440 yards are :42 3-5, against the old figures of :44, made by the Chicago Athletic association team in the Amateur Athletic union championships of 1917, and in which Landers was one of the runners.

Joie Ray of the Illinois Athletic club failed in two trys to break the world's record for the miles. His best time was 4:17 3-5.

The John W. Overton Memorial one mile run, the feature of the meet, was won by Ray in 4:17 3-5. J. Connelly, Boston A. A., was second and Robert Crawford, Lafayette college, third. Ray was awarded first place on a time basis, though he came in second to Connelly. He conceded forty yards to Connelly and sixty to Crawford of Lafayette college.

QUINN SUBDUES GLEASON'S TRIBE AS YANKEES WIN

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—Jack Quinn, the husky spitball pitcher who was taken away from the White Sox by the national commission last winter, suppressed Gleason's pennant aspirants today while the Yanks pounded and thumped Claude Williams and won the second combat of the series, 6 to 4.

The game wasn't as close as the score indicates. After the Yanks had staged a bombardment in the sixth inning for a cluster of three runs they had little to fear. Until the eighth round the Sox had made only two safe swats off Quinn's spitter, and the four swats and two runs which were added in the last two innings were quite harmless.

Yanks' Barrage Stops Sox.

Only for five innings was Williams able to keep the Chicagoans in the fight. The Yanks poled a run in the second, but the Sox got one in the fourth and another in the fifth by most timely hitting.

It looked like a hurlers' duel until the sixth began, and then in a jiffy the Yanks went over the top and carried everything before them. Four solid smacks and a sacrifice fly did the business and with three men over they held command of the field.

Williams gave his place at bat to a pinch hitter in the eighth and Dave Danforth came in to finish, but the Yanks hammered his southpaw slants for another brace of runs and clinched the victory.

Weaver Clouts Home Run.

In the eighth Buck Weaver poled a homer into the right wing of the grand stand, and in the ninth three singles by Jackson, Gandil, and Schalk drove in another; but there still was need of two runs to tie.

On the whole, Gleason's top liners looked bad. They were weak at the bat and their fielding was bad. They were outguessed and outplayed.

BE FRANK TAKES LATONIA DERBY BY TWO LENGTHS

Latonia, Ky., June 7.—The blue, copper shoulder straps, and copper cap, colors of C. M. Garrison of New York, flashed under the wire first today in the thirty-seventh Latonia Derby, when Be Frank, well handled by Jockey C. Kummer, outran and outgamed what is considered by horsemen to be the aristocracy of western 3 year old thoroughbreds.

The son of Sir John Johnson, out of Frankness, really had little trouble in disposing of his field when called upon. Two lengths of daylight showed between him and Omond, which finished second, when the final tape was passed.

Hot Race for Place Honors.

The contest for the second place was more spirited. Regalo, well up during the entire one and one-half mile journey, fought it out nobly, but tired at the end and was beaten halft a length. Vulcanite was fourth and saved his entrance money for his owner.

Clermont finished fifth, Eternal sixth, Pastoureau seventh, and St. Bernard last.

Be Frank was one of the two eastern horses to start. Eternal, from the stable of J. M. McClelland, ridden by an eastern jockey, Schuttinger, was the other. Six western entries faced the barrier.

Eternal Leads for Mile.

Eternal for a time looked to be a winner. He assumed the lead at the drop of the barrier and it was not until after the mile pole had been reached that Be Frank and Regalo, ridden by Murphy, managed to poke their noses in front of him.

From there on Eternal dropped back and Thurber on Omond made his move. He wore down Regalo and set sail for Be Frank, but Kummer let out a wrap on his mount and Omond could not reduce the distance. But Regalo came again and Kummer had to ride hard to stall off Murphy's mount.

In capturing the event Be Frank brought home $16,160 to his owner.

CORN TASSEL WINS SUBURBAN IN RECORD TIME

New York, June 7.—Over a track lightning fast, R. G. Wilson's 5 year old gelding, Corn Tassel, by Santoi-Cornfield, won the classic suburban at one mile and a quarter at Belmont Park today. The value of the stake was $5,200. The gelding, after a ding-dong driving finish all through the final furlong, just nosed out W. R. Coe's 3 year old colt, Sweep On, with Commander J. K. L. Ross' Boniface third, a length and a half away. The winner's time, 2:02 1-5, is really a record for this race, as the official time of 2:00 flat, credited to Whisk Broom II., when he won this event in 1913, was not generally accepted.

DOUGLAS HURLS AND BATS BRUINS TO 2-1 TRIUMPH

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Phillip (Brooks) Douglas broke into the personally conducted victory class yesterday when the Cubs executed a 2 to 1 triumph over Boston's Braves in the second game of their local set.

Shuffling Phil held the invaders down to one earned run with the help of some rather chummy support by his teammates and drove in the winning tally in the fortuitous fifth inning after a fumble by Riggert had put the run within easy scoring distance. Without the aid of said fumble they might have battled till twilight without a decision.

Bunch Hits Off Nehf.

The Chicago attack was concentrated into the fifth round when half the hits off Nehf were registered. One was down when Deal delivered his second safety. It was a whistling single to center. Killefer liked the sound of it and whistled one in the same direction. This time Riggert let the ball filter through his limbs and before it could be recovered Sergt. Bill was on third base and Deal was over the pan.

Douglas slammed a liner over Herzog's head for a single, scoring Killefer. Flack forced Phil out and Lear rolled the side out.

Deal Poles Two Bagger.

Nehf had the numbers of the Cubs so well checked up that they did practically nothing in the other rounds they faced him. Deal had the only real punch on the home side. In addition to leading the winning rally in the fifth he peeled off a noisy two bagger over Riggert's head in the second inning.

Douglas allowed just half a dozen swats and would have blanked his opponents, but they bunched a double and single on him in the third. Wilson opened with the two bagger and stuck around second watching Merkle pinch Nehf's popup and Mann steal a long drive from Riggert by a fine running catch. Just as Art was losing heart Herzog delivered a safe punch to left and by sprinting hard Wilson registered ahead of Mann's peg to the pan.

Lear Makes Leaping Catch.

Lear was shoved in at second base in Pick's place so as to give the Cubs another right handed batsman against Nehf and King covered himself with medals in the fourth by a leaping feat which enabled him to spear a liner which Cruise meant for at least a two bagger.

Flack came to the rescue in the eighth with a helova play which kept the Braves from knotting the count. Riggert led off with a vicious bump which hit the wall back of Max. The runner tried to make three bases on it, but Flack overtook the rebounding ball and, without straightening up, hurled it to third in time to nip the visitor by a small margin. Herzog followed with a fly long enough to have scored Riggert from third if he had reached there.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Led by Carl Johnson, one of the most versatile athletes produced by American colleges—a performer who established new records in two events and carried off individual honors with twenty points—Steve Farrell's University of Michigan all-around team won the nineteenth annual track and field games of the Western Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association yesterday on Stagg field with 44½ points.

Coach Stagg's Maroons, who gave the Wolverines an uphill fight during the early stages of the meet, were second with 34 points. Illinois, with Buchheit and Wilson doing the heavy scoring in the field events, was third with 22 points. Notre Dame, represented by a sterling sprinter in Bill Hayes, who won both dashes, was fourth with 21 points.

Crowd Is a Record Also.

The 8,000 spectators who turned out to see the event made the largest which ever attended the western college classic in Chicago. The crowd was rewarded by seeing some of the best competition of recent years, and in Johnson saw the greatest athlete who ever wore the Maize and Blue of Michigan.

The well matched caliber of the field can be gleaned from the fact that sixteen of the twenty-five entered institutions broke into the point column. The athletes in most events performed as expected and only one dark horse upset the dope.

Dark Horse Beats Michigan Leader.

Capt. Sedgwick, who ran his last race for Michigan, was beaten in the two mile by Foreman of the Kansas Aggies in the comparatively slow time of 9:50 2-5. Foreman had not shown anything in previous meets to warrant a victory over the Wolverine leader. Sedgwick, however, had spent his efforts in the mile.

Performances of other athletes were overshadowed by the scintillating work of Johnson. This athlete went about his business in a matter of fact way, but it was evident he had his events well outlined in advance. He conserved his energy in the field events by taking as few jumps as necessary to qualify, while he ran just fast enough to get into the finals of both hurdle races.

Pressed to High Jump Record.

Johnson's first record breaking performance was in the running high jump. The Wolverine star was apparently worried by the excellent jumping of Paige of Ames, who used a diving form of jumping which was just within the rules. After both athletes had cleared the bar at six feet, the pegs were raised one inch at a time.

Both performers cleared the bar at six feet one inch, but Paige could not get over when it was raised to six feet two inches. Johnson cleared it easily at this height and it was placed three inches above the six foot mark. Getting a perfect takeoff, Johnson cleared the bar like a bird.

The Michigan athlete was content with this jump and did not try a higher one. The leap was officially measured and the height announced as 6 feet 2¼ inches. This breaks the former conference record of 6 feet 1¼ inches made by Robert Wahl of Wisconsin in 1914. Paige's height was announced as 6 feet ¼ inch.

Breaks Own Broad Jump Mark.

Going into his next event, the broad jump, Johnson did not take any chances. As he was well aware of the fact his preliminary jump would count just the same as his best leap in the finals, the Wolverine got a perfect takeoff on his second trial and landed 24 feet 1 inch away from the takeoff. This mark beat his own record of 23 feet 11¼ inches made in last year's conference.

Aside from winning these events Johnson took both hurdles races.

Outside of Johnson's great work, the sprinting of Bill Hayes of Notre Dame was the next noteworthy. This athlete, who is large for a sprinter, won the century in :09 4-5, and the furlong in :22 3-5. He was not pushed in either race, and was by far the best dash man on the field.

Nebraskan's Finish Wins Relay.

Nebraska, which won the one mile relay in the Penn and Drake relay games, captured the event in yesterday's event through the great running of its anchor man, McMahon. Chicago looked like an early winner after the first three relays had been covered. Curtiss, the first Maroon runner, gave Kennedy a fifteen yard lead. Kennedy held the advantage, while Harris lost five yards on the third relay. The baton then was handed to Speer and it looked like a certain Chicago victory.

McMahon, smarting under his defeat in the quarter mile, tore after Speer like a wild man. He caught the Maroon at the head of the back stretch and raced stride for stride to the final turn. As they came around the bend

McMahon dug his spikes into the cinders with greater effort, passed the fast tiring Speer, and breasted the tape five yards in advance of Illinois, which won the position by a foot over Chicago. Minnesota was fourth.

Curtiss Races Perfect 440.

The quarter mile resulted in an excellent victory for Curtiss of Chicago, who ran the most perfect race of his career. Starting fifth position from the pole, the Maroon won the race to the first turn, took the pole, and never was in danger of defeat. His time was :49 1 5. Coach Harry Gill of Illinois showed wise judgment by pulling Emery out of the race and saving him for the 220 yard dash.

The weight events resulted as expected, with Gilfillan, Notre Dame, winning the discus, Baker of Michigan the shot, and Wilson of Illinois, the javelin. Smith of Michigan beat out Wilson of Illinois for first place in the hammer throw. Graham of Chicago, favorite in the pole vault, could not do better than twelve feet and had to be content with a tie with Buchheit of Illinois for first place.

Meet a Great Pageant.

Col. John V. Clinnin of the Prairie division, acted as one of the officials, who made a strong impression upon the spectators by parading around the field before the meet. They were clad in white trousers and hats and blue coats. They drew up in front of the stand as the band played "The Star Spangled Banner."

The meet was well run, and was one of the most successful of recent years. The perfect announcing system employed by Capt. Steele shows track and field athletics can be made an interesting spectacle if properly promoted.

Wounded soldiers from local hospitals were guests of the managing committee and hundreds of service men in uniform were in attendance.

Notes of the Meet

Carl Johnson is a junior at Michigan and eligible to compete next year. He undoubtedly will be elected captain of next year's team.

From the stands it looked as if Moore ran McCosh's race in the mile. When Moore caught the Maroon leader at the start of the turn on the back stretch of the fifth lap, he apparently told McCosh to step out. At any rate, Chicago's captain went out and took the lead, while Moore held down second place.

When the band played "The Star Spangled Banner" some of the officials did not stand at attention or even remove their hats. The athletes, however, had not forgotten their military training. They stopped all practice to stand at attention.

The defeat of Capt. Sedgwick in the two mile was a bitter disappointment to Coach Farrell, who had hoped the captain would win his last race for Michigan.

Capt. McCosh competed for the last time for Chicago. He won his specialty, the one mile, and tried to come back in the two mile. A tie for third place was the best he could get.

A band composed of Chicago students helped furnish music, which helped considerably to take up the time between events.

Prizes were presented to the victorious athletes by Avery Brundage, president of the graduate managing committee.

Coaches were not allowed on the field. They sat in groups in the stand, but watched every event with intense interest.

Notre Dame alumni were out in force and gave more cheers than any other delegation of alumni of other colleges.

Wallie McCornack, former Dartmouth and Northwestern football coach, saw his first conference meet in five years.

BIG TEN PLACES SERVICE MEN IN INELIGIBLE CLASS

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Western conference service athletes who failed to register at some college before they entered the service will not be eligible for competition this fall. This was the edict handed down yesterday by the faculty committee of the Western Intercollegiate Conference Atheltic association at its June meeting at the Auditorium.

At a special meeting of the committee on Dec. 7, 1918, it was voted to allow students' time spent in the service to count the same as if they were in college. This resolution, the committee ruled, applied only to those students who had registered and then were sent to some training camp or overseas.

Text of the Ruling.

The following ruling was adopted by the committee:

Resolutions of Dec. 7, 1918, shall not change or modify the operation of rules 2 and 3 of the eligibility code.

Rule 2 reads: No person who has participated as a college student in any intercollegiate contest as a member of any college team shall be permitted to participate in any intercollegiate contest as a member of another college until he has been a matriculate in such institution under the conditions set forth in rule 1 for a period of one year and then only after the close of the succeeding season devoted to the sport in which he has participated.

Rule 3 reads: No person shall participate in intercollegiate athletics until he shall have been in residence one year and shall have completed one full year of work in addition to meeting the entrance requirements of the College of Liberal Arts of his institution or their equivalent.

Purple Hardest Hit.

Of all the conference colleges, Northwestern is the hardest hit. A number of Great Lakes football players entered the Purple institution after they were discharged from the navy early in the spring. They were counted upon to form the nucleus of one of the strongest football machines in the conference, but yesterday's ruling will put a damper on Northwestern's championship aspirations.

SPREITZER AT OKLAHOMA CITY.

Ivy Spreitzer, a product of "The Tribune" tryouts, has been released from the army and is now covering third base for Jack Holland's Oklahoma City club of the Western league. In 1918 he led the Kelly field (Texas) aviation nine in hitting with a mark of .483 for forty-five games.

Notes

Boston again today.

It's Alexander's turn to hurl the pill this afternoon.

Douglas would have had a second base hit in the eighth inning but for a scintillating play by Maranville, who went into deep short, copped the roller, and flung it to first ahead of Phil.

Threatening weather kept the crowd down to small proportions for a Saturway and part of the bugs got wet because a storm arrived just before the finish. It was not heavy enough to stop play, however.

Douglas nearly lost the use of his left leg when he covered first base for the out on Powell's rap to Merkle in the eighth. The runner's spikes caught in Phil's stocking near the knee and ripped so big a hole in it that he had to take out time to change his raiment.

After Lear pulled his stellar stab of a line drive from Cruise in the fourth things happened that might have been costly. Hollocher fielded Holke's bounder wildly. The ball was going into the Braves' coop when it hit a catcher's mitt and paused long enough to let Merkle stop it before it went in. Otherwise Holke would have been entitled to second base. In that case he could not have been forced out when a little pop fly by Blackburne fell safely on the infield between Merkle and Douglas.

NOTES

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—A game tomorrow and one Monday will wind up the stay in Gotham.

Red Faber is primed to pitch tomorrow and Cicotte will be in Monday, so there's hope.

The Yanks may be a bit slow on the bases, but they get there when they knock the ball to the fences.

Catcher Lees, just back from war, joined the Sox today and worked out in the preliminary practice and in the bull pen. His arm appeared to be in pretty fair pegging shape now.

Felsch had hot words with some player on the Yankees' bench in the seventh as he walked back after popping out. Looks as if there may be another fight.

Pipp led off in the eighth with a tremendous drive to right center. Felsch whirled and ran with the crack of the bat and captured the ball, but he had to take it with one hand while still on the gallop.

E. Collins' two-bagger, Jackson's out and Felsch's sacrifice fly produced the first Sox counter in the fourth. A walk to Schalk after one was out, Williams' sacrifice and Liebold's single produced the one in the fifth that put Chicago ahead.

In the ninth with Felsch at bat and Jackson on first, Happy hit a foul at his feet. The ball bounced up behind him and he turned, took a wallop at it and hit it over the grand stand. Miller Huggins rushed out from the bench and kicked so hard and foolishly that he was ordered off the field.

CIVILIANS BUY ARMY RAINCOATS

Peerless Co. (Government Contractors) Selling at Factory Cost.

Guaranteed waterproof and sanitary, yet prices only $7.50, including mailing and insuring,—and your money back if not satisfied.

The end of the war was the beginning of the public's opportunity to buy the most satisfactory type of raincoat devised, and not only that, but to get it far below actual value, owing to large numbers of the coats being in course of manufacture when the armistice was declared.

No wet can possibly get through these Army Raincoats—made of government-specified, full-weight cloth, durable and fast color; hermetically cemented; storm-proof collar, with storm-proof tab; interfitting fly front; adjustable fastenings around wrists; side pockets, with additional slit to reach inside clothing without opening coat. Back is sanitarily ventilated, concealed by duplex yoke, giving cape effect.

The Peerless Co. is also disposing of officers' double-breasted models (which retailed during the war for $25 to $30) for $12 postpaid, insured, to the home.

Orders are now being accepted by mail. When sending money for either coat state chest measurement and address The Peerless Co., Dept. 1046, 80 Branford place, Newark, N. J.

Hawker Forced Down in Mid-Atlantic by Clogged Cooling System—

Intrepid British Aviator, Half Way to Goal, Picked Up by Tramp Steamer.

With the motor in his Sopwith plane working perfectly, Hawker in his game attempt to be the first to fly across the Atlantic is brought down by trouble with the cooling system.

Here is the whole story of water cooling—an outside system that can easily destroy the efficiency of the most perfectly built motor.

It is the unfailing dependability of the Holmes Improved Air-Cooled Motor that makes it the choice of the motor wise.

With no radiator to clog, no water connections to give way, nothing to boil or freeze, the motor is always working at its highest efficiency.

There are no moving parts to the cooling system that are not working parts of the motor. The fly wheel is a suction fan. The radial cooling fins are a part of the cylinders.

The cooling is always in proportion to the heat developed in the motor. Aviation type Dual Exhaust valves give silent operation and flexible power.

See the Holmes—

The seven-passenger touring car, 126-in. wheel base, travels eighteen to twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline, 10,000 miles to the set of tires and from three to fifty miles an hour on high gear.

High operating cost is no longer necessary in a large car; the price of economy is no longer restricted carrying capacity and cramped discomfort.

The HOLMES Improved Air-Cooled Car

The only moving part in the cooling system is the fly wheel of the motor—a suction fan—and all gasoline motors must have a fly wheel.

No radiator, no tubing, no pumps, no water jackets—just steady, efficient cooling.

CHARLIE POSTL'S TRAINING FARM

"For the Tired Business Man"

An ideal spot, situated on Oconomowoc Lake, in the heart of the Wisconsin Lake Region.

The farm is in no sense a sanitarium. Persons requiring the attention of physicians are not accepted. It is a country estate, where proper physical exercise restores the tired, nervous business man to normal health and strength.

It is the only place of the kind in the west.

Gentlemen who have been in the habit of going to springs and resorts can find something new here.

O'Neil Gives 3 Essentials to a Good Grip for Golfers

BY GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

In the first of these articles attention was called to the fact that there is no uniform style of grip adopted by all the best players, that the best players differ very widely indeed in this matter.

There are, in reality, three features that are essential to a good grip:

The hands must be close together.

The muscles of the wrists must be relaxed.

The fingers must hold the club firmly, but not fiercely.

The first of these points is recognized by everybody and practiced by all but a few players—players who, largely for this very reason, can never hope to play appreciably better than they do now.

Relaxed Muscles Necessary.

The need of relaxed muscles in the wrists and forearms to secure smoothness and precision of swing is also universally admitted. Bear in mind that the golf stroke is a swing, not a blow; that the object is to throw the club head at the ball at as high a rate of speed as possible, not to pound the ball as if with a sledge hammer, and very little experimentation will suffice to convince you that tension of muscles in forearms and wrists is absolutely fatal to success.

It is not always easy to get rid of this tenseness or stiffness, but attention to the third point will help, and the feeling of ease and freedom in the wrists will be greatly promoted by a well executed waggle.

Waggle Not an Ornament.

The waggle is not a mere senseless ornamental flourish, as some bystanders and novices have supposed; it is at once a test of the proper relaxation of the wrist muscles and a rapid and effective means of securing it.

The third point—firmness of grip—has been much discussed. This is partly because some persons confuse violence with firmness, and partly because it is really very difficult for a player to know exactly how he executes his stroke.

When he is addressing the ball and the muscles are comparatively quiet it may be easy to know what each is doing and how each is feeling, but after the stroke really begins, when the club is moving swiftly through the air and hundreds of muscles are cooperating in its motion, self-observation is very difficult.

Hold the Shaft Firmly.

Notwithstanding these difficulties, careful observers agree that the fingers should hold the shaft firmly enough to avoid slackness or looseness and, at the same time, without creating a sense of fierce pressure in the wrists or forearms.

That the shaft should be held in the fingers rather than in the palms follows necessarily from the need of avoiding stiffness in the forearms. The muscles which control the closing of the hand really operate in the forearm, as any one can readily ascertain by placing the fingers of his left hand on his right forearm and then gripping hard with his right hand. The intimate connection between freedom of the wrist muscles and the finger grip may be learned from the fact that the fist cannot keep a tight grip while the arm is bent at the wrist.

HAYES FORCED IN FIRST SCRAP FOR NET HONORS

Champion Defeats Miller in City Title Match; Rain Halts Play.

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

After five matches had been finished, heavy showers swept the courts of players in the annual Chicago city tennis championship tournament, which opened yesterday at Chicago Tennis club, Thome and Ridge avenues. CADDIE BOY WINS THIS ARGUMENT

They were golfing down near the shadow of the big cathedral spire at Garden City, says the Brooklyn Eagle. The stranger, who thought himself some golfer but in reality was a joke, tore out big divots on every hole. Even the tees did not escape the devastation of his driver.

However (and be it said to his credit), he had mastered the etiquette as to replacing divots, and every time he would throw up a big chunk of grass he would sing out to the caddie: "Here, boy, replace the turf."

By the time they reached the last tee the boy felt he had earned more than his regular fee and had developed one big grouch. As the player swung at the ball he took a hunk of grass out of the tee as big as his shoe. The caddie ignored the divot and was walking away when the player shouted:

"Here, boy, replace the turf."

"Ah, gwan," said the tired caddie. "What you need is some one to returf the place."

Former National Champion Leaps for Gaels Today

James Fahey of the Gaelic A. C., former National A. A. U. champion at the hop, step, and jump, will compete at scratch in the three standing jumps in the handicap games this afternoon at Gaelic park. In addition to these events a five mile bike race, 100 yard dash handicap, and 56 pound weight throw are scheduled. The park is at California avenue and Forty-seventh street.

FLY FISHING PRIMER.

THE best way to learn fly fishing is to go with some old timer and watch him closely. In this way one can learn more in a day than he could by reading a multitude of books on How to Catch Trout Though Young. Unhappily it is not always possible for the young trouter to be taken along by an old hand. Hence this article, which is frankly an attempt at the A B C of trout fishing with flies.

To fish up or down stream is an old, old problem. Both systems have advantages. Down stream is easier as it assures a taut line and gives the angler a better view of the stream's bed. Upstream fishing adds to one's chances of hooking a rising fish and does not require as long casts as the fish always head up stream and you come up from behind. It entails harder work both in wading and casting, as the angler must always be casting or stripping in slack.

This can be avoided to a considerable degree if the fisherman will keep to one shore of the stream, preferably the left if he casts right handed, and cast diagonally up and across. This has its disadvantages, as hugging the shore spoils a lot of good fishing. Anyway, we believe that most experienced trout fishermen will agree with us when we say that it is advisable to fish slow streams up and fast ones down, always detouring in the latter case when a pool is reached so as to fish it first from below.

There are ten good casters to one good wader. Most beginners, and not a few old timers, are so anxious to reach some wonderful far away spot, perhaps where Bill caught a three pounder last year, and a spot that most likely hasn't yielded another fish since, that they hurry along and pass up good water and good fish. We have noticed that the hustler type of fisherman often has bad days, but look out for the old timer who just sort o' ambles along. He's the boy that brings in the heavy baskets.

We do not believe that we are handing out poor advice when we suggest the advisability of fishing all the water, not just the likely spots. Cover all you can reach easily before moving on, even to checker boarding the stream, and then move only three or four feet at a time.

If brown trout are found in the stream look for them in the eddies above large rocks, but brooks and rainbows will probably be scattered with the little ones in the riffles and the big lunkers under the banks or in the pools or deep stretches—these big fellers move above mostly at night.

The season of the year and local conditions influence the actions of the fish so much that hard and fast rules should be taken with what we were told to put on birdie's tail. Another thing we have noticed is this: the fellows who fish the same waters year after year generally have better luck with each succeeding year—mainly because he is learning more about his stream.

If the young trout fisherman is wise he will forget all he has ever heard about "gettin' two or three at a crack." It listens good, but you hear about it oftener than you see it and it tempts the youngster to put on a lot of flies—and that means trouble. Rest assured that one fly is all the beginner cares to worry about and that one will take it into its head, somehow or other, that fishes roost in trees!.

Even old timers who learned their game when using three flies was the rule are taking up the single fly idea and say that they get as many fish. One fly thrown with accuracy is bound to get more fish than two or more cast in a hit or miss, haphazard fashion.

Besides, one fly is easier to retrieve if it gets hung up, and hanging a fly in a tree or bush is one of the best things young trouters do. When this does happen the angler should not try to release it by main strength. Let it hang for a minute and give the gut a chance to dry a little; then a steady pull often frees it.

Hooking a fish with a fly rod is a fine art. Sometimes in fast water the fish will hook himself, but the trout is "fast on his feet" and often he dashes out, grabs the fly, spits it out and is gone in an amazingly short time and durn his pretty red spots he has a knack of doing it just when you are not expecting it.

The art of hooking a trout consists of striking with the exact amount of force and at the proper moment, depending on the size of the fish, the strength of the leader and horse power of the rod tip and the swiftness of the water. An expert fisherman cannot tell you how he does the trick. He will say he strikes "instinctively," but it is a phase of angling that young trouters should study with diligence.

SHOOTERS JOIN NEW RIFLE CLUB

The Rogers Park Rifle club, incorporated two months ago with nothing to offer as an inducement for memberships other than the enthusiasm of its organizers, now has a membership of over 275, and has rented the three story building at the corner of Lunt avenue and Clark street, known as the Old Masonic temple.

It has fitted out the third floor with ten shooting ranges, with lounging and smoking rooms adjoining, and has reserved the second floor for dances and social functions.

On the opening night there was a shooting match between company G of the 1st regiment Illinois reserve militia and companies A and C of the 2d regiment, Illinois reserve militia. Company G of the 1st and company C of the 2d tied for the honors.

While this is not a military organization the government has issued rifles and ammunition without charge.

TALK NEW SPLIT ON WORLD SERIES

New York, June 7.—John Heydler and Ban Johnson, presidents of the National and American leagues, conferred yesterday on the division of the players' portion of the world series receipts, both asserting that they recognize a strong sentiment in favor of the old method of dividing the players' share among the members of the two contesting clubs. Last year the players of the teams finishing in the first four positions in each league were given a fixed sum.

Heydler said he and Johnson would make an effort to find the stand of the individual clubs and hope to arrive at a decision at a meeting of the national commission in Cincinnati next week.

For PLAYERS of WHIST by A. R. METCALFE

THE New York Sun has published an article on the conventional double. After citing various authorities, including the writer, who would limit the conventional double to bids of one, the article seeks to prove that it is desirable to have the convention cover all original bids. Moreover, a deal from actual play is given to show the advantage of the new convention.

A clever writer may make any argument plausible, but deals are stubborn things. Below is the one given by the Sun:

South dealt on the rubber game and bid three spades, west doubled, north passed, east bid three no-trump and the bidding closed. East secured nine tricks and game.

It will be noticed that in the deal selected the partner of the doubler had three aces, one king and a five card suit with queen, ten. In spite of this enormous hand east was barely able to make his contract.

Had west passed the three spade bid east would have gone to clubs and made a small slam; so that in a deal especially selected to illustrate the advantage of such a double the actual result was a loss of 40 points. That the loss was not greater was due to a pair of especially frigid feet under the north chair.

The usual custom in testing bids is to try out all combinations of hands. In the above deal one needs only to suppose the north and east hands to be reversed to make the double an absurdity.

The article speaks of Milton Work's timidity about forcing a partner to bid high on a bust. Intelligence would be a better term than timidity in this connection.

JORDAN

The New Silhouette—from France

From France—the land of soul and sunshine, where ideals are never forgotten and beauty is necessary to each day's living—has come the inspiration for the new Jordan Silhouette.

It affords the Continental kind of comfort—mental and physical. You may lounge deep-seated as they do in other lands. Knees are not too high. Wheel is placed right. Pedals and arm rests where you want them.

There is a cocky front seat cowl—slanting sport windshield—perfectly flat top-edge without the slightest bevel—certainly most refreshing in these days.

The whole body is a little more slender with a new French angle at the dash. Mouldings are smartly rectangular. Doors are broad-opening in a full half circle.

A cordovan leather boot and saddle bag is built into the tonneau. Top is carefully fitted. Hardware substantial and artistic.

And the Silhouette is the lightest and best balanced car on the road—for its wheelbase.

Furnished in four or seven passenger capacity in either Brewster Green or Burgundy Old Wine.

AMERICA LAGS IN CHINA TRADE; 13 REASONS WHY

Our Percentage Drops from 47 to 8 Per Cent in Fifty Years.

BY J. B. POWELL.

[Special Correspondent of The Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, April 30.—[By Mail.]—An educated Chinese, a Yale graduate of a few years ago, recently wrote the following in a Chinese magazine on the subject of American trade in China:

"In the development of trade in China the American merchants and manufacturers have more advantageous opportunities than those of any other nation. Had they assumed a less indifferent attitude toward its development, and had the American government given a little more encouragement and better protection for their commercial interests abroad, it would be doubtful today whether Great Britain, Japan or America would be taking the lion's share of China's trade. At the outbreak of the American civil war, 47 per cent of China's trade was taken by America.

Advantages of U. S.

"As to natural advantages, the United States possesses practically all that other nations can boast of, and in addition has many of which all other nations are envious. I mean the strategic position afforded by Alaska, Hawaii, and Philippine islands, which offers to the American merchants a special chance for mutual exchange and benefit; the opening of the Panama canal, which shortens the trip from the manufacturing Atlantic coast to the consuming Pacific nations; and above all, the good will that has been cultivated between the governments and the people.

"But in spite of all the enviable assets, there has been a steady decline of American trade in China in the last half century. In 1904 the United States shared 14.9 per cent of China's foreign trade. Ten years later the percentage fell down to 8.9 per cent.

Here Are Reasons.

The writer then summarizes the chief reasons for the failure of American merchants to compete with those of other nations in the trade of China:

Lack of shipping facilities.
Lack of financial institutions.
Lack of investment companies.
Lack of American organizations.
Lack of organizations of exporters.
Lack of consistent government support.
Lack of studying the market.
Lack of adapting to local demand.

Another Chinese View.

Here is what another Chinese has to say on the same subject:

Let it be remembered that the coöperation of the Chinese is a thing not to be dispensed with. The American manufacturers should always insist upon the securing of the intelligent support of the more enlightened native populations. Chinese business men, highly trained in foreign lands, will soon make their appearannce all over China. With their help direct trading between the Chinese and American manufacturers will be possible. And until there shall be direct trading, American trading with China would not occupy the place of importance as it should."

China always has wanted to do business with America, but it has been balked. America announced the "open door" policy and then did not back it up. She advocated the nationalization of the railways of Manchuria, but later permitted Japan and Russia to do the thing protested against.

The American Mission.

The American bankers have organized a "group" for the purpose of financing China and have sent John Jay Abbott, a Chicago banker to this country for perfecting the details. Is the American government going to stand back of this "group" or is it going to permit European and oriental intriguers to nullify their efforts?

The time now has arrived for a definite American political and business policy in Asia, and there is nothing that would bring more joy to a great portion of the world population than the announcement and following out of such policy. In the past America has always been a giver. America remitted the millions of Boxer indemnity to China to be used for the education of China's young men and women in American colleges.

What Must Be Done.

Now for the specific things that must be done before America can have influence in China and before the American merchants can develop their business in China as they should and as the Chinese people want them to do.

Three years ago there was formed in China an American chamber of commerce. This organization is now composed of approximately 300 American firms and individuals who have been engaged in the development of American trade in this country for periods varying from two to forty years. The organization is active and has branches at interior ports, and in addition works in full harmony with the Chinese chambers of commerce in all parts of the country. Recently this organization, in coöperation with Julian Arnold, the American commercial attaché in China, drew up a memorandum of "thirteen points" that contain the vital problems that must be solved before America can expect to be effective in Asia.

The Thirteen Points.

These "thirteen points" follow:

1. It is very necessary that encouragement of a substantial character be given to American loans to China and to the sale of Chinese securities in the American market, for the reason that in China trade follows the loan.

2. It is necessary that adequate shipping facilities under the American flag be provided.

3. American banking facilities capable of quoting dollar exchange and of participating in the commercial and industrial enterprises in China are necessary.

4. If American firms organizing for business in China are to compete successfully with those of other nationalities, it is necessary that federal incorporation be provided, permitting the incorporation of American firms in China under a federal charter and free from income and other home taxes.

5. American news which comes to China through other than American News service is often distorted and selected in a way which is not advantageous to American prestige in this country. There is now a very effective news servic recently organized and operating in a way most helpful to American interests. This, however, is a part of our war service and unless special provision is made, will be discontinued after some months.

6. There should be maintained at Peking a school accommodating 100 students for the training of young Americans in the Chinese language and customs.

7. The American people must know China better, which means that American colleges and high schools must be encouraged to give courses in Chinese geography, history, and commerce.

8. The American government maintains at Peking about 200 men in its legation guard and has an infantry regiment at Tientsin. The selective draft system should be used in choosing the men for these details so that those who profess a desire to study Chinese and fit themselves for work in China may be given preference.

9. The United States government should purchase sites for consulates at the important centers of trade in China and erect on these sites buildings adapted to the purposes.

10. All railroads in China in which foreign interests are involved should be unified, commercialized, and deprived of political significance.

11. Unless the concessions in the important treaty ports of China at present held under special national auspices are internationalized or extra-territorially abolished it will be necessary for the furtherance of American trade that American interests secure from the Chinese government concessions of a similar nature to provide facilities for the residence and operation of Americans and American firms.

12. All foreign troops quartered in China other than those provided for by the protocol of 1900 should be withdrawn and all spheres of influence abolished.

13. The present trans-Pacific cable service is entirely inadequate. We need a direct wireless service between the Pacific coast and China, via Hawaii and the Philippines, and rates at least one-half of those which obtain at present.

Training of Consuls.

In several of the points mentioned there is reference to the work of the American consular service in China. About ten years ago the American business and other interests in China made proposals to the state department at Washington that the government should cease sending political appointees to China, but should train men especially for the important field.

To this end a school was started in Peking in connection with the American legation, where about thirty young men, chiefly college graduates, took up the study of the Chinese language, customs, history, trade practices, etc. Every American consul or consul general in China, with two exceptions, now are men who have been specially trained.

For some reason the morale of the American consular service in China in the last three or four years has been broken down. New men are being sent to the service in China, who have not been specially trained. This sort of thing does more to break down the prestige of Americans in China than anything else.

The American legation at Peking is sadly understaffed and is constantly confronted with the necessity of breaking in new clerks as men will not stay on the salaries given by the government.

Fire Insurance Men Honor Chief Kenyon

Battalion Chief Joseph Kenyon was given a dinner at the Morrison hotel last night by Chicago fire and life insurance men and underwriters in honor of his forty years in the service. It was announced that the chief is being considered by the mayor as the next fire marshal. Kenyon entered the department in 1879. He was promoted to battalion chief through his bravery during the cold storage fire at the time of the World's fair. He has only one reprimand against him—received for putting out a fire without having received orders to do so.

MUNDELEIN PUTS CHARITY BEFORE NEW CATHEDRAL

Asks Catholics for $750,000 to Aid Poor of Archdiocese.

The objective of the second annual drive of the Associated Catholic Charities of Chicago, which opens today, is $750,000.

Archbishop George W. Mundelein in recounting the success of the first year of the associated charities, in which more than $424,000 was subscribed, declared:

"Our goal this year is to commemorate the seventy-five years of the church's work here, our diamond jubilee, by a crown of seventy-five diamonds, each diamond to cost $10,000—in other words, $750,000 to look after all our charities during the coming year."

Mass Opens Drive.

The archbishop will pontificate at the 11 o'clock mass at Holy Name cathedral, and the drive commences at the conclusion of the service.

The business end of the campaign, however, will be in charge of the Rev. Moses E. Kiley, whose offices are in the Hartford building at 8 South Dearborn street. Father Kiley directed the successful drive of last year in which more was done for poor children at St. Mary's Training school at Desplaines, Ill., than had been dreamed could be done in a single year.

"It is worth while," said Archbishop Mundelein in talking with a group of Catholic laymen concerning the present drive, "for any one to go out to this home and see the happiness which is being brought to these little urchins. It would be the simplest matter on earth to collect any amount of money if every one who can afford to give could see the real inside of the story.

"In that connection I wish to say for myself that I wish to be remembered for the work I may accomplish in this archdiocese by what I have done for charity. From time to time suggestions have been made by wealthy Catholic laymen that Chicago should have a beautiful cathedral.

Charity Before Cathedral.

"This is a very beautiful thought. I wish that Chicago might have such an edifice. It would be a simple matter for me to build a cathedral more beautiful than that of Reims or more beautiful than any the world has ever known, but I do not want that. So long as there is poverty, so long as there are those who cannot provide for themselves, so long as there are helpless widows with little children, so long as there are poor orphans unable to provide themselves with bread, then just that long shall my work be for the sake of charity, which is the greatest of all work."

A bound volume containing 533 pages and recording the work done in each of the charitable institutions benefited has just been placed in the mails, every person who subscribed $5 or more for the work being sent a copy. It is not the intention of Archbishop Mundelein, who is sole judge of the distribution of the fund, that any person shall subscribe more than he did last year. It is the belief of the archbishop and those associated with him that, with Liberty bond and like obligations which figured last year out of the way, new subscribers will come to the front in numbers sufficient to "put over the drive."

The committee of laymen who volunteered to assist in the work last year has for its chairman Dennis F. Kelly. The other members are: Edward A. Cudahy, William A. Amberg, George P. Gilman, Jesse Spalding, Edward O'Callighan, George J. Cooke, Edward N. Hurley, Richard J. Co[illegible] Richard A. Cavenaugh, Edward F[illegible]rry, Louis A. Ferguson, William H[illegible] William J. McCarthy, Edward Hin[illegible], Michael W. Murphy, John P. McGoorty, Thomas F. Keeley, John L. Fortune, Richmond Dean, Andrew J. Ryan, Dr. R. J. Tivnen, Harry J. Powers, Roger C. Sullivan, the Very Rev. E. A. Kelly, the Rev. E. F. Rice, and Joseph W. Cremin.

SOLDIERS WANT JOBS AND CREDIT, BUT NO CHARITY

Seek Only Such a 'Stake' as They Are Able to Pay Back, but—

"Yeah, I've gotta job, an' now I've got it whatinell am I going to do with it? I'm busted, no place to go and no place to eat until the ghost takes his first stroll for me."

The speaker was John Hughes, formerly of Portland, Ore., late private in the United States army.

He was telling his troubles yesterday to J. H. McVey of the soldiers, sailors and marine employment bureau, 120 West Adams street.

On his discharge from the army he had decided to make Chicago his future home. Not wishing to bother the job bureau—"they've got enough to do to take care of the natives," he explained—he sought work without assistance from the Red Cross or other soldiers' aid agency. He had no luck. Yesterday morning he found himself penniless, hungry, with room rent due. He sought the aid of the job bureau and obtained work in a factory on the west side as a fireman—eleven hours a day at $3.50 a day. He wanted a room near his work and a place where he could eat—with credit extended until payday.

Asked No Charity.

He wanted no "charity," he said—just a little credit; some one to "go good" for him for a week or so.

McVey called up the Y. M. C. A. hotel. He talked to a Mr. Lee.

Mr. Lee explained they didn't extend credit at the Y. M. C. A.—the Red Cross, he said, was "looking after the charity cases," and if the Red Cross would guarantee Hughes' bill at the hotel, why, he'd be delighted to accommodate him. The Red Cross isn't guaranteeing bills. Either they take care of a needy soldier or they don't. Hughes didn't want them to take care of him. He wanted to pay his way—just as soon as he had a payday.

While McVey was trying to get the man at whom the public had been tossing flowers a short while ago a place to eat and room Hughes talked it over with a bunch of soldiers in a similar fix. Many wore the insignia of the Prairie division. One—with the distinguished service cross on his breast—pounded the table.

Panhandling No Credit.

"I'm gettin' damned sick an' tired o' this returned hero stuff; I'm gettin' sick an' tired o' bein' mothered an' fathered an' cuddled an' bothered. I s'pose I could panhandle enough on this [touching the cross] to keep me goin' quite a spell, but it won't get me a plate o' beans on tick. I dunno how the rset o' you guys feel about it, but all I want is a job, credit enough to let me get a few things a white man needs in civilian life, and a decent start. I don't want the Red Cross nor the Y. M. C. A. nor anybody else to give me anything I can't pay back, I'm tellin' the world."

Three Hundred More Need Jobs.

Andrew R. Sheriff, chairman of the employment committee of the 10th engineers auxiliary, is giving a word to the wise in announcing that after the mustering out of this regiment this week there will be about 300 Chicago boys out of work.

Chicago

June 5, 1919,
Chicago, Ill.

Our names have recently been mentioned in connection with the affairs of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation, and statements concerning us have been made. In order that those interested may know the facts, we desire to state our relations with that company.

We had no connection with or any interest in the sale of any stock sold by Andrews; nor were we at any time associated with Andrews & Company.

We were not officers of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation, but were directors and familiar with the general affairs of the company.

Neither of the undersigned received any salary, commission or other compensation or remuneration, directly or indirectly, from the treasury of the corporation. Instead, when the company got into difficulties, we contributed both our time and money in an endeavor to perpetuate a good business and maintain it on a sound financial basis.

These facts are well known to all who were familiar with the company's affairs.

The predecessor of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation was the Smith Form-a-Truck Company, which was started in August, 1915, by A. D. Smith and E. I. Rosenfeld. Six months later, in February, 1916, the company first came to our attention.

Our investigation showed its product to be in good demand and the business growing rapidly. Audits made by Touche, Niven & Company, certified public accountants, and appraisals made by Coats & Burchard Company, public appraisers, showed the company's earnings from August 1, 1915, to September 30, 1916, to be $649,339.86, of which $187,917.14 was spent for advertising. The company marketed during that time 7,078 truck attachments and did a gross business of $1,931,417.60.

Shortly after these audits were made we acquired control of the capital stock of the Smith Form-a-Truck Company. The net assets of that company, as of October 31, 1916, according to the audited figures, were $673,831.78.

To provide additional capital needed to take care of the growing business, we accepted an offer made by Michaelis & Company of New York, who associated with themselves A. M. Andrews of Chicago, to pay $1,530,000 cash for $1,400,000 of Preferred stock and 45% of the Common stock of a new company to be organized, and to be known as the Smith Motor Truck Corporation, to take over the Smith Form-a-Truck Company.

The new company was organized and received all the stock of the old company, then having net assets of $673,831.78 as of October 31, 1916, and $830,000 additional cash, making aggregate net assets of $1,503,831.78.

The legal matters pertaining to the organization of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation were handled by Cravath & Henderson, Spooner & Cotton, and O'Brien, Bordman, Parker, Harper & Fox of New York.

Based on the previous year's earnings and the increase in business, it was estimated that with the additional capital employed, the Common stock of the new corporation would earn in excess of eight per cent the first year. This estimate was amply justified by the earnings of the new company during the first seven months of its existence.

Ten per cent of the total common capital stock was then deposited for one year with the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, N. J., for the benefit of deserving employees of the corporation and all of the common stock belonging to us was deposited with the Fidelity Trust Company of Newark, N. J., for one year. When the year was up, all the stock belonging to us was again deposited with the Columbia Trust Company and J. & W. Seligman Company of New York, until February, 1918, or four months after the company was publicly known to be in the hands of a creditors' committee.

At the time the Smith Motor Truck Corporation was organized and the stock sold to Michaelis & Company and A. M. Andrews the business was on a sound financial basis, making satisfactory earnings and had good prospects for increased earnings, as will be seen from the following extract from audit as of June 30, 1917, of M. & L. W. Scudder, certified public accountants:

> "We have made an examination of the books of the Smith Form-a-Truck Company of Delaware, from the date of the beginning of its business, August 15, 1915, to October 31, 1916, and of its successor company, the Smith Motor Truck Corporation of Virginia, from the date of its succession to the business to June 30, 1917.
> "The net earnings of the Smith Form-a-Truck Company of Delaware from August 15, 1915, to December 31, 1916, were $834,087.20, and of its successor, the Smith Motor Truck Corporation, for the six months from January 1, 1917, to June 30, 1917, were $878,215.41. From the net earnings, from the inception of this business to June 30, 1917, amounting to $1,712,302.61, we have deducted for organization expenses, advertising, etc., $608,916.61, leaving absolute net, after all deductions, of $1,103,385.80 for the period."

No commissions were paid by the company to any one for the sale of any of its stock.

During the first six months of 1917 the Smith Motor Truck Corporation did more than $4,000,000 of business and, according to a balance sheet prepared as of June 30, 1917, by M. & L. W. Scudder, showed a surplus of $397,385.81 for the Common stock after paying Preferred dividends of $56,000.

Beginning with January, 1917, the monthly shipments of Form-a-Trucks increased from 1,255 in January to 4,056 in April, the shipments in April, 1917, being in excess of $1,000,000.

By August, however, due to conditions produced on account of the United States entering the World War, and the consequent largely reduced production of passenger cars to which the Form-a-Truck had to be attached to make a truck, business had dropped to monthly shipments of about $200,000.00. The company, on account of material conditions due to the war, was forced to buy for months ahead, and did so buy, based on its business demands.

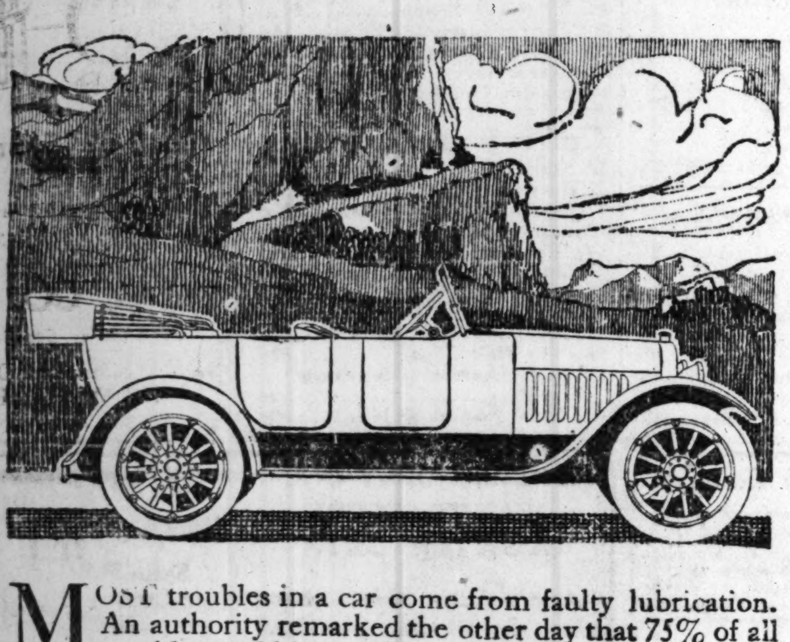
When its business fell off, it owed for large quantities of materials. Notwithstanding these large purchases, the failure on account of existing war conditions of many contractors to deliver, caused the company's inventory to become badly unbalanced.

We had confidence in the stock and never parted with any of ours, except to Eastern banking interests after the company got into difficulties. We gave, without compensation, 100,000 shares of our stock as bonuses to J. & W. Seligman of New York City and to Richardson, Hill & Company of Boston, who, together with ourselves, furnished the company with more than a million dollars additional cash.

The embargo on the manufacture of motor cars and the allocation of steel became more drastic as the war progressed and the difficulties of operation became so great that in August, 1918, the directors and creditors of the company deemed it to the best interests of all concerned to liquidate the company.

These facts are well known to everyone familiar with the affairs of the Smith Motor Truck Corporation.

Respectfully,
J. M. HOYT,
C. B. LITTLE.



Why a HOT SPOT Chalmers is Well Nigh Trouble Proof

MOST troubles in a car come from faulty lubrication. An authority remarked the other day that 75% of all troubles could be traced to this cause.

A former professor at Yale said: "Give a car plenty of lubrication and it will take care of itself."

Now here's how the Hot Spot Chalmers happens to be free of lubrication ailments.

Hot Spot "heats up" the raw gas, "turns it into a vapor cloud," so that when the ingenious Ram's-horn has passed it on to the cylinders it's finely prepared for combustion.

No raw gas runs down past the pistons into the crank case to thin out the lubricating oil.

In engines of the old type—those without Hot Spot and Ram's-horn—raw gas has caused endless trouble:

—burned bearings that cost a great deal to replace;
—excessive vibration that develops countless rattles;
—engine knocks that are often taken for carbon knocks;
—overheated engines.

Such things you rarely experience in a Chalmers and then only through extreme personal carelessness.

See the modern engine in the modern car—the Hot Spot Chalmers, one of the few great cars of the world.

QUICK ACTION ON SOUTH SHORE PLAN PROMISED

Aldermen Speed Up Work on Ordinance; Many Viaducts to Lake.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

It is the program to decide definitely upon the plan for the lake shore development before the council adjourns for the summer vacation. In this scheme it is estimated that the south park commission will spend $30,000,000 and the Illinois Central railroad $80,000,000.

But what the residents of Chicago want to know is when. Therefore the question was put to Chairman Lipps of the council railway terminal committee. He replied:

"This subject has been discussed for ten years and the public is acquainted with the general scheme. Now the details have been agreed upon by the south park commission, the railroad and the city's railway terminal commission. They have decided upon the text of the ordinance, so that the whole scheme is presented as definitely and plainly as words, maps and sketches can make it, and the brevity of the ordinance will surprise many.

Must Obtain U. S. Permit.

"That is the point at which we have arrived. The next step is a consideration of the matter by the council railway terminal committee, and then by the council itself. After that a permit must be obtained from the federal government, which may insist upon requirements and restrictions which are not now in the ordinance and agreements.

"The terminal committee will get busy at once and continue so until we have accomplished something. I have called a committee meeting for Monday morning. The council session will interfere with a session in the afternoon, but Tuesday the committee will meet again, and probably for all day.

"The committee will be taken over the ground, so that they can understand at once what the ordinance is about, what is planned at every spot, as well as ascertain the kind and method of construction. They will have every opportunity to ask all sorts of questions and, with a little imagination, picture to themselves what the city is to get.

What City Will Get.

"There will not only be no attempt to curtail the search for information and the discussion of every detail, but if I have my way everyone interested will be encouraged to go his full limit in asking questions and expressing his opinions. That should be finished before vacation.

"What will the city get in cash or improvements which it otherwise would be forced to pay for itself?" was asked.

"In addition to the $110,000,000 or so spent by the park board and the railroad," he replied, "the city will get construction gratis which the railroad estimates will cost about $2,500,000. But that is only money. At the outside the city will probably have to spend $250,000 to get all of these things, and that will be in the extension and widening of streets.

Many New Viaducts.

"Take one thing alone—access to the lake, which the public has been rightfully clamoring for many years. Between Randolph street and Forty-seventh there are now four viaducts, and the Randolph viaduct is of uncertain advantage.

"The railroad will build a new and modern viaduct at Randolph street and then the park board will build seven others north of Twelfth street, including the latter. To the south the railroad will build a subway at Eighteenth street and the park board will build seven viaducts to and including Forty-seventh street, and it obtains the right and privilege of constructing eight more viaducts between Twelfth and Forty-seventh streets. In addition, at least five street car lines will run over these viaducts or through subways to the park areas beyond.

"Furthermore, these are not to be puny bridges. We of the city have decided that the viaducts south of Twelfth street shall be eighty feet wide. You heard Supt. Foster of the South park system this morning insist that these be ninety feet wide. We had provided for a South Park avenue viaduct 125 feet wide, Mr. Foster insists that it be 145 feet."

"I'm in favor of those, too," Ald Guernsey said. "Let us have the improvements adequate for 1990 instead of only for 1919."

Threatens to Block Improvements.

The railway terminal commission discussed various minor changes in the ordinance yesterday. George A. Hyers protested against the improvements. He said he represented 8,000 property owners, and he wanted the Illinois Central tracks depressed and a boulevard constructed above them.

"I blocked you once in Washington and I will do it again if I can," was his final shot.

The development of the property north of Randolph street is one of the undecided questions for the council to settle. There are certain streets and slips in that territory which the ordinanace in its present form turns over to the railroad. Walter L. Fisher and Assistant Corporation Counsel Dahlberg have written opinions on the rights of the city to these streets and slips. Both agree that these rights are uncertain. Mr. Fisher's opinion, however, is more favorable to the city. Under it the council may be able to obtain further concessions from the Illinois Central railroad to get a clear and unquestioned title to the land and water involved.

PREPARE TO PUT ILLINOIS FIRST FOR SUFFRAGE

Springfield, Ill., June 7.—[Special.]—Illinois has the formal certification of the United States government of the congressional joint resolution that submits the full suffrage constitutional amendment to the several states. Gov. Lowden will transmit the joint resolution to the general assembly in a special message on Monday afternoon.

The certification arrived in Springfield shortly before noon, direct from the department of state, over the signature of Frank L. Polk, acting secretary of state. The communication carried official notification to Illinois that all of the necessary preliminaries have been concluded in Washington. The certified copy was signed by Vice President Marshall and Speaker Gillett.

The senate does not meet in formal session until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning, and ratification, at the earliest, cannot be completed by Illinois until some time Tuesday morning. Even at such a speed rate the expectation of the suffrage leaders is that Illinois will be able to nose out the legislatures of Michigan and Pennsylvania.

Battle Puts Soldier in Custody as Deserter

Winnetka's intrepid and unconquered policeman, George Wissman, fought an engagement with an accused army deserter yesterday. Result: Peter Albert, 1846 Forest avenue, Wilmette, is on his way to Camp Grant, where he will face desertion charges for having gone A. W. O. L. from the 161st depot brigade there last August. Stewart Eliminates 600 Parts And Builds a Stronger Truck

And They Cost $200 to $300 Less; Reduce Maintenance 50%; Operating Cost 25% Less; Save Every Day and Hour of Operation. Always Reliable

STEWART trucks outwear and out-perform others because of simplified design. It eliminates 600 points of wear and waste power. The strains of many parts works self destruction in complex types. It is responsible for breakdowns, for interrupted transportation, and big repair costs.

Note How Stewarts End These Faults

Stewart design disposes of more than 600 weighty parts by combining their functions in a few mechanisms of great strength. Most of this weight comes from the unsprung portions. That means less wear on tires and greater riding ease.

Also materials and assembling costs are saved. You get the saving in the $200 to $300 lower cost.

The value of such simplicity is shown in 25% reduction in operating costs, and 50% in maintenance. But most important of all it gives practical freedom from repairs. That accounts for the Stewart records in longest continuous service. You can depend upon uninterrupted service with Stewarts.

Stewarts Cost Less to Operate; Less to Maintain

That is why they are the choice of more than 200 lines of business in 27 countries, daily meeting with satisfaction every truck demand in every climate, under all varied conditions.

The choosing of a truck always narrows down to which will give the most lasting satisfactory service for the lowest cost.

Investigate the Stewart. Have it demonstrated. See for yourself why it outlasts and out-performs others. We feel sure the same logical engineering and manufacturing reasons that led operators of great truck fleets to adopt Stewarts, will convince you too.

Within the past year some large truck operators disposed of their old fleets entire, replacing them with Stewart trucks. They pocketed a loss in selling the old fleets at used truck prices. But they regard that more than offset by Stewart advantages of dependability, freedom from repair and operating economy.

Stewart Endurance Is Choice In City and On the Farm

Consider what a share of the world's transportation is moved by Stewarts. In every end of the earth truck users rely on it.

Dealers—This convincing advertisement will sell Stewart trucks. Why not be in on some of these sales in your territory?

You will find them in the fast interborough truck-trains, rushing raw materials and finished products to and from cities, linking up small towns with rapid transportation. These trains must keep an average of 15 to 18 miles an hour, day after day, without interruption. Their endurance is tested by heavy loads, fast travel, and all sorts of road and weather conditions. Stewarts always prove reliable.

Every truck need is met with proper sized Stewarts. Grocers, bakers and tradesmen of all sorts find the ¾-ton size convenient for city deliveries. Contractors, storage companies, department stores, manufacturers and general hauling concerns have the choice of any size up to 3½ tons. Farmers reach their markets, and return with farm supplies, far more quickly and cheaply with Stewart trucks. They are used in the distribution of dairy products.

Suitable bodies are available for any requirement. Stewarts will supply your every transportation need.

The First Fifty Are Still Giving Economical and Satisfactory Service

Reliability is what men most seek in a motor truck. They know their business is no better than their transportation. And they are learning that most truck disorders are unnecessary and are eliminated in Stewart design.

If you are a user of trucks you know the importance of uninterrupted service. Trucks steadily at work. No disappointment caused by delays. Confusion and clogging of shipping and delivery departments eliminated. No breakdowns and repair expenses.

U. S. BOARD AIDS PLANS TO PUSH RAW EXPORTS

Cotton Corporation Sets Pace for Other Important Interests.

Washington, D. C., June 7.—With a view to quieting the unrest in Europe by hastening a return to normal economic conditions financial interests in New York, with the assistance of the federal reserve board, are giving consideration to the formation of group export corporations for wool, copper, steel, tobacco, and other American products similar to that organized to handle foreign sales of cotton.

It is planned to give the group corporations the backing of a central securities corporation which would draw its funds from the investing public, furnishing perhaps hundreds of millions of dollars to finance the shipment of raw materials to the countries lately at war so that they may return to work and pay off their debts to this country.

Of Highest Import.

Government officials believe that no more important project now is under consideration as a reconstructive measure and point to the disturbed conditions of the foreign exchange market as necessity for some action to end present abnormal conditions.

Operations of the International Cotton corporation will be watched closely by bankers and the results utilized in the organization of other group corporations as may be needed. One great advantage in having a concern to handle each material is that funds to start work can be raised in the section of country most vitally interested in that particular industry.

As initial funds of each corporation were exhausted by financing shipments abroad, they would obtain additional money from the central securities corporation, which would take as collateral the European securities pledged to the group corporation and the obligation of that corporation. With such ample security and the possibility of offering an attractive return, perhaps 6 per cent, it is believed debentures offered by the central corporation to the public would find ready sale. It is planned that the central corporation would be flexible in organization, starting with a small capital and enlarging as the export financing developed.

Long Term Credit Needed.

Present world conditions are pointed to by government officials as evidence of the need for some such machinery as is contemplated in the export and central corporations. Long term credits are needed by Europe and raw materials rather than finished products, except where the latter are to be used in reviving producing powers. Belgium interests, which recently obtained a short term credit of $50,000,000 in New York, have been unable to utilize any of the money, because the exchange rates is so adverse that the money, would cost perhaps 30 per cent. An even worse situation exists in France and in Italy, in the opinion of financial experts, and will continue for several years until those countries rehabilitate their industries and reduce their indebtedness.

Government credits to the allies now total approximately $9,310,000,000, leaving only $690,000,000 of the amount authorized. That is too small, it is believed to finance the exports needed, which is said to be another reason for the need of private initiative in solving the question of credits. The war finance corporation is said to be ready to take the obligations of the exports corporations, if the public does not, although the latter contingency is not expected.

Mr. Creel was during the entire period of the war Chairman of the Committee on Public Information of the U. S. Government, the Committee being: George Creel, Chairman; Robert Lansing, Secretary of State; Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War; Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy.

Since the Peace Conference in Paris, Mr. Creel (having ended his work as Chief Official Censor of the U. S. Government) visited Ireland, saw all the leaders, and studied conditions there. CHICAGO BANKS PROVE CITY ON A RISING TIDE

Basic Prosperity Touches New Heights and Looks Higher.

Chicago is riding on the high tide of prosperity, and the tide is just beginning to come in. The war hasn't hurt the city financially. You can tell it from the figures of Chicago's banks. The total deposits have increased $119,526,218 in the last year, and savings deposits have increased $59,638,449. Bank clearings last week broke all records. The same is true of the May clearings.

The banks are in a stronger position today than they have ever been. In spite of war conditions and temporary depression the year's gain in capital, surplus and undivided profits amounts to $8,167,058. Loans and discounts are $30,881,790 greater than they were a year ago, and cash resources have increased $33,231,790.

Bank Shares Go Up.

Gains in the book value and increases in earning power have added many millions to the market quotations for shares of Chicago's banks.

One of the most noteworthy banking events of the year was the consolidation of the Merchants Loan and Trust company and the Illinois Trust and Savings. The capital and surplus of the combined banks is nearly $30,000,000 and the total deposits more than $[illegible]000,000. The united banks will be housed in a new structure which is to be put up on the north side of Jackson boulevard, extending from La Salle to Clark street, the site of the old Grand Pacific hotel.

Another new building is to be put up at the northwest corner of La Salle street and Jackson boulevard for the federal reserve bank of Chicago. The site has been purchased for $3,000,000. A third structure is to be put up for the State bank of Chicago on the site of the Woman's temple.

New $8,000,000 Bank.

During the last month the formation of a new financial institution, the Great Lakes Trust company, has been announced, with a capital of $8,000,000 and surplus of $600,000. This bank is to be opened in the Westminster building, at the southwest corner of Dearborn and Monroe streets, within a short time.

Although extraordinary demands have been made on the general public for investment in government war securities, an unusual showing has been made in savings deposits, which have increased from $256,488,481 to $316,126,930. The gain amounts to $59,638,449, or 23.24 per cent. During the preceding year there was a loss of $12,964,062. During the year Chicagoans have taken $252,300,000 in the fourth Liberty loan and have subscribed nearly $150,000,000 for Victory notes.

Holders of Bank Stock.

Among holders of bank stock the estate of Norman W. Harris retains first place, with a total of $5,206,595, as compared with $5,852,970 one year ago. Part of the estate's holdings have passed to Albert W. Harris, who now holds sixth place in the list of holders of bank stock.

J. Ogden Armour, with $4,171,870, is the largest individual holder of bank stock and occupies second place in the general list. Edward Tilden & Co. are in third position with $3,917,970. The Miami corporation, which holds the banking investments of the Deering family, is in fourth place, with a total of $2,915,895. The Marshall Field estate is fifth with $2,723,600, which represents an increase of $429,350 for the year, due wholly to advances in prices of bank stocks.

The general prosperity of banks is shown by the fact that five national and thirty-four state banks have increased their dividend rate. The dividend rate of the Continental and Commercial National has been increased from 12 to 14 per cent. Among the state banks there are several that pay 12 per cent, with extra dividends.

CITY PREPARES TO FIGHT RAISE IN PHONE RATES

Will Petition U. S. for the Right to Present Evidence.

City officials took a fighting attitude yesterday toward the Chicago Telephone company and the schedule of increased telephone rates which the company has declared effective June 16, with the sanction of Postmaster General Burleson. The chances of the city going into court and fighting the rate increases, which looked rather slim Friday, took on a brighter appearance after closer examination of the situation by the city's attorneys.

Corporation Counsel Ettelson, after announcing that the city intended petitioning the federal authorities for an opportunity to present the city's and the telephone user's side of the rate question, said:

"I prophesy that before this controversy is ended the telephone company will either voluntarily or involuntarily listen to the suggestions on rates of the municipal authorities."

Seek Text of Order.

Request has been made at Washington for a copy of the Burleson order sanctioning the new schedule of rates and as soon as it is received and digested the request to the federal authorities for a hearing will be made. On this point Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank S. Righeimer made the following statement:

"Neither the city nor the subscribers had any opportunity to present figures to the postmaster general or to any federal body on the subject of rates. The increase was arbitrarily ordered after hearing only one side of the case. We shall attempt to find some way to present the side of the city and the users and to demonstrate that the horizontal increase authorized is both unnecessary and inequitable."

Mayor Enters Fight.

Mayor Thompson took a hand in the battle by sending the following telegram to Chicago members of congress:

"The Chicago Telephone company has issued an announcement that "by direction of the postmaster general" telephone rates will be raised in Chicago, effective June 16. As you represent a Chicago constituency, I ask you to protest against such an unjustifiable exercise of the war power of the federal government, and I suggest further that congress take appropriate action to divest the executive branch of the government of power to fix rates arbitrarily, to be charged by public utilities for local service, which power may be abused and the interests of the people sacrificed to the utility corporations.

"The public has a right to be heard on a question of this magnitude, the decision of which means millions of dollars to our people. Previous efforts of the telephone company to raise rates have been considered by our citizens as brazen attempts to rob the people of Chicago."

City's Best Card.

The trump card of the city, though, lies in the fact that the federal jurisdiction over the lines ends with the signing and ratification of the peace treaty.

Then, if not sooner, the telephone company will be forced to negotiate with the city and the state, and the rate question brought for adjustment into the hands of the city and the people affected.

About street crossings—

ONE sure test of flexibility in a motor car is the busy street crossing. There is the place where ease of control proves the worth of the car. Every day the Packard Twin Six meets this test in a very unusual manner. A torrent of smooth flowing power permits sudden hesitation as well as quick acceleration. With the throttle and the brake you release or check this elastic power, exactly as you want it, dodging, avoiding danger as you will.

The high purpose back of Packard engineering is the perfection of passenger transportation. The nice qualities about driving are always taken into account. The ease of control, the flexibility, all are a part of the science of transportation. Packard engineers never fail to take into account the comfort, both physical and mental, of the driver. They believe it to be an important part of efficiency.

That is why it is not unusual for a man to drive his own Packard.

The man with a transportation problem, whether it be business, social or recreational, will find many other satisfying things about the Packard car.

The test in crossing crowded down-town streets is but one way to demonstrate the performance of the Packard car.

Take it into the country and feel the gentle flow of power converted into a volume of speed.

It will carry you over the highways, up the hills, always with the same physical and mental comfort.

You must sit at the wheel of the Packard to know all the car can do.

Goodrich's More Mileage Proclamation

Be it known to every automobile owner and driver in the United States—to Goodrich Dealers—that Goodrich Safety Treads stand ready to deliver 6,000 miles, and Silvertown Cords 8,000, under proper usage.

That is, every SAFETY TREAD in use, and in a Goodrich Dealer's store, is underwritten to be adjusted at 6,000 miles—and every SILVERTOWN CORD at 8,000 miles.

* * * * * *

The new adjustment is based upon what Goodrich knows its tires will do, and Goodrich knows from miles and miles of road-testing that Goodrich Tires are the strongest, the best, the rubber industry has produced.

They are so good that Goodrich increases its adjustment mileage to show its patrons that they cannot afford not to share in their matchless service and security.

MICHIGAN PRISON MANAGED WELL, EX-WARDEN SAYS

Simpson Denies Big Loss of Twine Occurred in His Regime.

Lansing, Mich., June 7.—[Special.]—Nathan F. Simpson, warden of Jackson prison from 1910 until 1917, a period in the administration of the institution which did not receive favorable consideration from the special auditors employed to go over the prison books, insists the institution made money while he was at the helm, that its affairs were conducted in a businesslike manner, and that none of the missing twine disappeared during his term.

Says He Followed Precedent.

The former warden came to Lansing to keep an appointment with Gov. Sleeper, and the two conferred for some time. It is generally reported that the governor had intended to appoint Simpson state purchasing agent, but the report of the auditors has blown a hole in his reputation for business efficiency and it is not believed by members of the legislature that he now will be the governor's choice.

The auditors claimed in their report that Simpson had pursued one policy in regard to the sale of twine through the Gleaners' Clearing House association when he was warden, and reversed himself when he left the prison and accepted a position with this organization of farmers. Simpson declares that the system in vogue during his term had not been changed since the binder twine plant was established at the prison about 15 years ago.

Business Methods in Question.

While members of the legislative committee do not charge Simpson with graft or malfeasance, they are ready to contradict his statements of up to date business methods with the testimony taken during the special investigation at Jackson last winter.

According to the report of the auditors, many of the records, files, and vouchers which should have been preserved have disappeared. If Simpson is able to successfully contradict the report of the auditing committee, which is supposed to be an unprejudiced statement of conditions, it will be necessary to unearth the missing records. With important data missing, it remains a question of veracity between the former warden and the auditors.

Coke Oven Only Home, Says Boy Burglar, 15

A quantity of stolen property, including cigars, candy, a camera, and other articles was recovered yesterday when the Brighton Park police arrested Joseph Wojniak, 15, who was found hiding in an abandoned coke oven at Iron and Thirty-fourth streets. He confessed stealing the articles from the drug store of J. J. Bobinsky, 7101 West Thirty-fifth street. He said he and two other boys, whose names he refused to give, broke into the store. He declared he had no home.

United Societies Will Hold Convention Today

More than 1,000 delegates are expected to attend the fourteenth annual convention of the United Societies for Local Self-Government, this afternoon at Wicker Park hall, 2040 West North avenue. Judge Kickham Scanlan will speak on "Americanization and Personal Liberty." Everett Jennings, Capt. Edward Maher, A. D. Weiner, and Leopold Neumann will also speak.

Limit Use of Fireworks on the Fourth of July

Fireworks will be permitted in Chicago this Fourth of July only in cases where special permits have been issued by the mayor, according to Chief J. C. McDonnell of the fire prevention bureau, who wrote a letter to Chief of Police Garrity yesterday, asking the aid of the police department in enforcing the city ordinance against the use of fireworks without such a permit.

IT'LL BE BIG DAY WHEN BENCH MEETS BAR UPON DIAMOND

It will be a great day for the judges and lawyers June 14 when they get out in Comiskey park and batter the old baseball around and kid themselves into thinking—notwithstanding fear of rheumatic twinges—they are kids again.

It will be a great day for the spectators. They'll "laugh their heads off" watching some judge they've always believed the epitome of judicial dignity rolling his portly form along the base paths, like Ty Cobb in a sack race.

But it will be a great day for others, too—if enough tickets are sold. In Chicago's social subcellars—its congested districts—there are many babies—children of the poor. And when more fortunate citizens are sitting under the electric fans sipping iced beverages on porches screened from the summer insects, these babies are gasping for a cool breath. The odor of crowded, perspiring humanity is everywhere. Milk, if the parents can get it, is curdled and soured by the cheese factory temperature radiated by pavements and brick walls. Ice means lives saved, and so do a few days in the breezes of the open country.

THE TRIBUNE's free ice and Algonquin hospital fund provide the ice and the days in the country every summer. And that's why everybody is rooting for the lawyers-judges baseball game.

The proceeds go to THE TRIBUNE free ice and Algonquin hospital fund.

New Anti-Speeder Joins Highland Park Police

Highland Park's all Irish police force isn't going to be so "aisy." Not for motorists who speed. The addition of Ralph Hicks, mounted on a motorcycle, promised that yesterday. The new magistrate, James H. Duffy, is a postscript to that promise.

I want a man who can sell goods—who knows he can by past experience—to represent me in this country. Have a real proposition for a real man of real moneymaking possibilities. I have one man who is today making at the rate of $2,000 per month—not year—on this same proposition—but he is a real, big, high class salesman. Here's an honest-to-goodness chance for the right man, who can deliver the goods.

The Best Fire Insurance Is Fireproof Construction

PLAN your home wisely against the perils of fire. Beware of this grave hazard that is constantly destroying life and property without warning.

Any structure that is built of inflammable material is ever in danger of total destruction. The safe, sane and sensible means of providing fire protection is to build fireproof exterior walls of

KELLASTONE
IMPERISHABLE STUCCO

KELLASTONE is more than a fire retarder—it is absolutely fireproof. It never flinches when exposed to the evils of fire, water, wear or weather—doesn't crack, crumble, expand or contract like ordinary stucco. Bonds perfectly, seals the walls tight—sets up in a hard stone-like mass—withstands sudden jars and intense vibration.

Without disturbing the occupants—without taking off the old siding—you can transform any old frame or brick building to one of modern design by overcoating it with KELLASTONE. The cost is little—the results beautiful and permanent—prolonging the life of the structure and increasing its value.

Why Coal Prices Are High—and

Who Gets the Money?

"The coal dealer must be profiteering from these high prices" is frequently heard. Nothing could be farther from the facts.

Three-quarters of the price you pay for coal is paid out (1) for mining the coal, and (2) for railroad freight from the distant mine to Chicago.

The United States Government regulates both the labor cost at the coal mine and the railway freight rates. The coal dealer has no more to do with these items than you have.

See for yourself—read the following analysis of costs. The prices are competitively made, but representative of current market quotations.

BANKRUPTCY PETITIONS.

Petition of B. A. Railton Company et al. to have the Waldorf company, 27 North Clark street, adjudged a bankrupt; claims about $600.

TALK OF THE STREET

Federal reserve officials are prepared for resumption of the regular offerings of treasury bills about July 1. In view of the fact, however, that there will be no more popular offering of government bonds and treasury needs are diminishing, it is expected that the bi-weekly quota will be much smaller than when the country was preparing for Liberty loans.

Rumor has it that certain treasury officials are becoming a little uneasy over the "attractiveness" of the stock exchange call money market and the very patent lack of interest on the part of interior banks in the commercial paper and acceptance market. The treasury wants to hold its certificates of indebtedness at a maximum rate of 4½ per cent, and in view of the way interior banks are overlooking commercial paper and acceptance investments and are sending funds here for call loans whenever the rate moves up a little, there is said to be some fear that if the stock market demand broadens much more there will be no keen desire to buy treasury paper on the periodic offerings. This is a Washington fear, it is asserted emphatically, and not a misgiving of the financial district.

The directors of Submarine Boat corporation will probably consider resumption of dividends at a meeting to be held this month. The company is improving its condition and dominating interests believe it could afford to resume payments on a conservative basis, say 25 cents quarterly.

Another reduction in transatlantic freight rates has been announced. The Scandinavian lines have reduced the rate $2.50 per 100 pounds and measurement rates have been cut in proportion. Such reduction naturally cuts down the profits of steamship companies, but with the larger movement of trade and removal of all restrictions on shipping, earnings may still be larger than in the pre-war period because in spite of the reductions already announced in freight rates the rates are still far above the pre-war levels.

Unofficial reports from Washington say that the embargo on gold probably will be lifted within a short time. No reason is ascribed for the lifting, but bankers think they see in the report a promise of an early return to thoroughly normal gold dealings over most of the world; certainly as regards the United States and Great Britain. The fact that Great Britain has resumed gold shipments here would seem to indicate that London is no longer fearful of moving the metal, within reasonable limits, of course, and there is a growing belief here that the United States will permit some of the neutrals, and possibly Japan, to withdraw some of their accumulated balances by taking gold, if they show any desire to do so. It is felt that the United States now has a sufficiency of gold, and by allowing withdrawals to offset imports would displease very few, if any, of the leading financiers.

METAL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—There has been a good volume of busines in the copper market during the last week and prices have advanced in consequence. At least one of the large producers was said to have no electrolytic on offer for June and July at the close of the week and to be asking 17.50c for August. In other quarters electrolytic was quoted at 17.00@17.25c for June and July this morning, but the demand was said to be rather less active after the buying of the earlier week. Iron was unchanged.

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—LEAD—Dull at $4.90. SPELTER—Dull at $6.10.

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, June 7.—Bar silver, 53⅛d per ounce. Money, 2¾ per cent. Discount rates: Short bills, 3¼ per cent; three month bills, 3⅝ per cent.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Cotton goods today were quiet and yarns firm. Government surplus offerings caused no uneasiness in the trade. Linens continued firm. Burlaps were steady. Wool dress goods were firm.

A manufacturer must secure distributors from certain districts in Illinois who will build their own selling organizations for the purpose of marketing a product with a known market.

The distributor who secures territory must have financial responsibility, previous merchandising experience, be capable of building and managing a sales organization and willing to visit the factory to become thoroughly conversant with the manufacturing and selling problems.

Sufficient territory will be allotted to provide opportunity for building a large profitable business with exceptional future possibilities.

The product is superior in merit to any of its kind. The profit margin is large enough to assure the distributor of a proposition that will present itself attractively to his salesmen and at the same time provide a very profitable business from their efforts.

GRAIN MARKETS FAIL TO ACCORD WITH BEAR NEWS

Corn Oversold on Break and Closes at High Point.

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Grain markets did not accord with the general sentiment of local traders or most of the news except for a short time early yesterday, when good declines were recorded. This market became oversold on the break, in evening up for the week end, and in corn to get trades down to the 200,000 bu limit there was a rally at the last with the close the highest of the day.

Oats were affected by storms in the southwest, where the crop is nearing maturity, and closed ⅛@⅝c higher, the latter for December, while July gained only ⅛c. July corn closed ⅛c lower and December was off ⅞c, while September gained 1c.

Southwestern corn markets closed ½@⅝c higher for September and ⅛@⅞c lower for December, the latter in St. Louis, while July in Kansas City lost ⅜c, and in St. Louis was unchanged. Oats were ½c higher to ½c lower, distant futures being the weakest. In Minneapolis oats were unchanged to ⅛c higher, while rye futures gained 2⅛c and barley lost 1⅛c.

Closing prices compared with a week ago show gains on corn of 2@2½c, while oats were ⅛c higher to ⅛c lower. Pork is unchanged, lard 75c@$1.45 higher, the latter for July, and short ribs were 30@37½c lower.

Short Covering Rallies Corn.

Liquidation was on in July corn at the start, longs reducing their lines to the 200,000 bu maximum, it being the last day of grace, and prices dropped 2⅛c to $1.66⅝. Deferred deliveries slumped in sympathy, and at the bottom were off 1⅝@2c.

Local sentiment was excessively bearish, the general unrest throughout the world, induced by the high cost of living, being the big factor, but the market became oversold, and a wave of short covering developed in the last hour of trading. Offerings were limited on the way up, the surplus in the pit having been absorbed by the holders of offers and the close was at the top.

July finished at $1.69, September at $1.60⅝, and December at $1.40, the July being practically unchanged, with September up 1c. Little change was shown in the basis for sales in the sample market, No. 2 mixed bringing about 5c over the July for the bulk of trading, and industries secured some yellow on the same basis. There was rather keen competition for the white, which was scarce and wanted, outside markets buying here. Sample values were 2@3c lower, with receipts 180 cars.

Country offerings were not large, but the trade expects liberal arrivals Monday, probably around 400 cars, as the leading railroads have ordered out inspection crews for work Sunday. Shipping demand fair with sales 25,000 bu. Wet weather prevailed over a good part of the belt, and fields on low lands are getting weedy. Weekly forecast was for generally fair with about normal temperatures.

Oats in Strong Rally.

Oats were affected by the action of corn early, and dropped ⅝@⅞c from the previous day's finish, but turned very strong toward the close on a few scattered reports of damage in the northwest, and advanced ⅞@1½c from the inside figures, closing at the top, with July 67⅝c, September 65⅝c, and December at 65⅞c bid, the latter showing the most strength. July was unchanged and other deliveries higher.

Dry and hot weather prevailed in parts of Montana and a heavy rain and windstorm in Oklahoma, and were the main bullish influences. There was a fair demand for cash oats c. i. f. Buffalo at 4½c over July for No. 3 white and 5c over for standards. Domestic demand much better, with sales 70,000 bu. Sample values were unchanged to ½c lower, with receipts 132 cars. A fair increase in the visible supply is expected Monday.

Sell Malt for Export.

A fair demand for rye for export prevailed in the northwest, and Minneapolis sold 30,000 bu at 11c over Chicago July, track Baltimore. Futures broke early, but shorts covered and a rally followed, with the close at net gains of 1½c. No. 4 on spot sold at $1.40 and No. 2 at $1.47. Receipts 3 cars. Minneapolis was 2¼c higher. The northwest received 89 cars.

A good demand for barley malt for export was reported, with liberal sales but this failed to have much effect on the market, spot prices here being 2@3c lower. Crop reports from Wisconsin and Minnesota were less favorable. Samples were at $1.14@1.22. Receipts 88 cars. Milwaukee was 5c lower than Thursday and Minneapolis off 2c. Northwest receipts, 154 cars.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed unchanged to 1c lower. July, $4.66⅛ September, $4.52; October, $4.52.

Timothy seed unchanged. Country lots, [illegible] per 100 lbs. Toledo, 5c lower; October, [illegible] per bu of 45 lbs. Clover seed [illegible]. Country lots, $30.00@40.00 per 100 lbs. Toledo, 15c lower. October, $21.60 per 60 lbs.

Lard Prices Advanced.

Lard prices declined early but met buying support from packers and shorts which lifted values up and then closed at almost the highest, with gains of [illegible]. Ribs were weak, failing to get support, and closed 30c lower to 7½c higher for September. Pork had moderate attention at times and fluctuated sharply, but the wide range did not reflect a large trade. Cash business was moderate. Inquiry [illegible] for future delivery. Shipments of lard and meats for the week were 54,567,000 lbs, compared with 32,721,000 lbs the previous week, and [illegible]512,000 lbs last year. Shipments of lard last week were 15,645,000 lbs, the largest in some time. Prices were steadier at the last. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Corn traders attributed the advance following the early break yesterday to pit conditions. There was no pressure from the country and uneasiness over the telegraph situation and the possible difficulty of communication with the outside were factors that caused uneasiness among the local bear element, and they reduced their commitments. Sentiment was not changed by the advance, and the shrewd traders are taking advantage of the sharp upturn to put out their lines or to take profits on holdings bought on the break. Commission house which were bullish believe that the continued sale of futures at a big discount under the cash is in favor of holders, while the bear looks at the price and the labor unrest and can see nothing but lower values.

July oats were put on the market yesterday by three commission houses, which made them the weakest of all futures. Cash houses were moderate buyers on the break and the local shorts were inclined to even up. September is looked upon as the cheapest of the oat futures, but so far there has been no serious crop impairment. Logan & Bryan believe that the discount on oats is too great to indulge in free selling of scenery, as the crop prospects are called by the trade.

Press dispatches from Tulsa, Okla., report crop damage from wind and hail storms Friday night. There was five inches of rain and hail, according to private messages from there. The wheat crop in that section is ready to cut and damage is feared. Lawton, Okla., reported heavy rain and hail damaging the wheat now being harvested. Advices from southeastern Kansas said that the wheat crop was rapidly recovering from the effect of the recent storm, and that cool and rainy weather had delayed harvest for ten days.

Corn receipts in Chicago last week were 3,016,000 bu, an increase of 2,124,000 bu over the previous week and 992,000 bu as compared with last year, and was the largest at this time in over four years. The run included a lot of corn that came in to fill may sales, but did not get here in time to be included in the previous week's receipts. Total receipts of all grains at Chicago last week were 6,582,000 bu, an increase of 123 per cent over the previous week, 30 per cent over last year, and 40 per cent above the five year average. Grain loadings in the central and western region in May were 32,433 cars, an increase of 30.6 per cent over last year. Total loadings of grain in the central, western, and northwestern regions last month were 85,030 cars, as compared with 58,123 cars last year.

The government crop report will be given out Monday at 1:15 o'clock, Chicago time. Estimates on winter wheat are 900,000,000 to 947,000,000 bu, compared with 900,000,000 bu last month and 558,000,000 bu harvested last year. Spring wheat, 345,000,000 to 359,000,000 bu, against 358,000,000 bu last year. Condition of spring wheat ranges from 94 to 96, winter 96.1 to 98.9. All are far above the average. Oat crop estimated at 1,427,000,000 to 1,460,000,000 bu; last year's was 1,538,000,000 bu.

Aggregate wheat and rye crop of European Russia is estimated at about 30 per cent less than normal, representing a loss of 450,000,000 to 500,000,000 bu. Normal crop of wheat is 700,000,000 bu, and rye 900,000,000 bu. Siberian crops are estimated at 17 per cent above normal.

ACTIVE CALL FOR HAY

Hay was in active demand and somewhat higher, with sales of No. 1 timothy as high as $38.00 per ton. Local handlers and shippers competed for the offerings. Loadings at country points show no increase, and it is estimated that not over three days' supply is rolling to this market. Specialists expect that the demand for old hay will continue strong during this month and July. Some men feel that the highest prices of the season will be made this month. Prairie unchanged and straw dull. Receipts, 74 cars timothy, 8 cars state prairie, 2 cars packing, 1 car oats straw, and 3 cars wheat straw. Av. 1911-'18.	9.70	10.00	7.05	10.15

Contrary to expectations forecast by arrivals earleir in the year first hog arrivals for June are large. The total for the last week at 216,500 proved the largest on record for a week during the month of June. The supply was nearly 70,000 in excess of the previous week, which was a short term. On the othr hand, during the corresponding week last year the arrivals totaled only 82,389, a bad break curtailing shipments, and the total was the smallest for any week in June in ten years.

With liberal receipts during the week the hog market proved uneven, the average price for the week at $20.20 being 5c lower than the previous week and the lowest in two months. A year ago the average was $16.75, two years ago $15.58, three years ago $9.39, and four years ago only $7.70. The Saturday market showed a little strength early, but weakened later. The top at $20.00 was 15c lower than previous day and 70c lower than close of previous week.

Estimated average weight of hogs for the week at 232 pounds was same as previous week and a year ago, but nine pounds heavier than two years ago. Eleven markets received 50,000, against 63,000 previous Saturday, 52,000 a year ago, and 49,000 two years ago. Total for the week at eleven markets at 740,000 was 141,000 larger than previous week, 310,000 larger than a year ago, and 231,000 larger than the ten years' average for corresponding week.

Cattle Close Lower.

Cattle arrivals were made up of a few scattered loads, which went at unchanged prices. The liberal receipts during the week caused sharp declines, general selling being 50c@$1.00 lower. There was better action to the steer trade late in the week, but it seemed only temporarily due to a letup in liquidation.

Average price of good beef cattle for the week was $13.50, or the lowest since March 30, 1917, when it was $12.90. The average was 65c lower than previous week, $2.15 lower than a year ago, and $2.95 lower than week ending Feb. 7, when the record average of $16.45 was recorded. However, the average price for the week was $3.80 higher than the ten year average for corresponding week.

Few Sheep Sold.

Practically all the sheep received Saturday were billed direct to packers from other markets. A few on sale went at nominal prices. Lamb offerings, outside of best springers, which held steady, showed a decline of 25@50c for the week, while aged sheep declined $1.00@1.50, the late market being lowest and offerings hard to move. Light weight stock found best outlet during the week.

Lamb prices averaged $14.75 for the week, or 20c lower than previous week, $2.65 lower than a year ago, but $4.60 higher than the ten year average for corresponding week. Sheep averaged $10.70, against $11.05 previous week, $14.50 a year ago, and $7.05 for the ten yea rperiod from $19.11 to 1918.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 17,000 cattle, 47,000 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 14,304 cattle, 33,519 hogs, and 13,359 sheep corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's estimated receipts, 57,000 cattle, 180,000 hogs, and 65,000 sheep.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Regular freight service by barges is to be started between Chicago and Joliet within a few days, via the drainage canal, by the Illinois Barge and Boat company. A dozen barges have recently been launched by the company, together with several steamers and tugs. The route will be extended beyond Joliet as soon as dredging is sufficiently advanced.

Steady declines in the amount of circulating paper that had been noticed for some weeks by those who have been watching reports of the Bank of France have given considerable satisfaction. From May 8 to May 30 the Bank of France reduced its outstanding notes by 368,403,000 francs, or approximately $71,000,000. In the latest report an expansion of 309,000,000 francs, or nearly $60,000,000, appears, which almost counterbalances the advances made during May. It is thought that the June 1 requirements may have had much to do with this change; if such is the case it is probable that there is a good chance for further contractions.

Marked changes have taken place recently in the market for ferro-manganese. During the last few days English producers have authorized their representatives to offer the 80 per cent metal in this country at the equivalent of $125 a ton, delivered. Producers in this country have followed this price, but thus far little business has been done, because resales still control the market and such transactions have again been made at from $105 to $115 a ton, delivered, which must still be taken as the normal quotation.

Ovens were lighted in the Connellsville coke district last week and a general revival of interest was shown. Southern pig iron consumers are raising the point of how far furnace interests will go in making concessions. Export sales concerns have been warned that the price of steel rails may be raised $3 a ton.

Copper made a strong showing during the week. At the close of business those who were willing to accept business for June and July deliveries were quoting 17 cents a pound. August was firm at 17½ cents. The new prices represent an advance of about 1 cent, as compared with those of one week ago.

Sales of war savings and thrift stamps are showing a decline. Total sales during May were $6,558,198, against $9,572,728 in April and $70,996,041 in January. Last July, during the "thrift" campaign, sales reached $211,417,942.

Aggregate debits reported to the federal reserve bank of Chicago for the week ended Wednesday, June 4, by 190 banks in twenty-three leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, to individual deposit account, $936,723,000, and to banks and bankers' account, $734,223,000.

LINDSAY LIGHT REPORTS ADDING TO ITS PRODUCTS

The Lindsay Light company reports progress in its output of by-products. Heretofore this organization has been known chiefly as a maker of gas mantles, but its output in other directions has reached such proportions that its production during May, 1919, was 178 per cent greater than in May, 1918.

The company is to have its new dye manufacturing plant in operation within thirty days, and this is expected to bring another increase of output, as some valuable discoveries of dyestuffs will be among the products.

Under the leadership of Dr. Herbert N. McCoy, chemical director, the following have been added to the company's list of products: Thorium nitrate, cerium nitrate, cerium oxalate, U. S. P. cerium carbonates, rare earth hydrates, rare earth fluorides, didymium nitrate, beryllium nitrate, titanium potassium oxalate, rare earth in all forms, incandescent gas mantles, radioglos metal, and glass polish.

Although the technical names of these products mean little to the general public, they mean much to manufacturers who have heretofore been dependent upon Germany for their supply of chemicals. Titanium potassium oxalate, for instance, is used in the dyeing and mordanting of chrome tanned leathers, producing shades of color that are extremely fast. It is of especial value in the handling of glaza kid and calfskin. The development of the by-products put out by this company is a result of the great war and forms an interesting chapter in the history of the chemical progress of this country.

Chicagoans Own Bulk of Commonwealth Edison

Figures showing that the Commonwealth Edison company is a home owned corporation were given out yesterday by Louis A. Ferguson, vice president. Chicagoans now hold 80 per cent of the stock and constitute 77 per cent of all stockholders. Of all the stockholders 55 per cent, or 3,464 are men, 40 per cent, or 2,340, are women, and 5 per cent, or 288, represent miscellaneous shareholders, such as banks, estates, etc. The original financing of the old Chicago Edison company was done by local men. Since then there has been a wide distribution of interest in the company among small investors.

INSURANCE NEWS IN ALL BRANCHES EAST AND WEST

Women Are Found to Be Superior Insurance Risks.

BY THOMAS R. WEDDELL.

Now that women are to have suffrage, they are also coming into their own in the matter of life insurance appreciation. The tabulation of the experience of life insurance companies on women, made by the Actuarial Society of America, shows that women are better insurance risks than men. Heretofore they have been discriminated against and some companies refuse entirely to write them.

The figures show that unmarried women are the best class of risks, the second best being married women who have made their children the beneficiaries of their policies and paid the premiums out of home savings. The third class are married women who make their children the beneficiaries of the policies and whose husbands pay the premiums, while the poorest risks are married women with no children and whose husbands are the beneficiaries under the policy.

SURCHARGE HEARING THIS WEEK.

The interesting insurance meeting of the week will be the conference to be held in New York City Tuesday between representatives of the fire insurance companies and the special committee of insurance commissioners appointed to consider the 10 per cent surcharge on premiums to cover the war taxes and expenses. The companies claim that the 10 per cent surcharge does not begin to cover their increased costs, especially the higher costs of replacements, at the present scale of wages and prices of building materials. They will be fortified by official statements from the federal government declaring that no material reduction in wages and cost of building materials is to be expected soon. On their fire underwriting, excluding hail, tornado, automobile, and other more profitable side lines, the companies made an underwriting profit of only 1.89 per cent last year. As the 10 per cent surcharge was in effect most of the year, it is evident that without this addition the business would have been done at a heavy underwriting loss.

ÆTNA'S CENTENNIAL.

The Ætna Fire Insurance company of Hartford will celebrate the one hundredth anniversary of its organization on Thursday. The officers and directors will hold a reception to which invitations have been sent to the officers of all leading insurance companies of the country.

HARTFORD INCREASES CAPITAL.

The business of the Hartford Fire has been growing very rapidly, and it has been decided to increase its capital from $2,000,000, the present figure, to $4,000,000, selling the new stock at $150 a share, so as to add $1,000,000 to the surplus. The last quotations of Hartford stock were $855 a share, so that the stock rates will constitute a handsome melon. It is figured that the increased stock will be held at about $600 a share.

COTTON RALLIES; PRICE NEAR TOP

NEW YORK, June 7.—Cotton prices weakened early on renewed general liquidation and absence of good buying. The selling power exhausted itself later and a covering movement set in which carried prices up, and, while the close was not the best, there were gains of 42@53 points. Reports from the dry goods district indicated a light shading in prices of goods, the advanced prices of late having checked the demand. The export movement continues liberal and indications are for a large outward movement. Exports for the season have been 4,294,000 bales, against 3,557,000 bales last year. There has been heavy liquidation on the recent decline, which has clarified the atmosphere.

Bank clearings for the week exceed all previous records. Checks cleared amounted to $8,388,000,000, as compared to a previous record of $7,729,000,000. A compilation of May clearings shows that the monthly totals also constitute a new record, exceeding $33,000,000,000.

There is a tendency toward a contraction of credits in the Chicago territory. Rediscounts of the federal reserve banks of Chicago of bills secured by government obligations declined $24,300,000 during the week and contrasts to a gain of practically as much in the previous week. Other discounts decreased $8,200,000. The reserve bank went into the open market to place money released by these repayments. Government deposits dropped from $24,256,000 to $5,401,000.

Stock exchange activity was largely responsible for a gain of $205,000,000 in loans and discounts of the clearing house banks of New York. An interesting contrast was a decrease of $39,600,000 in net demand deposits. Despite apparent expansion, a decrease in deposits gave the associated banks a betterment of $14,700,000 in surplus reserve.

COFFEE PRICES.

NEW YORK, June 7.—Reports of firmer Brazilian markets led to considerable covering in the market for coffee futures here today and there was also some trade buying on the advance. The opening was 11 to 16 points higher and the close was at the best point of the day, showing a net advance of 24 to 28 points. Reports that banking interests in Brazil estimated the coming Santos crop at only 4,084,000 bags, including the carry-over of old crop coffee, were a factor on the advance. Closing bids: July, 19.44c; September, 19.06c; October, 18.88c; December, 18.50c; January, 18.90c; March, 18.25c; May, 18.08c.

Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7s, 19⅞c; Santos 4s, 24½c nominal. The official cables reported an advance of 75 reis at Rio. Santos spots were 100 reis higher and futures 125 reis higher. Victoria cleared 7,000 and Santos 25,000 for New York. Brazilian port receipts 21,000; Jundiahy receipts 8,000.

OIL MARKETS.

NEW YORK, June 7.—The market for cottonseed oil today was dull and uninteresting, with the undertone about steady, due to the better showing in cotton and bullish situation in lard and crude oil. Sales, 100 brls. Crude quoted 21.00c bid; prime summer yellow spot, 24.00c; July, 24.75c; September, 25.25c; December, 22.85c.

SHIPPING SHARES LEAD ADVANCE IN DAY'S TRADE

Market Active and Realizing Sales Fail to Affect It.

The New York Times.

New York, June 7.—[Special.]—The evening up processes of a Saturday were punctuated in today's stock session by fairly sharp advances of shipping and kindred issues and a number of industrial specialties.

Gains in these extended from two to nine points, and while buying was quieter among the railroad shares, several scored advances which gave them a firm appearance throughout the short session. The market was active from start to finish, and an output of realizinz sales of substantial proportions evidently worked to nullify in part the effect of fresh purchases for the advance.

Confidence as Week Ends.

The week ended without the presence of influences of an economic or political nature to hasten selling as a precaution against possible developments before the security markets reopened, and in this the situation was quite different from the week before.

Prior to the Memorial day recess there were expectations that important developments at Paris might come over the holiday. Today traders felt that news dispatches indicated no new events, at least before the allied commissioners acted on the German proposals on Monday, the results of which might not become public until late in the day.

Loan Possibility Discussed.

Discussion of the Street dealt with the statement by President Day of the Equitable Life Assurance society that the secretary of the treasury contemplated another government loan. It was doubtful, however, whether this had any real effect on dealings, either in stocks or in the Liberty bonds and victory notes, inasmuch as banking opinion held that future government borrowings, of great or moderate extent, would probably not be arranged through the medium of a broad selling campaign.

Mr. Glass let it be known when announcing terms of the last loan in April that the treasury would need a round amount of funds and recourse to borrowing would have to be made to supply them.

There is reason to believe that the process will be different from great popular loans. Offerings of treasury certificates are looked for from time to time, and a possibility exists of a continuous offering of bonds or notes to begin later in the year, in form attractive to investors.

"Commercial Credit Co.,
Baltimore, Md.

Gentlemen:—

Some months ago when we made use of your services, we were in urgent need of funds, and which apparently could not have been procured from any other source. We have found our relations thoroughly satisfactory; your treatment of us has been courteous and you always acted in the spirit of accommodation.

While we are glad to say that our financial condition has been much strengthened by the changes which have transpired in our business, so that we are no longer in need of financial aid, we are none the less grateful for what was rendered by your Company."

None too big to be benefited by our service—at least at times. Your business uninterrupted and customers undisturbed.

NOTE:—This MILLION DOLLAR CONCERN made use of our service by releasing the Capital tied up in their Accounts, when money conditions were unfavorable and when additional working capital was most essential to them. Isn't it reasonable that WE RENDERED A VALUED SERVICE TO THEIR CREDITORS ALSO by probably preventing disaster?

Ours is the Largest Company of its kind in the United States.

Don't Be an Ostrich

Don't allow present prices of material and labor to blind you to the fact that industrial work in this country is daily increasing in volume.

If you bury your head in the sand of "prices-are-too-high-now" talk, you are apt not to see the true trend of the times, and thus be left behind.

The building business is rapidly picking up, and as it gains impetus prices will rise and deliveries slow down. So if you want your new plant this year, you had better get started now.

Our booklet, "A Better Way to Build Your New Plant," tells how we make your dollar act the quickest and go the farthest. Send for it.

WEEK'S REAL ESTATE MARKET ACTIVE IN NEARLY ALL LINES

WEEK'S REALTY MARKET MAKES FINE SHOWING

Factory Property and Streeterville Week's Features.

The week's real estate market was of a highly satisfactory character, with a large volume of business, well diversified both as to the character as well as location of the properties involved. In one respect it showed an improvement over the previous week, and that was in manufacturing property. The transactions in this latter class of property constituted one of the most conspicuous features of the week's business.

Perhaps the most sensational feature was furnished by Streeterville, which came to the front with two big deals involving improvements aggregating $1,500,000. Taken in connection with the important developments of the previous week and the reports of other important transactions pending, they constitute one of the most interesting real estate developments in recent years.

The announcement of the plans for going ahead with the erection of the $1,000,000 Ritz hotel at Kenmore and Granville avenues was also another important development, while there was a large movement of apartment property, as well as lots and improved residential property in the outlying sections. In only one respect did the market make a poor showing, and that was with respect to business property, which was without a noteworthy representation in the entire week's business, with the exception of Edward I. Bloom's big purchase at Stony Island avenue and Sixty-seventh street.

The one conspicuous and significant feature was the unusually large number of transactions involving important improvements to a greater extent probably than any preceding week since the beginning of the present real estate and building revival.

Plans $1,500,000 Plant.

The most important of the deals in manufacturing property was of special interest for the reason it involves the erection of a $1,500,000 plant.

It was the purchase by the All American Truck company from John J. Lovett, president of the Pioneer State Savings bank, of a tract of thirty-four acres at the southwest corner of Grand avenue and Natchez street, for a reported consideration of about $100,000. The company will immediately begin the construction of the first unit of a plant the ultimate cost of which will be $1,500,000. The cost of the first unit is estimated at about $200,000. Plans for the building are now being prepared by Architect Samuel N. Crowen.

In connection with the construction of the plant the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank has underwritten a bond issue for $150,000, to run seven years.

Sold by Original Owners.

The land acquired fronts north 666 feet on Grand avenue, with an average depth of 2,200 feet, back to the main line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul right of way, and adjoins on the east the Dunning branch of the road.

A peculiar interest attaches to the tract for the reason it has been in the Lovett family since it was platted by the government. Joseph Lovett, an ancestor of J. J. Lovett, secured a patent from the government during the administration of President Tyler.

It is stated that during the last six months the company has jumped from two hundred and forty-ninth place to tenth place in the list of truck manufacturers. R. H. Spears is president and R. J. Sutton vice president. The sale of the land was negotiated by J. N. Litsey and J. E. Briggs.

Sell Old Luetgert Factory.

The old Luetgert sausage factory at the southwest corner of Diversey boulevard and Hermitage avenue also figured in a deal.

This property was conveyed by the Library bureau, who acquired the property several years ago, to Gumbinsky Bros., paper stock, for an indicated consideration of $165,000, the purchasers giving back a part purchase money mortgage to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, for $100,000, five years, at 6 per cent. It is said the purchasers will convert the present four story building on the premises into a woolen mill. The land comprised in the plant is 315.5x141 feet, and a parcel adjacent on the south 176x16x227x173 feet.

An interesting transaction in west side manufacturing property was the sale by the Otis Elevator company to the Walter J. Hirsch company, peanut butter, now at 360 West Superior street, of the property at the southeast corner of Sixteenth and Laflin streets, lot 100x100 feet, improved with a five story concrete building 65x100 feet, for a reported consideration of $60,000. The purchasing company will occupy the premises after extensive remodeling of the building. J. J. Harrington & Co. represented both parties.

Buy Clearing Flour Mill.

In another notable transaction the Washburn-Crosby company of Minneapolis sold to K. P. Kimball of the Kimball-Martindale company of Bay City, Mich., their flour mill at Clearing for a reported consideration of $75,000. The ground comprises 76,422 square feet and is improved with a three story mill, with one story warehouse, containing about 25,000 square feet, which is served by a Belt railway switch on both sides of the building. The mill was erected in 1918, but owing to the close of the war its use was discontinued by the Minneapolis firm. The new owners expect to use the premises for the storage and distribution of beans, peas, and cereals. J. W. Harrington & Co. were the brokers.

Ware Bros., owners of the Chicago Roller Skate company, have just purchased from H. H. Porter the property at the southwest corner of Forty-second avenue and West Lake street, having a frontage of 550 feet on Lake street by 100 feet in depth. They will improve this with a one story machine shop, containing approximately 35,000 square feet, to cost about $75,000, which they will occupy in the near future with their business. H. N. Rose represented the sellers and J. J. Harrington & Co. the purchasers.

Sale of St. Germaine Building to Michigan Man

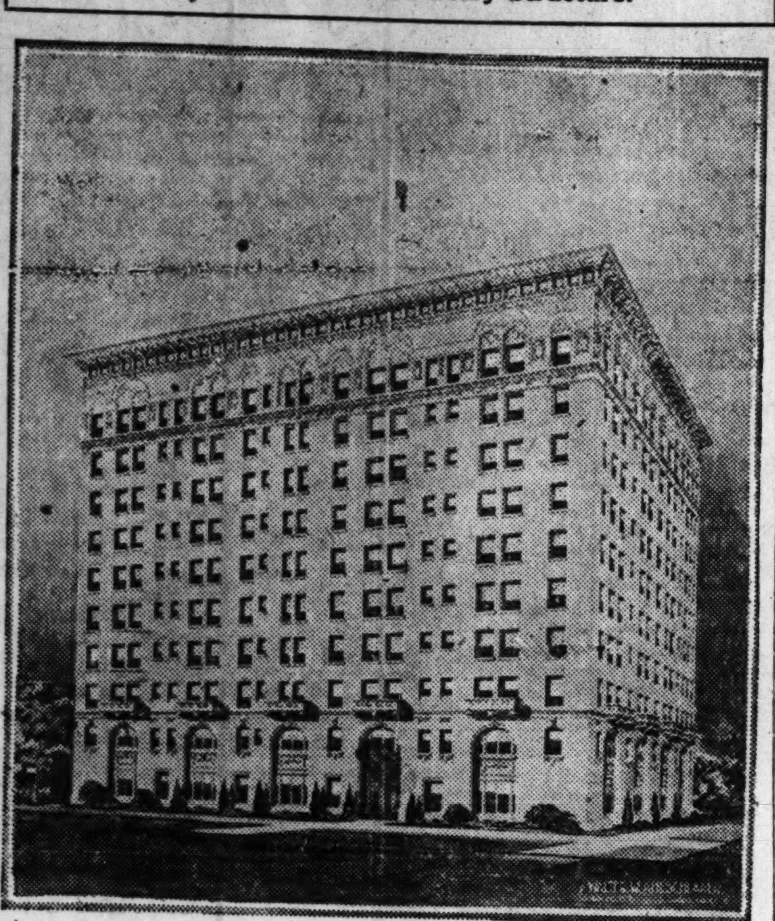
The St. Germaine building, at the southwest corner of Thirty-fifth street and Ellis avenue, recently transferred, has again changed hands, having been conveyed by A. C. Thompson of Ladysmith, Wis., to Homer C. Millan of Ann Arbor, Mich., for a reported consideration of $125,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000. It is a six story fireproof structure and is said to have a gross annual rental of about $14,000. The purchaser conveyed in exchange $75,000 worth of stock of the Michigan Portland Cement company of Chelsea, Mich. George W. Stewart represented both parties.

Buy $30,000 Building for a Battery Factory

The 80x181 feet with old improvements at 2435-39 Indiana avenue has been sold by P. A. and R. H. Newton to Isadore B. Freed of the Cole Storage Battery company for a reported cash consideration of $30,000, subject to an incumbrance of $12,500. The purchasing company plans to remodel the present building into a modern storage battery manufacturing building, to contain about 13,000 square feet, at an expense of about $10,000, and will occupy it with its business. Mark Levy & Bro. represented both parties.

BEGIN $1,000,000 HOTEL

New Ritz Will Be 10 Story Structure.



Ground has been broken at the northwest corner of Kenmore and Granville avenues for the erection of the ten story apartment hotel to be erected by Daniel Goldberg, auditor of the Blackstone hotel, and other hotel men. It will occupy a lot 100x150 feet, will contain 217 suites of apartments, will be known as the Ritz, and will be owned and operated by the Ritz Hotel company.

It was designed by Architect Walter W. Ahlschlager and will cost in excess of $1,000,000. H. O. Stone & Co. and the Fort Dearborn Trust and Savings bank have underwritten a serial bond issue of $600,000, two to ten years at 6 per cent, in connection with the construction of the building.

PAYS $42,000 FOR RESIDENCE IN EVANSTON

A notable deal in high grade Evanston residence property was reported in the purchase by William C. Waggoner of the McCord Manufacturing company from Fannie M. Wilder of the attractive three story brick residence at 1120 Lake Shore drive, for an indicated cash consideration of $42,000, according to the stamps on the deed. The house has ten rooms and three bathrooms, is modern in every detail, and occupies a lot 90x175 feet. Clyde D. Foster, with Quinlan & Tyson, and Robert S. Clark were the brokers.

B. G. Miller of the insurance firm of Critchell, Miller, Whitney & Barbour has sold to Alfred N. Murray the attractive residence property at 6133 Kenmore avenue, Edgewater, for an indicated consideration of $19,000. It is a colonial stucco residence on a lot 50x150 feet of ground. H. W. Harpold & Co. were the brokers.

$110,000 Site Negotiated for $1,000,000 Theater

Record was made of the transfer by Edward M. Bertha to the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of the property in Cottage Grove avenue, 266 feet south of Sixty-third street, west front, 225x125 feet, for a stated consideration of $110,000, subject to $56,000 incumbrance. This is the plot which is to serve as the site of the propose $1,000,000 theater to be operated by Balaban & Katz.

PAYS $180,000 FOR TERM RENT FOR LOOP STORE

Ilg Company's $400,000 Bonds Underwritten at 6 Per Cent.

There was little doing in leases of building space, the feature being the one in which E. F. Keebler & Co. leased for Harry C. Moir, president of the Moir Hotel company, to I. Lipcowitz the store at 53 West Madison street, in the Morrison Hotel building, for twelve years at a term rental of $180,000. The lessee has been in possession of this store for some time at a rental based on gross sales, and his success induced him to close a long term lease at a straight rental. He operates a chain of men's furnishing goods stores in the loop, this being the fourth store he has leased through Keebler & Co.

In connection with the construction of the proposed new plant of the Ilg Electric Ventilating company at the southwest corner of Crawford avenue and George street, S. W. Straus & Co. have underwritten a serial bond issue loan of $400,000 at 6 per cent. It is expected to begin this work of construction in about a week.

The building will be a modern two story concrete factory structure containing about 100,000 square feet of floor space, and will be the first unit of multi-unit plan. It will be located on a tract of about ten acres, and with the land will represent an investment of about $450,000. The company is one of the largest manufacturers of fans and blowers in the United States.

Term Renal of $75,000.

John J. Corbett has leased to James Annes the L shaped store and basement at the northeast corner of Monroe and Wells streets for a term from July 1, 1919, to April 30, 1929, at a term rental of $75,000. The lessor is to remodel the entire building, putting in new fronts on the first floor, and the lessee, who will occupy the premises with a restaurant, will expend about $15,000 in alterations. J. G. Kirk & Co. represented the lessor, and Chiagouris & Vlachos the lessee.

Rosenthal & Bandeker, in connection with Mark Levy & Bro., have leased to the Trindil Machine works a one story building to be erected at 2917-23 South Wabash avenue on 72x192 feet of ground for a reported term rental of $61,500. The firm makes a specialty of regrinding cylinders and their trade extends all over this country.

Obtains Loan of $110,000.

Axel H. Johnson has given a trust deed to W. H. Mellin to secure a loan of $110,000 for five years at 6 per cent secured by the Diversey apartments at 428-430 Diversey parkway.

Improvements Planned on Dearborn Parkway

Paul Steinbrecher & Co. have made a sale which involves an attractive development on Dearborn parkway, in the block adjoining Lincoln park, of the big three story stone front dwelling on twenty-five feet of ground at 1439 Dearborn parkway, which was sold by C. L. Strobel to Dr. Otto L. Schmidt and Isaac H. Mayer, who will wreck the building and divide the lot between them. Dr. Schmidt recently bought the Seipp residence, which he is remodeling, and will add to it the property just acquired. Mr. Mayer recently bought a fifty foot lot from the University of Chicago, and on this and the property just acquired he contemplates the erection of a high grade apartment building to cost around $100,000 and will occupy one of the apartments.

Help Enforce New Blue Sky Law.

People who are considering the purchase of any of the numerous promotion stocks now being offered to residents of Illinois might well delay their decision a few days. A bill just passed by the legislature makes it obligatory on promoters to show financial statements if they use any printed matter at all. It also forbids their presenting figures showing the big profits that some other company is supposed to have made. At last accounts it carried an emergency clause to make it take effect immediately on being signed by the governor.

The new law will not, of course, repeal the ancient rule, that "a fool and his money are soon parted." The small investor who insists on buying gold bricks will still be able to exchange his money for them, but the man who exercises ordinary prudence will be able to avoid some of the pitfalls that have been open in the past.

The old law was based on the theory that state officials should decide what stocks the small investor may buy safely. The new one puts its main reliance on an effort to compel promoters to disclose the unvarnished facts about their promotions. To make it effective, a certain amount of coöperation on the part of investors is needed. They must first insist on making the financial statements that the law makes compulsory. Then they must base their decision on the printed statement and not on the oral camouflage of the stock salesmen.

American Woolen.

C. W. M.—The American Woolen company has been making enormous gross earnings since the war began. In 1918 taxes were high and a large depreciation allowance was made. The surplus figured out at 13¾ per cent on the $20,000,000 of common stock, compared with 20¼ in 1917. Total surplus showed an increase of more than $5,000,000, due to the adding to it of reserves previously set aside to provide for depreciation of inventories. Inventories have increased in value and the profit and loss surplus is now equal to 98½ per cent of the common stock. There is no bonded debt and floating debt has been reduced to $3,350,700. There is $40,000,000 of preferred stock.

Virginian Railway.

E. R. P., Cincinnati, O.—The Virginian railway made average annual earnings of 6½ per cent on its $27,995,000 of preferred stock in the five years preceding 1918. The complete report for that year is not yet available, but indications are that 2 or 3 per cent was earned on preferred. The preferred is entitled to 5 per cent cumulative. The only payment ever made was 7 per cent two years ago.

Brief Answers.

O. O., Rock Island, Ill.—The Laclede Steel company has been operating since 1912. It has increased its capital several times to absorb new plants and has issued one or two large stock dividends. It now has $2,200,000 outstanding and no bonded debt. Earnings and cash dividends not reported.

H. S.—Atchison general 4s are a high grade investment, being secured by first lien on a large part of the system. Interest is earned four or five times.

CHANDLER DECLARES DIVIDEND.

Cleveland, O., June 7.—Directors of the Chandler Automobile company today declared a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent, an increase of 1 per cent over the last quarter, payable July 1. This places the stock on a 16 per cent basis instead of 12 per cent.

Hotel Building and Business Block to Be Built.

Business property cut a poor figure in the week's business, there having been only one noteworthy transaction—Edward I. Bloom's purchases around Stony Island avenue and Sixty-seventh street. There was nothing doing in a sales way in the downtown district, and little outside. Mr. Bloom's purchases were of special interest for the reason that he plans ultimately to improve them with high grade business buildings.

He purchased from A. Alexander, P. J. McShane, and H. B. Edmonds, and from Ellen L. Van Schaick two parcels on Sixty-seventh street and Sixty-seventh place for an aggregate consideration of $186,000. He acquired from the three first named grantors the vacant 125x115 feet at the northwest corner of Sixty-seventh place, for a stated consideration of $66,000, and from Mrs. Van Schaick the property at the northwest corner of Sixty-seventh street, 259x125 feet, back to Sixty-sixth place, for an indicated consideration of $120,000. This parcel has old frame improvements of no value.

While Mr. Bloom has no plans looking to the immediate improvement of these properties, he plans either this fall or next spring to improve the larger parcel with a high grade hotel building. The smaller parcel he plans to improve with a business building to contain various entertainment features. R. M. O'Brien & Co. negotiated the first deal, and with Harrison L. Van Schaick the other transaction.

The business property in West Twelfth street, 141 feet west of Kedzie avenue, lot 25x125 feet, south front, with store and flat improvements, has been conveyed by Albert W. Keller to Benjamin Albin and Alexander Eisenstein, for an indicated consideration of $36,000, subject to an incumbrance of $4,500. The buyers gave back to the seller a trust deed securing a loan of $16,500, five years, at 5½ per cent.

This is an actual sketch of a typical scene in one of our Residence Streets, made by the artist right on the ground. It is true to life. Ask to see it when you come.

What and Where Is "Clearing"

This is a page for the wage-earner who is determined to become independent as early in life as possible. It is also a page for the real estate investor who is always on the lookout for good investments that promise big returns. And for the business man—the grocer and butcher and merchant who know the value of establishing a business amidst a thriving population.

With most subdivisions of property the pages of advertising come first and the development comes afterward. The Chicago Clearing Land Association has preferred to do it the opposite way. The development work has been done. The pioneering is through. There are upwards of Twenty Million Dollars of investments already here. The time for wage earners, investors and business men to come here and make big profits has arrived. And now we are ready to give you the facts in a fitting way. Read and you will see how and why this property is now ready for you.

Clearing's Industrial Development Means Both Opportunity for Work and Profitable Investment

Clearing is the old Stickney property and the old Wentworth farm (once owned by "Long John" Wentworth, at one time Mayor of Chicago), together with several other holdings which now aggregate about three thousand acres. It is the largest single unincumbered property under one ownership in Cook County. Clearing is in the City of Chicago on the Southwest Side—the fastest growing section of Chicago. The heart of the district is at 63d Street and Central (56th) Avenue. It is crossed by two street car lines with a five-cent fare downtown.

Clearing was originally planned entirely as a great freight clearing center for the railroads of Chicago. And that is how it got its name. And that is also why this wonderful development has sometimes been misunderstood.

Clearing was the great dream of a great man which enormous sums of money have made come true. His dream was to combine all the big railroads of Chicago so that their freight could be handled together at a saving of many millions of dollars every year. Then beside this, a model factory district was to be established, so that every factory would be virtually on the main line of all the great railroads of the country. And finally, entirely separate from this, there was to be built a beautiful home district where a man could walk from his own home to his work and yet be as entirely separated from it as if he lived miles away.

All this has taken fortunes and years to accomplish. But now it is done.

In 1913 the Belt Railway of Chicago purchased the Clearing Yards for $4,400,000 cash, since when it has about doubled the amount of its investment.

Twelve great trunk lines entered into a fifty year lease with the Belt Railway to clear their freight through these yards. These yards now have a capacity of handling ten thousand cars of freight a day.

The factory district came next, with spur tracks running into every factory. At one end of this Clearing factory district is the great refining plant of the Corn Products Refining Co., at Argo, whose property, 118 acres, was sold to them by the Chicago Clearing Land Association. At the other end is the great Continental Can Company's $2,000,000 plant, the most marvelous plant of the century, designed from the very start for the welfare of its employes. And in between these two are twenty-six other thriving factories.

Come Out Today—Rain or Shine. How to Get Here

Clearing is on 63d Street at Central (56th) Avenue. Take the car on 63d Street marked "63-Austin" and it will bring you right to the property without transfer. Or, if you prefer, just phone for one of our automobiles. It is free and you are under no obligation in doing so. Come today and it may prove the most memorable Sunday of your life.

Next comes the business district. Through this business district runs the great artery of 63d Street, the greatest street, the biggest money-maker for investors on the whole South Side. The only street south of 22d Street that runs clear through from the lake to the Drainage Canal—a distance of 12 miles. The history of the increase of property values on 63d Street already reads like a romance. And yet its greatest history of increase is still to come. And this brings us to

The Beautiful Home District

Standing amidst any of these pretty bungalows and attractive homes in this clean, green residence district, you would hardly know that there was a factory or a railway yard within a thousand miles. And yet a man can leave his home and walk to his work in fifteen minutes.

It is a fine, open district with thousands of shade trees already planted, with hundreds of homes already built, with dozens of children already claiming it as their birthplace. A place where the little ones are happy, where the women are healthy and the men are prosperous.

Only One Thing More The development of the great industrial part of Clearing out of which our profits must be made depends entirely upon how attractive the home district is made and how rapidly the business district builds up. Anybody can see that. Without workers you can't have factories and industrial plants.

So we have made the home property and the business property as attractive as we could and have kept the prices down to bedrock to make it highly profitable for you to come. In other words, in order to make OUR investment good, we have had to make YOUR investment good. In all the history of Chicago you have never had a better opportunity to make big money out of a small investment in residence and business property than you have right here at Clearing today. A man can actually make his first investment on a very reasonable first payment and the balance on easy terms. And there is no telling how much that investment will make for you as this great development goes on.

The property has sewer, water, gas, electricity, stores, schools, church and state bank. Any man ought to be able easily to gain his independence and possibly his fortune here. And the time to begin investigating is—NOW.

Twice the life for your silk stockings!

After every wearing, dip them in these delicate suds

SILK stockings should never be left unlaundered after a single wearing, as perspiration attacks the fibre and weakens it. Freshen them, the moment they get soiled, in pure Lux suds!

Lux comes in delicate white flakes that dissolve instantly in hot water. You simply toss a tablespoonful into hot water and stir up a rich lather. Then add cold water until the suds are lukewarm—and in your stockings go!

Don't let another pair of your silk stockings be ruined by perspiration. Get Lux today from your grocer, druggist or department store.—Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

A few don'ts for silk stockings

Never wring silk stockings. Wringing injures the fibre. Just squeeze the water out gently.

Always use a warm iron, never a hot one. Heat injures silk fibre and yellows white and delicate colors.

Spread clocked stockings on a towel, and roll immediately to dry. Iron while still damp. This will keep the clocks from running.

Lux won't hurt anything pure water alone won't injure.

No. 400

Will You Buy a Hand Brush as Good as This

Many of your fellow-citizens in Chicago are buying them. Mr. E. A. Heald, of Canton, Ill., tells you why you should in this corking testimonial:

"I am now using your bath-brush, hand-brush, and tooth-brush, and find them superior to any other make I have ever used. I had to purchase the bath- and hand-brush from you direct, as our dealers say that these goods are too 'high-priced' to sell in this community, but if true, it is merely because the buying public do not know quality in these articles, and I believe there are plenty of people in this city who would appreciate so good an article if they could see them and make the purchase at our local stores. I believe the brushes are all you claim for them, and I do not expect to be without them as long as I can procure them."

For sale by the leading drug and department stores. Go to your regular store today and buy one sure. Always sold in a Yellow Box.

Middle West Utilities Company

IN 1912, after extensive analysis of the territory to be served, Mr. Samuel Insull and associates founded the Middle West Utilities Company. Its purpose was not only to supply electrical energy, gas, railway and other public utilities to consumers, but to supply these utilities with such advantages in cost and dependability of service as could only be accomplished by the methods and principles of operation, management and finance previously proved in other territories and in other successful companies by the same management.

The soundness of the basis on which this company was founded can best be realized by examination of the results in terms of earnings which have steadily increased.

This is especially true of the company's new issue of

$1,500,000

TERRITORY SERVED

The Middle West Utilities Company through its subsidiary companies operates in the following fifteen states: Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Michigan, Missouri, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New York, Oklahoma, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin. DON'T CUT! Cutting or trimming the cuticle ruins it. It merely encourages ragged growth.

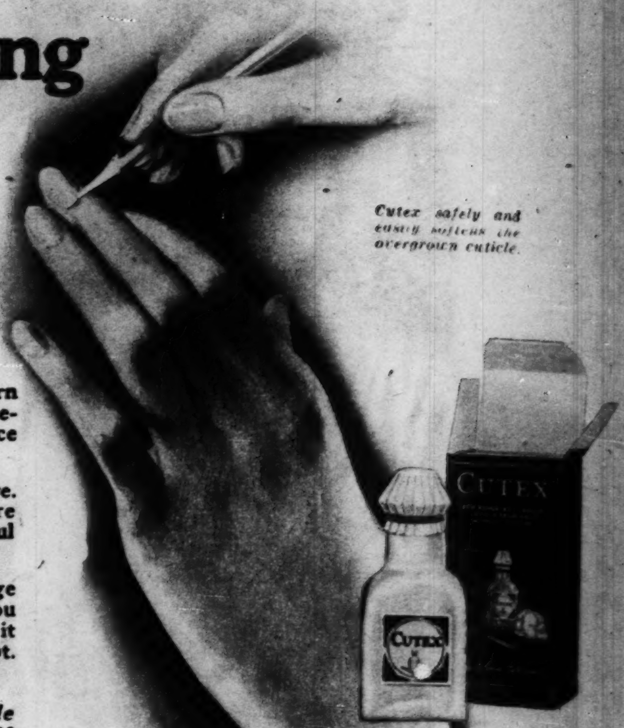
The folly of cutting the cuticle

Never, under any circumstances, cut the cuticle, say specialists everywhere



Cutex safely and easily softens the overgrown cuticle.

Any drug or department store—35c and 65c.

When you use a knife or scissors on your cuticle it grows faster than ever. Each time it becomes drier and rougher.

One trial of Cutex will demonstrate the folly of trying to manage the unruly skin around the base of your nails with knife or scissors.

Remove surplus, overgrown cuticle gently, safely, this way—

Open the Cutex package and wrap some of the absorbent cotton around the end of the orange stick. Dip the stick into the bottle and work it around the base of your nails, gently pressing back the cuticle. Then rinse the fingers thoroughly in clear water, pushing the softened cuticle back as you dry the hands.

Under the magic of Cutex, the stubborn cuticle yields immediately. You will be delighted with the well-groomed appearance your nails make!

Get Cutex at any drug or department store. Or send today for the trial Cutex manicure set offered below and see what a wonderful manicure you can give your nails.

The trial set is complete, even with orange stick and absorbent cotton, and gives you at least six perfect manicures. Send for it today. Address Northam Warren, Dept. 930, 114 West 17th St., New York City.

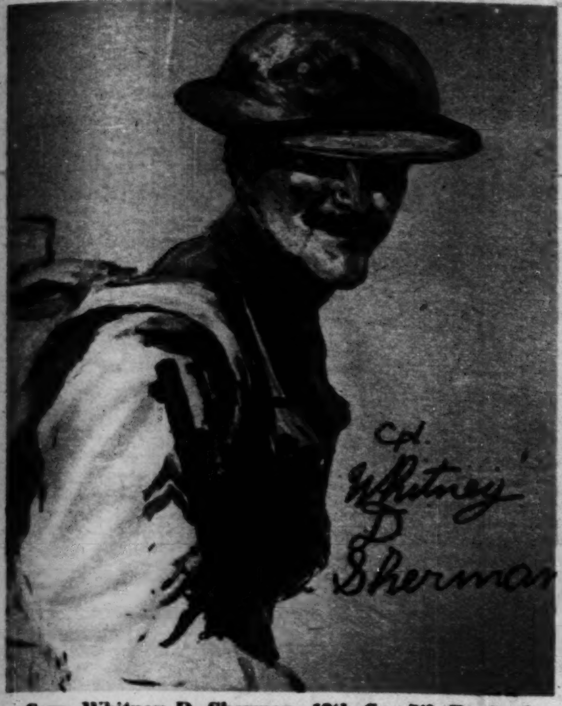
BRAVE AMERICANS

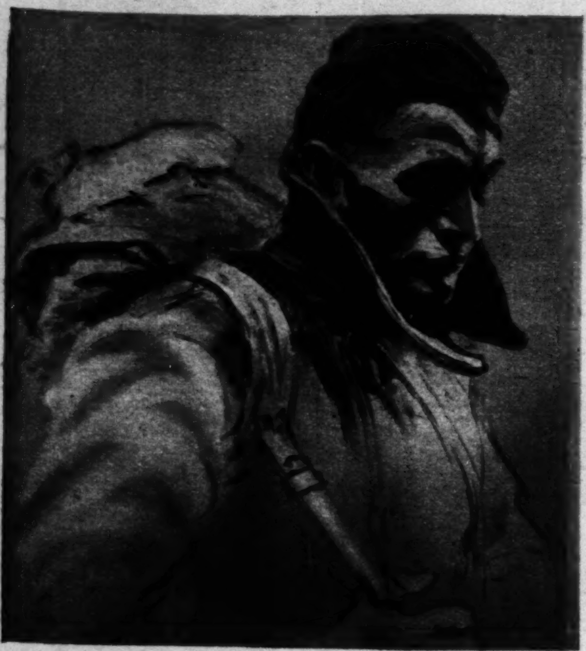
Portraits of medal winners, made in France and Germany by Joseph Cummings Chase, official portrait painter of the A. E. F.

(Copyright, 1919, by The Evening Mail Syndicate.)



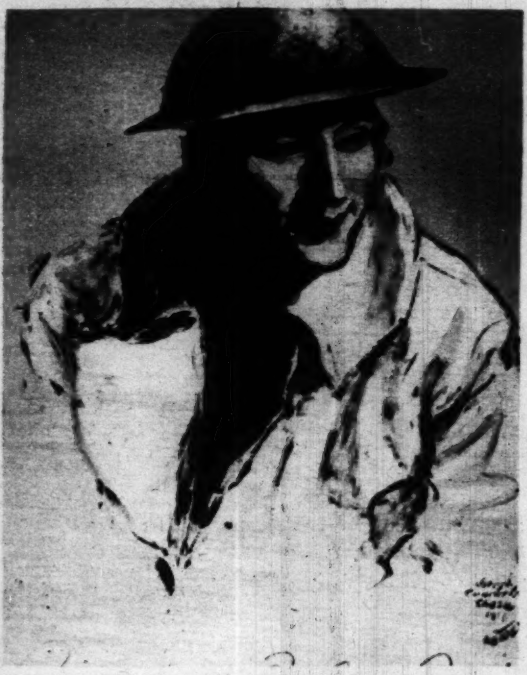
Corp. Whitney D. Sherman, 18th Co., 5th Regt. of Marines, 2d Division.

Corp. Sherman, at Belleau Wood, was one of those hurried forward in motor trucks to stop the drive on Paris. Though wounded in the leg, he went over the top with a dashing disregard of danger, making deadly use of his rifle and bayonet under murderous fire of the enemy machine guns.



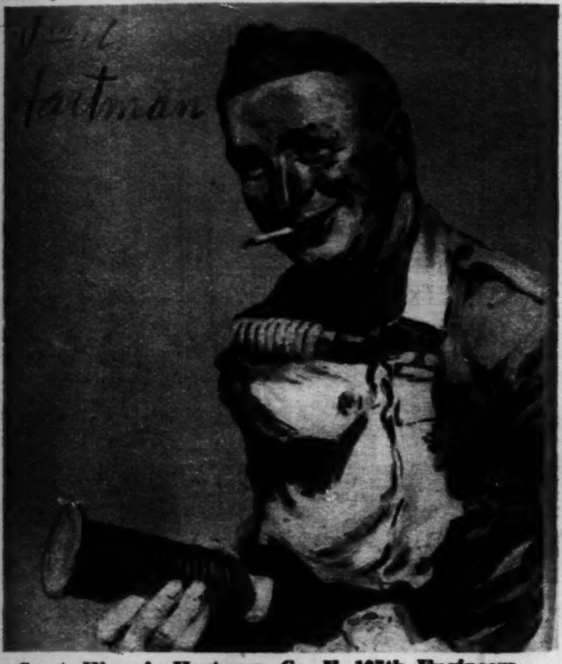
Sergt. Herman Korth Co. D, 121st Machine Gun Battalion, 32d Division.

Under heavy fire from machine guns and artillery, well in sight of the enemy, Sergt. Korth crawled to the crest of a slight hill and there set stakes to line our artillery fire on enemy machine gun emplacements. He remained in this perilous position, setting stakes and resetting them, and signaling back when our own troops were endangered by the fire of our batteries.



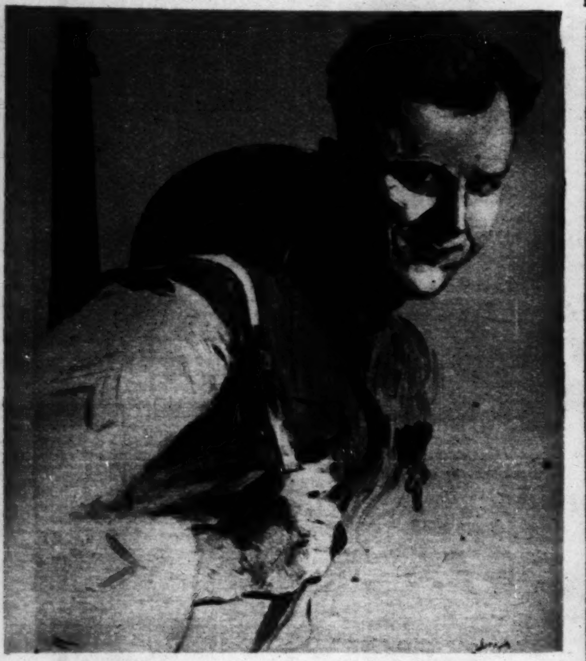
Burton M. Baker, Machine Gun Co., 168th Inf., 42d Division.

On the Lorraine front near Badonviller Private Baker's battalion was in the trenches for the first time. Most of his comrades in his unit were killed or wounded, and the oncoming boches far outnumbered the small group of Americans. Baker, by his disregard of personal danger, showed such a dashing example that his fellows collected around him and the boche attack was repelled.



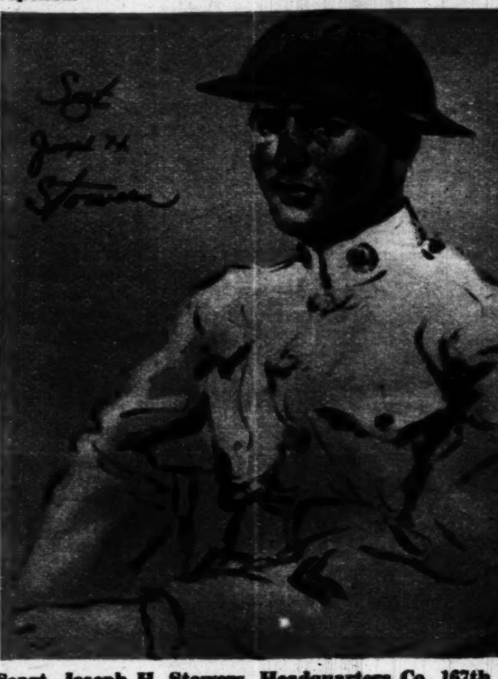
Sergt. Wm. A. Hartman, Co. F, 107th Engineers, 32d Division.

Sergt. Hartman was sent out to examine the Vesle river front near Fismes for a location for pontoon bridges and for material for making these structures. The patrol accompanying him under heavy artillery and machine gun fire was scattered. Hartman continued on his own initiative and, entirely without orders, started the actual construction of rafts for pontoon bridges.



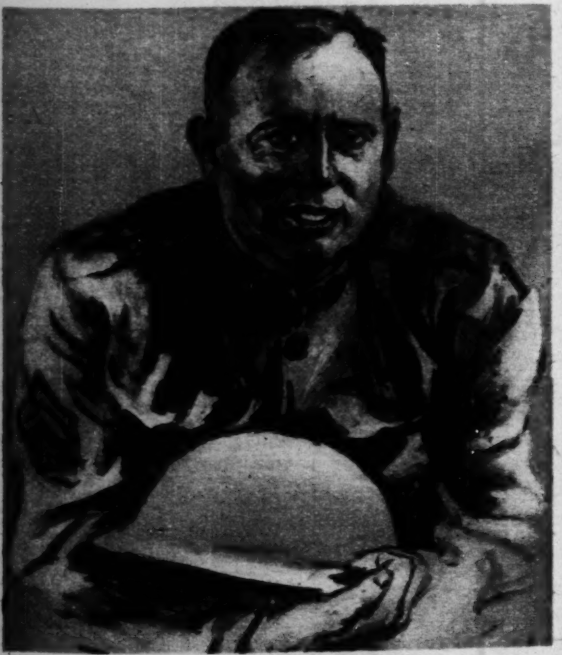
Corp. Sidney E. Manning, 167th Infantry.

Corporal Manning was in charge of an automobile rifle squad. Although wounded, he carried the automatic rifle and ammunition, and continued to advance. On reaching the top of the hill near Croix-Rouge Farm, northeast of Chateau-Thierry, he was again wounded, but he still advanced. Reaching the bottom of the hill he alone faced the oncoming Germans, keeping the enemy from closing in on his platoon.



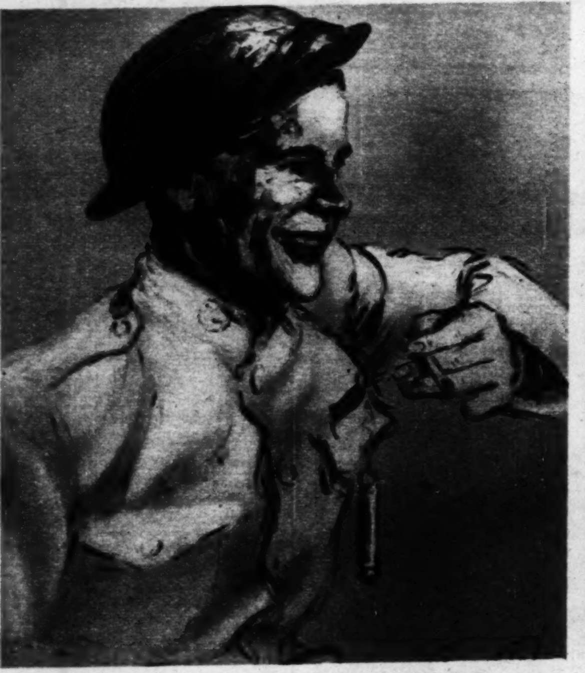
Sergt. Joseph H. Stowers, Headquarters Co. 167th Inf., 42d Division.

Sergt. Stowers dashed out of his trench on the Champagne front in the face of a wave of oncoming Germans advancing in massed formation. Running fifty yards towards the enemy, he picked up a wounded comrade and in spite of gas and rifle fire succeeded in bringing him back safely to his own lines.



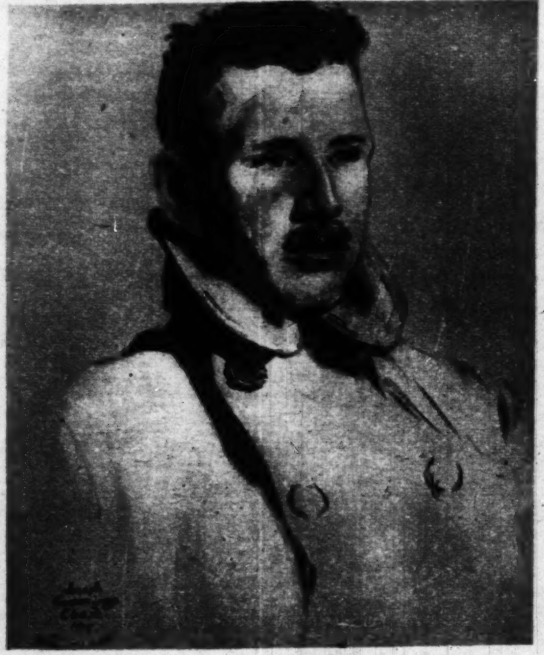
Color Sergt. Hardy C. Daugherty, Headquarters Co. 18th Infantry, 1st Division.

"A non-commissioned officer of splendid courage and ability. On July 21st and 22nd he was in command of reinforcements for the first line. He commanded his detachment with the greatest skill, coolness and energy, and carried out his task with complete success. Upon being relieved he returned to bring out on his back one of the wounded of his detachment." That's what his citation said about this young Irish-American.



Sergt. James B. Lepley, Co. M, 168th Infantry.

Near Souvain Sergt. Lepley left his trench and returned to the woods through a smothering fire of gas, high explosives, and shrapnel to search for two men of his platoon who were missing. He found them lost in the woods and guided them back to his platoon. On another occasion near Sergy he led his platoon forward in the face of a heavy machine gunfire and captured six machine guns and thirteen prisoners.



Sergt. Alvin C. York, 328 Inf., 82d Division.

Sergt. York has been called "the greatest individual hero of the war." While out with a combat group, he came under the fire of a Hun machine gun nest. All the members of the group were killed outright excepting York and five men. York then assumed command, captured the machine gun nest, killed twenty-four Germans single handed and escorted to the nearest battalion headquarters 132 prisoners, including four officers.

SILK GLOVES

FRANCE produces the finest kid gloves, as every one knows, but she sends to America for fine silk gloves.

The improved processes by which America took the lead in the silk glove industry were originated, in important instances, by men in the Mohawk organization. TRADE MARK

FRANK KEENAN is one of the most dependable actors of the stage or screen. And now that he is producing his own pictures it is a pretty safe bet that a film of his will be a good one, for he is conscientious and has a head on his shoulders.

Mr. Keenan was born in Dubuque, Iowa. Educated at Boston College. His stage career began early and, extending over the years, has taken in stock, repertoire and vaudeville, in which he has played practically every known brand of lead.

His screen work has been done under Universal, Ince and Pathe direction, and he has unfailingly made creditable productions. Now, at the Brunton Studios, Hollywood, he is "on his own."

Mr. Keenan is married, weighs 170, has blue eyes and gray hair.—Mae Tinee.

DOROTHY GISH has appeared in this section before—but we're giving her to you again, a la brunette as she best likes herself. The hair you see before you is none other than the famous black wig which this young woman has adopted and which she loves with a pathetic devotion.

In case you've forgotten, she——

Was born in Dayton, Ohio, 1898. Began her screen career with Biograph. Is now with Paramount. Has light hair and blue eyes and loves to fish.—Mae Tinee.

ANITA STEWART, for many years with Vitagraph, but now sailing under the First National banner, was born in Brooklyn in 1896. She was educated at Erasmus Hall.

Pictures were young when she made her first ones and she worked steadily until the last two or three years, when, for some reason or other, productions featuring her became few and far between. Recently, however, she's come to the front again. "Mary Regan" was her latest picture.

Miss Stewart is Mrs. Rudolph Cameron in private life. She has light hair and brown eyes, and amuses herself, in off hours, much like other young women of the day.—Mae Tinee.

BESSIE BARRISCALE, now charming her admirers in "Josselyn's Wife," is a cosy home body off the screen, known as Mrs. Howard Hickman. Mr. Hickman directs her in her working hours. Otherwise——?

Miss Barriscale, like most of 'em, calls the stage her first love. She starred in "Rose of the Rancho," "Bird of Paradise" and "We Are Seven." Then, with "Rose of the Rancho," she started out in the silent drama—for Lasky, and there she's been since. She now heads her own company.

This delightful little actress is five feet two inches tall, weighs 123 pounds, has fair hair and brown eyes. She also has a small son of whom she is most proud.—Mae Tinee.

Now a touch of BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty?

Lastly, dust over again with the powder in order to subdue the BLOOM. Presto! Such beauty and cool freshness in a few moments!

Note. Don't use too much BLOOM. A natural result is all-important.

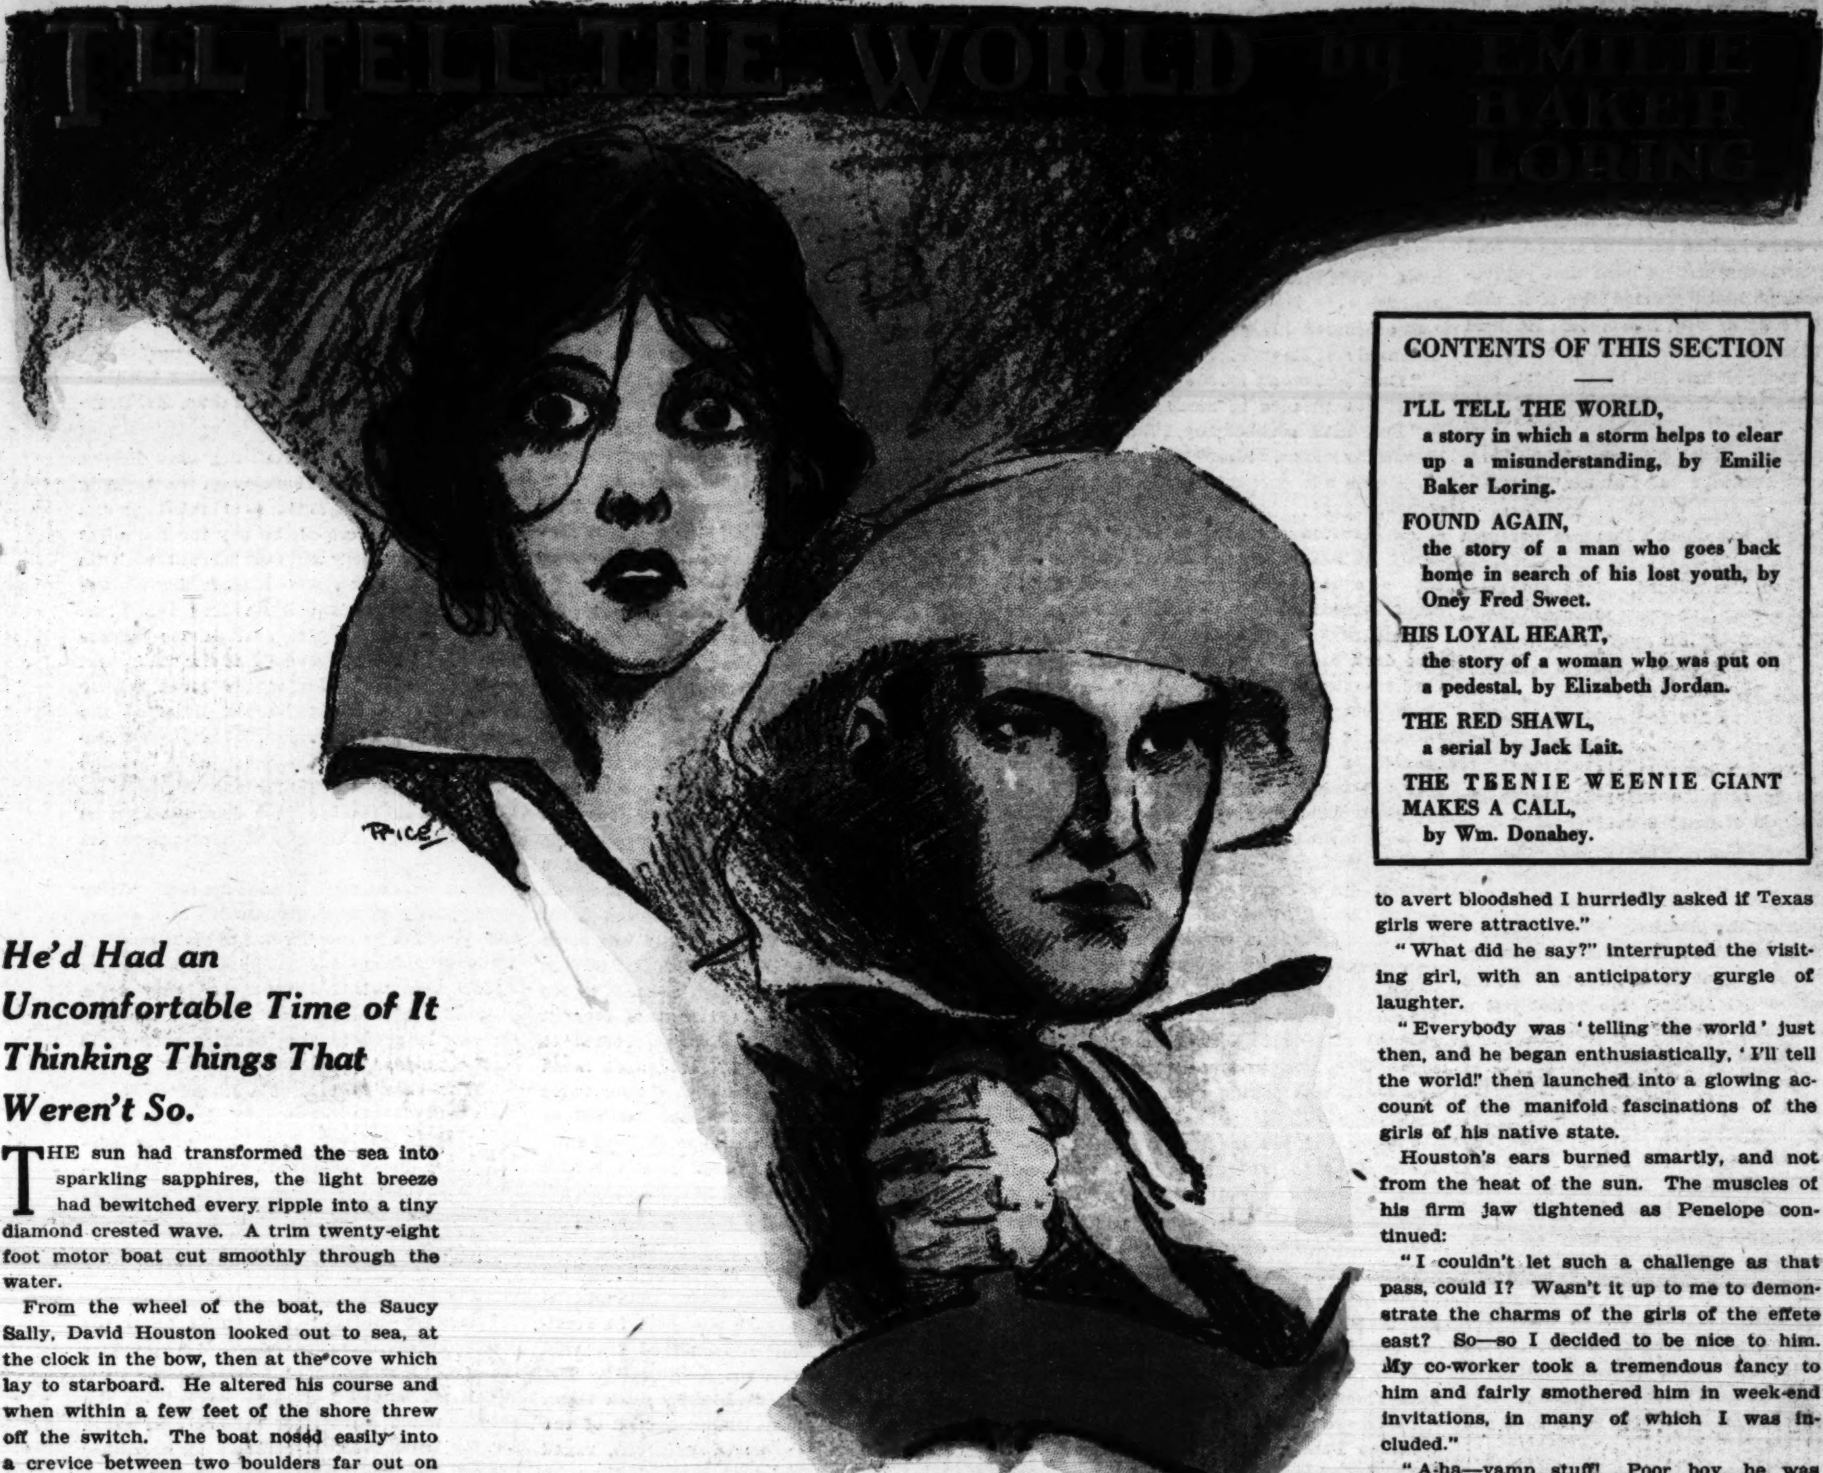
I'LL TELL THE WORLD

by EMILIE BAKER LORING



CONTENTS OF THIS SECTION

I'LL TELL THE WORLD,
a story in which a storm helps to clear up a misunderstanding, by Emilie Baker Loring.

FOUND AGAIN,
the story of a man who goes back home in search of his lost youth, by Oney Fred Sweet.

HIS LOYAL HEART,
the story of a woman who was put on a pedestal, by Elizabeth Jordan.

THE RED SHAWL,
a serial by Jack Lait.

THE TEENIE WEENIE GIANT MAKES A CALL,
by Wm. Donahey.

He'd Had an Uncomfortable Time of It Thinking Things That Weren't So.

THE sun had transformed the sea into sparkling sapphires, the light breeze had bewitched every ripple into a tiny diamond crested wave. A trim twenty-eight foot motor boat cut smoothly through the water.

From the wheel of the boat, the Saucy Sally, David Houston looked out to sea, at the clock in the bow, then at the cove which lay to starboard. He altered his course and when within a few feet of the shore threw off the switch. The boat nosed easily into a crevice between two boulders far out on the larger of which a solitary twisted cedar writhed upward in true Japanese fashion.

The steamer wasn't due yet. If he appeared too early Pen would think—oh, well, what the dickens was the use trying to camouflage what he felt for Penelope Drayton? He was deeply, furiously in love with her—in love with all the intensity of his southern nature.

He tore his thoughts away from Penelope to test the ignition system of her boat. It had shown signs of temperament lately. As they were off on an all day trip it would be well to look things over. The boy who took care of the Saucy Sally was a better fisherman than mechanician. He closed the electric circuit, loosened the wire from the igniter and drew it across the igniter plug. A large green spark and a vicious hiss came simultaneously.

"Righto!" he commended. "Now——"

"My word, Pen Drayton, where did you meet up with that magnificent specimen of the Lone Star state you presented to me last night?" laughed a girl's voice just above his head. "David Houston's the cleanest cut, finest looking, most fascinating man I've seen in a blue moon. I felt a perfectly insane desire to smooth out that adorable kink in his hair. That you're the only girl in the world glint in his blue eyes reduced me to stammering inarticulateness. He's grand seigneur to his finger tips, and he has a nose like—like——"

"A Greek god," supplied another voice, with a suspicion of crisp impatience. "That's what you were going to say, isn't it? Every one makes that comparison. Why be original?"

Houston opened his lips to shout, thought better of it, pulled the soft brim of his hat low over his eyes, and stretched out on the seat. He steadied the boat against the ragged boulder. All was fair in love and—the world war had wiped the rest from that maxim. He'd remain where he was. He might gain a strategic advantage, and the Lord knew he needed it. The girl above him had been friendly, tender, aloof, alluring in turn, until he didn't know where he stood. Sooner or later he'd make her love him; meanwhile—his eyes narrowed as the girl whom he had met for the first time the night before spoke.

"Better leave him lay, Penny-Wise. There's a primitive man note in his voice and a set to his jaw which irresistably lures and conversely warns. Besides, big, tame Dug Lawton with his sordid millions has a vested interest in you, hasn't he?"

Houston's lips whitened. Penelope Drayton's musical laugh floated down to him.

"The world lost a great district attorney when you were born a girl, Grace. You'd make the blood of the accused turn to liquid air with your third degree expertness. I 'met up' with the 'magnificent specimen'—sounds like a zoo catalogue, doesn't it?—while on War Camp Community service work. He was training for aviation. Since then he's earned his pilot's wings and had downed two hostile planes on the western front when the allies presented a piece of paper, warranted untearable, to the enemy, and he was sent home, fairly tugging at his leach to go back and finish dropping a few little bombs he'd left undropped."

"Thrilling, but not to the point. Why does a man who proclaims Texas to be 'God's country' come to Maine the moment he's foot loose?" with tormenting insistence.

"Not being a mind reader, I can't tell you why he came to Maine," with superb scorn. "But I'll tell you about the first time I saw him. An older woman and I were detailed to be at the recreation room at camp, to talk with the boys, when they wanted to talk, and to meet their girl friends or their people; in short, to help in any way we could. One day David Houston and another cadet chatted with us for an hour. During the conversation we discovered that the Texan's family owned an enormous cattle ranch near San Antonio, and that that favored city was the one in this great U. S. A. which retained its atmosphere of history and romance. Houston's chum fairly snorted with rage at that statement. He hailed from New Orleans, so to avert bloodshed I hurriedly asked if Texas girls were attractive."

"What did he say?" interrupted the visiting girl, with an anticipatory gurgle of laughter.

"Everybody was 'telling the world' just then, and he began enthusiastically, 'I'll tell the world!' then launched into a glowing account of the manifold fascinations of the girls of his native state.

Houston's ears burned smartly, and not from the heat of the sun. The muscles of his firm jaw tightened as Penelope continued:

"I couldn't let such a challenge as that pass, could I? Wasn't it up to me to demonstrate the charms of the girls of the effete east? So—so I decided to be nice to him. My co-worker took a tremendous fancy to him and fairly smothered him in week-end invitations, in many of which I was included."

"A-ha—vamp stuff! Poor boy, he was merely smoldering with longing for his home time and the girls he'd left behind him. Your question as to their charms was the spark which set him off. Well, victory perches on your banner; that's patent to the eye of the beholder. But why lure him here?"

"Not guilty! I was honestly surprised when he appeared here a week ago. Dad—you know dad, with his near sighted eyes and far reaching heart—took to him at once. Dad's a little mad on the subject of Americana, and when he found that Dave knew the history of his great state backward, why, that settled it. David must be our guest."

"The plot thickens. Enter Douglas—Douglas tender and true. If you'd like me to take the cattle puncher off your hands——"

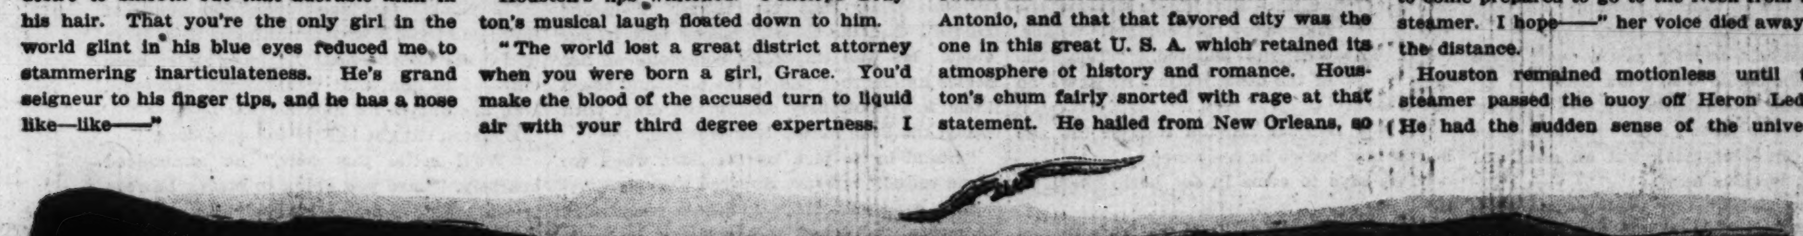
"Thank you; I can manage quite well."

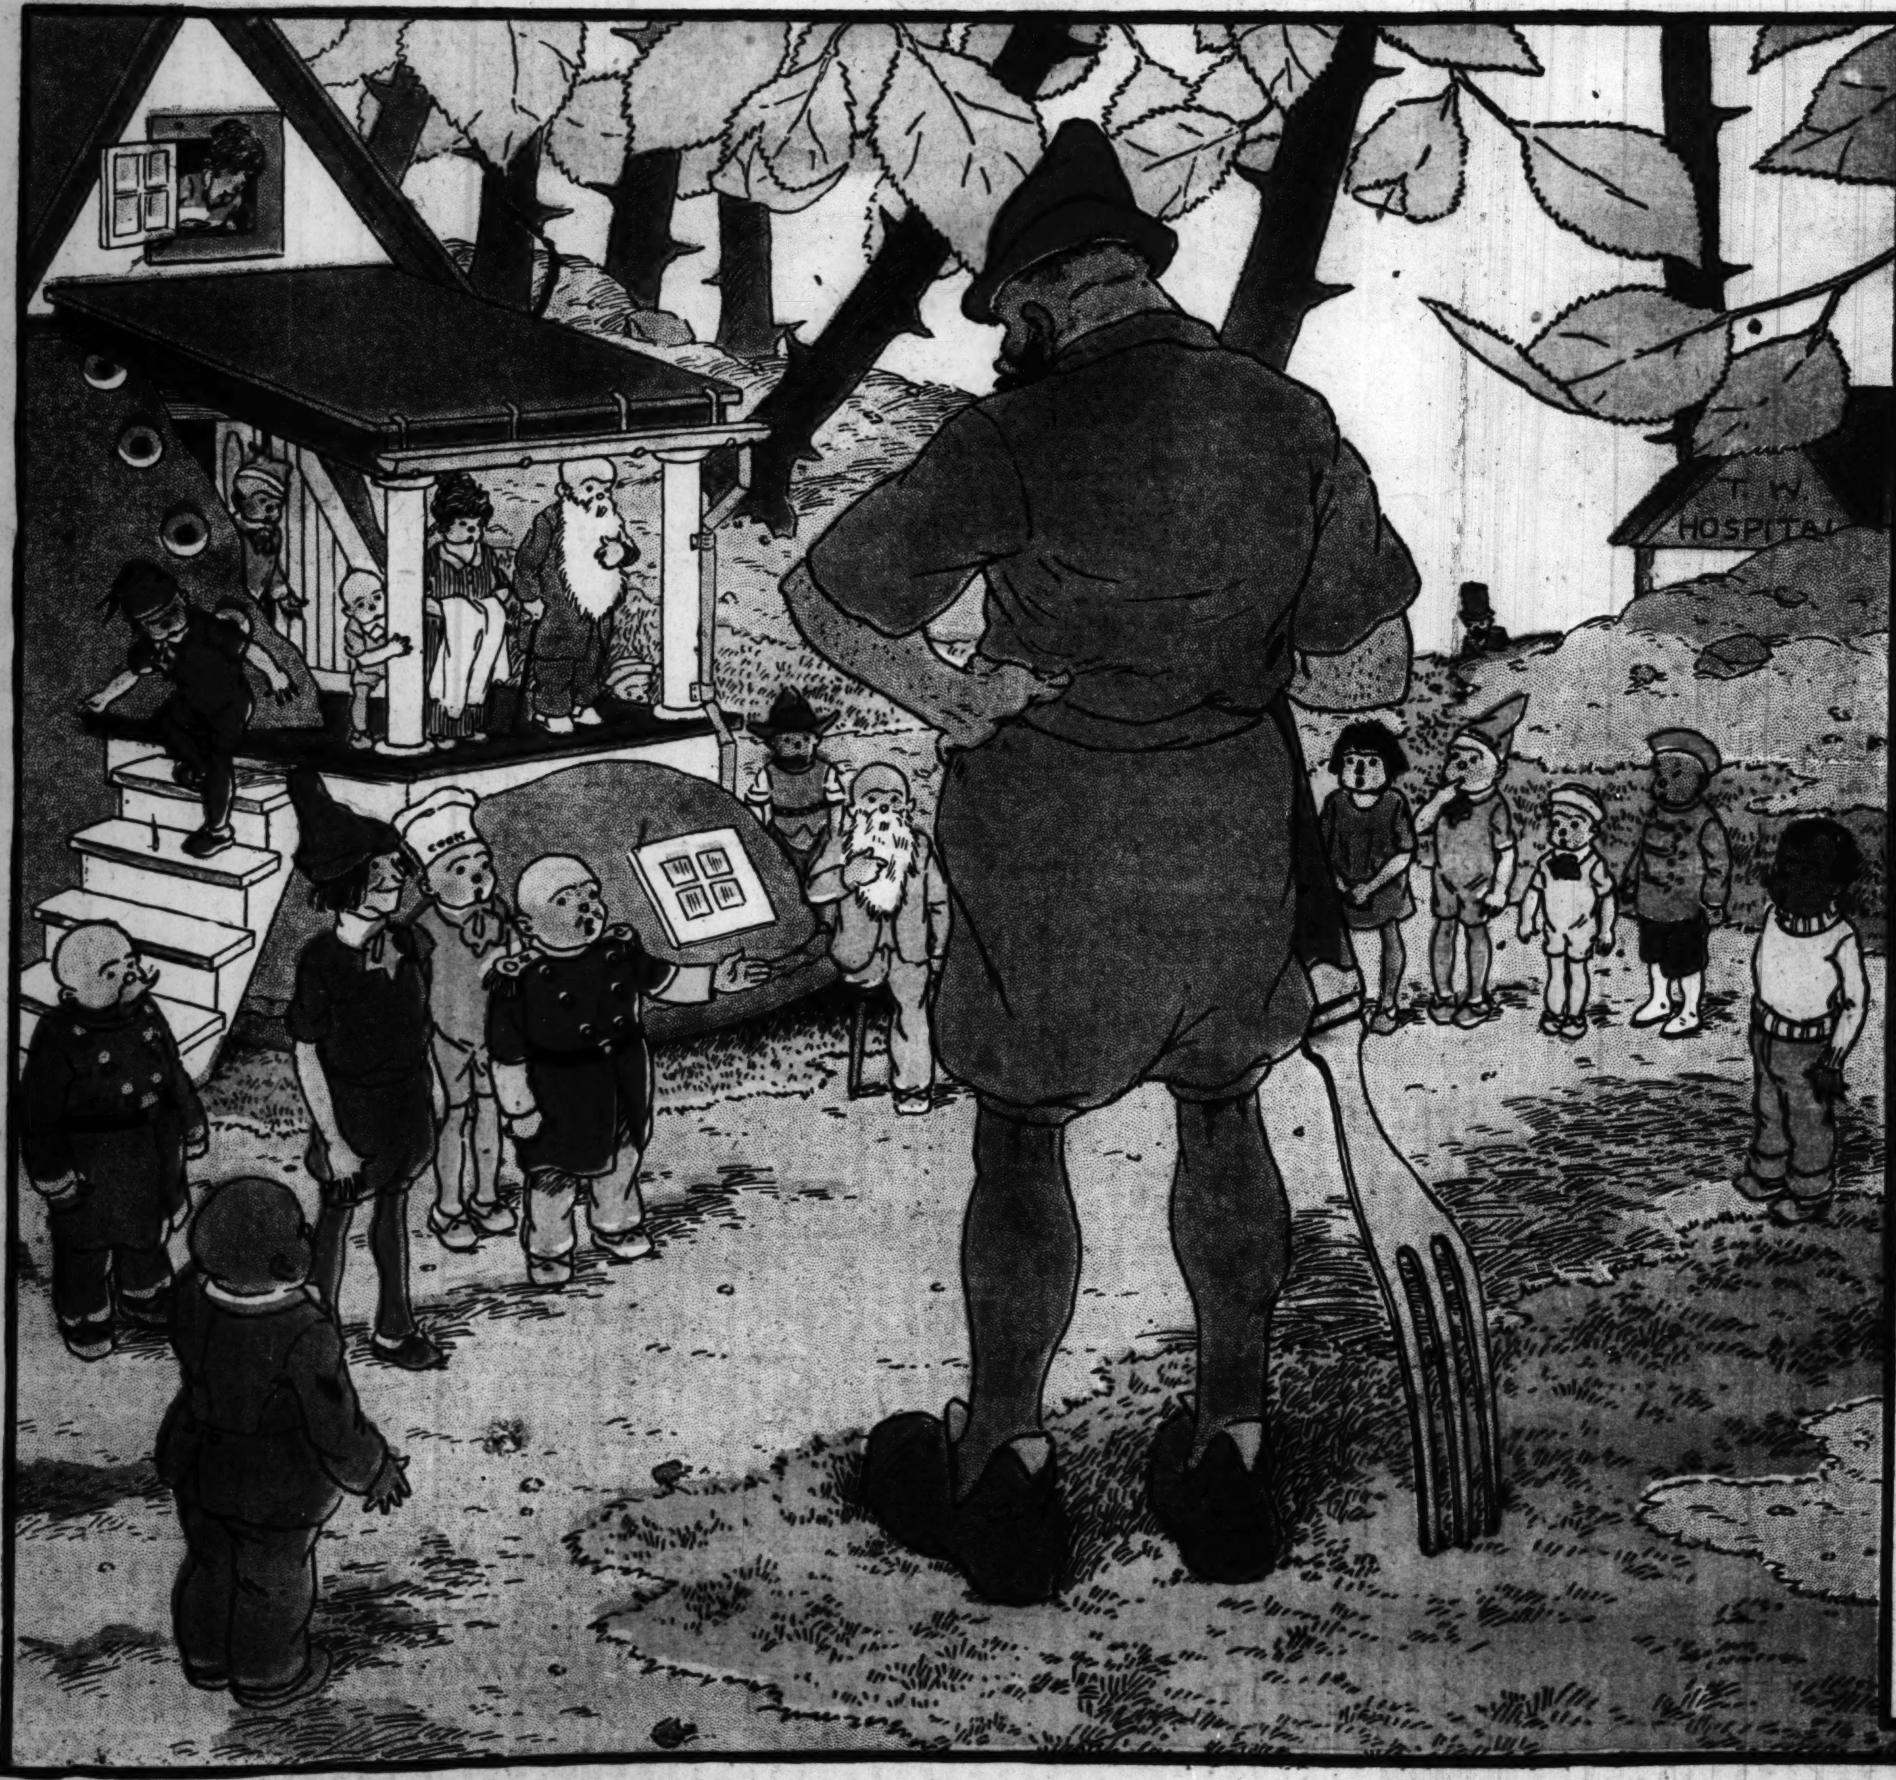
"Don't be a dog in the manger, P. D. Of course, I'm not the charmer you are, but——"

"It's a pity about you! I——" a long, shrill whistle sounded. It echoed from shore to shore till it died away in a faint rumble.

"There's the steamer! We'll have to skurry if we mean to meet it at the pier. Dave's to bring Saucy Sally round there. He runs her like a breeze. The maid's put my baskets in the boat. Dug's sister wrote him to come prepared to go to the Neck from the steamer. I hope——" her voice died away in the distance.

Houston remained motionless until the steamer passed the buoy off Heron Ledge. He had the sudden sense of the universe





THE TEENIE WEENIES.

A GIANT MAKES A CALL. BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE birds had told the Teenie Weenies about a Teenie Weenie giant who lived in a hollow tree far from the shoe house. The little folks were a bit worried about the giant when they first heard of him, but as the months passed and as they never saw him, he soon failed to worry them.

The Teenie Weenies had just seated themselves at the breakfast table one morning when they were startled by a dark shadow that fell across the tiny window. Looking out the little people were astonished to see a giant duck under the lowest branches of the rose bush and walk straight for the shoe house.

"It's the giant! It's the giant!" shouted the Turk, and the curious little folks all ran out of the house in order to get a better look at the big fellow.

The giant stood about thirty-two teenie weenie feet high, or nine inches of our measurement. He had rather an unpleasant face and a thick beard covered most of it. In his hand he carried a big fork and the Teenie Weenies felt a little frightened as he walked toward the house.

"Good morning, sir," said the General, stepping out politely towards the giant, "We were just about ready to have our breakfast. I'm sorry our house is so small I can't invite you in, but if you can wait we would be very glad to fix up something for you to eat."

"You said something, little midget," answered the giant. "I want something to eat and I want it quick. You might as well know that I didn't come here for nothin'. I know you have a lot of corn and wheat and things put away, so you can bring 'em all out and dump 'em on the ground here, for I'm all out of provisions and I want to stock up."

"But, my dear sir," exclaimed the General, "we only have about enough to last until the next harvest——"

"Makes no difference," growled the giant. "Either trot this food out or I'll wreck your houses."

"I'll let you know what we can do as soon as I have talked to my people about the matter," said the General, in order to gain time.

"Well, hurry up about it!" cried the giant. "If I don't hear from you in five minutes I'll run this fork through the roof of your house."

Several of the Teenie Weenies gathered in the shoe house where they quickly decided that it would be very foolish to fight the giant. He was so very big and they were not prepared for him.

"I think I have a plan that will handle this fellow," said the Doctor. "Have the Cook make some coffee for this bully and I'll drop some sleeping powder into it and it will put him to sleep long enough for us to get our friend the puppy dog and he will chase this chap away in no time."

The Teenie Weenies thought the Doctor's plan was the only one they could use, so the General stepped out and told the giant that they would give him all the grain they had on hand.

"Wouldn't you like something to eat now?" asked the General.

"Yes!" snapped the giant. "Bring out something quick."

The Cook scraped up all the cooked food he had on hand, which was carried out to the giant. The big fellow gulped it down in one swallow and then drank nine thimbles full of coffee.

Into each thimble of coffee the Doctor slipped a bit of sleeping powder and presently the giant's head began to nod in a most sleepy manner.

Found Again

by Oney Fred Sweet

gone topsy-turvy. His eyes blazed with anger in his white face. So Penelope had been merely avenging hurt vanity when she had been "nice" to him? He was glad that he'd been jolted out of his complacency before he'd made all kinds of a fool of himself. He pushed off from Lone Cedar Rock, started the engine and the Saucy Sally cut smartly through the water, the Stars and Stripes floating gayly at her stern. Houston came alongside the float of the pier just as the two girls came running down the road. They saw him and waved. Penelope went on to the steamer and Grace Haven came to him.

"Good morning," she called in the soft voice which harmonized so perfectly with her pastel type of prettiness. "Pen's gone to meet Dug Lawton. May I come with you?"

"May you! Ask me; that's all, just ask me. I'll tell the world, nothing could please me more," he responded with laughing fervor. Not since he had seen the tragedy and suffering overseas had he used that expression. Penelope had reminded him of it, and it seemed to fit in with his mood. He held out his hand for the girl's and steadied her while she stepped into the boat, which was bobbing impishly from the wash of the steamer.

"Sit near the wheel with me. We'll leave the stern to Penelope and Lawton," Houston suggested.

"I'd love it, but doesn't Pen run her own boat?"

"Not when I'm aboard. Says she feels my critical eye on her every minute."

"Hm-m, your critical eye? She must be afraid of it. She could navigate a super-dreadnaught between these ledges."

He reddened at her tone. He glanced at the sky, then at the white caps in the bay, and observed, irrelevantly:

"It will be rough crossing to the Neck. Are you afraid of getting wet?"

Her eyes swiftly answered the laughing challenge in his.

"Afraid! I adore being drenched."

"I'll pull out the oilskins. We——"

"O, Dave!" called a voice behind him, which set his pulses beating madly, but he kept his head bent to the locker. He pulled out a slicker and handed it to Grace Haven.

"This looks as though it might fit——"

"Ship ahoy, there!" interrupted a crisp voice. With a surprised start and a murmured apology Houston turned to the girl who stood waiting on the float. His heart flamed with passionate admiration. Was there any one quite so lovely, quite so buoyantly, physically perfect as she, he wondered. His glance flashed from her slightly flushed, slightly disturbed face to that of the man beside her. He liked him at once. He was tall, blond, good looking, but too boyish for Pen. He had about as much initiative as a coddled Chinese chow, he decided. His voice was unaffectedly cordial as he held out his hand.

"Glad to meet you, Lawton. Sorry to have kept you waiting, Pen. I'll hold the boat steady while you get in. That confounded wash keeps her bobbing. We've left the stern for you and Lawton. Grace and I are personally conducting this tour. You don't mind if I chuck 'Miss' into the discard, do you? Vacations are too short for formalities, aren't they?" he pleaded as he smiled at the girl forward. He lost her answer as Penelope steadied herself by a hand on his shoulder. His heart pounded like a trip hammer.

"Look out for the tender, Lawton!" he called as he gave a mighty push and the Saucy Sally shot clear of the pier.

The sea had roughened. Waves slapped impudently against the side of the boat, broke into spray which dashed high above it, then descended in a shower of salty, wet diamonds. Houston held the wheel steady with one hand while he tossed two slickers back to the stern. He release it a moment while he solicitously helped Grace Haven into one and tied the strings of a sou'wester under her chin. Her laughing eyes met his.

"Thank heaven that I'm securely and irrevocably engaged," she whispered, "otherwise my young and susceptible heart——"

"Dave!" called Penelope peremptorily, "if Grace requires so much assistance I'll take the wheel. This boat is rocking like——"

Grace Haven's usually merry eyes were serious as she confided in a low tone:

"I hope that cloud doesn't mean a thunder storm, for Pen's sake. She's the best sport I know about everything but an electrical storm; that terrifies her."

"We'll get home before that one materializes," Houston answered, and turned his attention to rounding the ledge which protected the small bay where they were to anchor. A group of young people waved from the shore. A man pushed off in a tender to meet them.

"Take the girls ashore, will you, Lawton?" Houston asked as he threw off the engine switch and dropped anchor. "I'll come in later. I want to mop up here and spread the slickers to dry."

"I'll stay and help, Dave," volunteered Penelope. "Let Dug and Grace——"

"Obey orders!" Houston interrupted with a brusqueness born of hammering pulses rather than design, as he turned to help Grace Haven peel off her wet oilskins. He inwardly cursed himself for a brute as he saw the warm color surge to Penelope's hair and amazed anger fire her eyes. But there was some limit to what he could stand. By her own confession the girl had led him on to care for her while all the time there had been another man. There was a white line about his lips as he steadied the tender. Lawton stepped in, his fair face sulkily indifferent as he turned to assist the girls. Houston held out his free hand.

"Come on, Pen, you're first. Give me your hand. This boat's rocking like a cradle gone mad."

She ignored his proffered aid and smiled dazzlingly at Lawton.

"Dug, you won't let me go overboard, will you?" she pleaded in mock terror.

"Poor little snubbed boy, I'll take his hand. Somebody loves him," murmured Grace Haven as she prepared to descend into the tender.

As Houston prepared to leave the Saucy Sally he looked toward shore. Before him lay a sandy, sun drenched beach behind which rose a wall of jagged rock flanked by a fern carpeted, pine crowned hill. Against the dark background of stone a fire glowed and crackled busily. Above it swung a crane from which a blue granite kettle hung. A woman in white wielded a long spoon as she stirred the cooking mixture. Around another fire a group of men and girls chatted and laughed while they toasted bacon, dangling it from forked sticks over the coals. Grace Haven, on her knees, was making an elaborate design of ferns on a white cloth spread on the sand. The appetizing odor of chowder and cooking shellfish filled the air. Near the green slope Lawton in high rubber boots presided over a mass of steaming seaweed. He deftly poked and patted the glistening, slippery stuff with a long handled pronged fork. Penelope, yellow sweater tied about her waist, was poking about the weed with a stick.

"Taste and tell me if it's cooked, Dug," Houston heard her say as he landed near them. Lawton seized the hand which offered a clamshell and raised it to his lips. The Texan saw red for a moment. Evidently the late unpleasantness between the two was at an end. Well, it was time Pen put one poor devil out of his misery. She shouldn't see this victim squirm on the hook.

After lunch Houston helped pack the baskets, then strolled off for a smoke.

"Why so exclusive?" challenged a gay voice as Penelope Drayton dropped to the sand beside him. He abandoned his lounging attitude in a flash.

"I hadn't realized that I was alone."

"No? What a subtle compliment to the rest of us. Dreaming of Texas—perhaps?" she asked as she became absorbed in a pebble game of jackstones.

"No, I'm through with dreams." His voice was icily casual as he continued, "You see, I overheard your conversation with Grace on Lone Cedar rock this morning."

She gave a quick gasp of dismay. He watched relentlessly as the warm color dyed throat and face and crept up under the soft waves of dusky hair.

"You listened?" she demanded contemptuously.

He reddened furiously at her tone, but his eyes met hers steadily.

"I did. Now that I understand why you have been 'nice' to me, I won't bore you any longer." He rose and leisurely joined the rest of the party.

An hour later the inoffensive shadow on the horizon had developed into something tangible and threatening. With disconcerting suddenness the sky darkened. There was a scurry to collect baskets and wraps. Houston pulled off to the Saucy Sally to make it ready. He pressed the self-starter, but the engine, with that innate sense of the timely so indigenous to engines, balked.

"O, Law-ton!" he shouted. "Take the girls in one of the other boats. En-gine's on the b-l-ink!"

He saw Douglas Lawton turn to the girl beside him before he answered:

"Pen says to come in for her! She'll fix it!"

"Noth-ing—do-ing! Get the girls home! I'll follow!"

Houston threw off his coat and set to work. He could rage at the engine—that was some relief to his feelings. As the tenders passed each occupant made a suggestion or offered to stay with him. It was a relief when he heard the last boatload puff away.

They were mere specks in the distance when the engine with a protesting splutter decided to be good. Houston listened to the steady purr of wheels for a few moments, then wiped his oily hands on a bunch of waste. He looked toward shore. He'd remember this day as long as he lived, remember Pen as she had poked at the steaming seaweed. What was that spot of yellow on the bank?

"Well, what do you know about that! She's forgotten her sweater!" he exlcaimed aloud. He stared at it for a moment; he wouldn't have believed that an inanimate thing could look so appealingly helpless. He glanced up at the angry sky. Thunder rumbled ominously in the distance. A jagged streak of lightning seared the heavens. The engine still chugged evenly.

With incredible swiftness Houston freed the tender, jumped in, and picked up the oars. When he landed he broke his own record for sprinting as he shot for the spot of yellow. As he reached it the first heavy drops of rain fell. He tucked the silken thing inside his shirt and had the instant sensation of a warm, vital hand closing gently about his aching heart. For a moment he stood motionless; then, as though for a reminder, the heavens opened and the rain descended. It pelted. It lashed. It stung. It drenched. It drove in a white sheet as he reached the motor boat.

He gripped the wheel and set the boat on its course. He bent forward at the bow trying to see into the hissing sheets of rain. The swift transitions from glaring light to inky darkness blinded him. The lightning flashes transmuted the rain into millions of fiery drops, then, before he could see, the course would be swallowed in blackness again. If only the confounded fireworks would flare steadily till he had passed the Ledge buoy! In the calm that followed a crash he could hear a somber, oily lash—he was nearing the ledges. He glanced down at the clock. Six! This certainly was some storm to darken the sky at this time of day.

There came a flash which seemed to rip the heavens open. He bent forward eagerly. Good Lord, what was that to starboard! A boat with a girl in white? Houston's heart went into a tail spin and turned over twice before it righted. The thunder crashed as though all the guns in the world had combined in one deafening volley. In the sinister stillness which followed he heard a voice call:

"O-O-O, Da-ve! Make for me! I'm in the channel!"

Was that Pen's voice, or had he gone mad with longing? Houston never remembered how he reached the small boat with its auxiliary engine; he only remembered the wild prayer in his heart for the girl's safety. The storm flashed and crashed with hellish vigor. It was as though the titanic armies of the elements, locked in desperate battle, raged for supremacy. His face was livid as he seized the gunwale of the small boat and brought it alongside. He stared as though his eyes were tricking him. Penelope sat there in her drenched white frock smiling at him—it was a mere ghost of a smile, but it was there. Her face was white and her lips traitorously unsteady, but she remarked casually:

"I though you'd need help to find Heron Ledge buoy."

With a dry sob which seemed to tear its way to his lips Houston held out his free hand. The girl steadied herself by it and stepped into the Saucy Sally.

"I'll pay out the line so we can tow this back of the tender," she explained coolly as she went aft with the painter of her boat.

Houston's mind was in a ferment as he gripped the wheel and set his course again. Why—why had she——

"Can you see that spark of light ahead? That's Connor's beacon. Steer straight for that," directed a soft voice beside him.

Two tiny flames flared in his blue eyes as they searched the gray ones of the girl. A rivulet of water ran down his face from the lock of hair with the "adorable kink" which was plastered to his forehead. A slender hand reached up and smoothed it back.

"I'm doing that for Grace," Penelope laughed with the old tormenting note in her voice. He was tinglingly conscious of her beside him as they passed the buoy and nosed their way cautiously among the craft with which the little harbor was crowded.

"Stand by to pick up the float when we come round!" ordered Houston sharply.

"Aye, aye, sir!" Penelope responded promptly, and seized the boathook.

As they silently made their way up the road toward home, the girl's wet skirts swishing at every step, the sun showed its red rim for a moment above the horizon before it dropped out of sight. A great expanse of blue sky flecked with rosy clouds spread slowly overhead. The world, fragrant and refreshed after the rain, showed vivid green and the rich brown of earth. Thunder rumbled faintly in the distance and somewhere in the woods a thrush broke into sudden, ecstatic song.

Glowing with youth and beauty in her frock of filmy white, Penelope faced her father and Houston at supper. She chatted with nervous animation, breaking every threatened silence with gay comments. Her father observed her quizzically above the rims of his spectacles. His fine, thoughtful face, crowned with rings of hair like white spun silk, crinkled with amusement.

"Why this exuberance of spirit, Penny-Wise? You twinkle, twinkle like the proverbial star. You're dazzling; isn't she, David? By the way, where's Lawton? I thought that he was to have supper with us."

The color stole to the girl's temples.

"He—O, he has to return to the city tomorrow, so he's spending the evening with his sister."

"Tomorrow! Why, I thought——" then, with that discretion which fathers with attractive daughters acquire in time, Mr. Drayton changed the subject.

The moonlight silvered the vine leaves, which cast fantastic shadows on the flagging of the terrace; it made a crinkled, golden path on the waters of the bay for the boats of lovers, the very air was vibrant with its magic. Up from the harbor floated the sound of a ship's bell striking the hour. From his seat on the wall of the terrace Houston looked at Penelope as she sat almost eclipsed by the sides of the great wicker chair. The fickle moonlight deserted the leaves to linger on her lovely face, it accentuated the wistful curves of her vivid lips, the sheen of her dark hair, it shone on her white throat. With sudden, grim determination he flung his cigaret away and approached the girl.

"Pen, look at me," he commanded. "Why—why did you, who are terrified at a storm, risk your life by coming out to meet me?"

Her eyes dropped to the pink tipped fingers which were ruthlessly bent on removing a glistening crystal from her frock. Throbbing seconds lengthened into minutes before she scoffed unsteadily:

"Who—who's afraid of a storm!"

He caught the restless hands in his and drew her to her feet. The sway of her slender figure in the moonlight set his blood racing. His voice was rough with repression as he demanded again:

"Why did you do it?"

Her eyes were brilliant with the menace of tears as they met his.

"Because—because—you didn't know the danger spots among the ledges. I forgot that there was a storm when I remembered that. When we landed I slipped away from the others, made some silly excuse, and raced for my little boat. I couldn't let anything happen to you while you thought—you thought—Dave, you didn't hear all I told Grace this morning. On the way to the steamer I confessed that no sooner had you sailed for the other side than I did some long distance thinking. I realized what a—a—contemptible s-sniper I'd been to let you believe that I cared when I was only trying to make you admit that at least I was as—as attractive as those—those horrid girls in Texas. I used to open the paper with my heart in my mouth for fear something had happened to you. I'd have followed you on my knees—I'd have oiled the engines on your planes if that would have restored my self-respect. Then——"

Houston gave a short, incredulous laugh and thrust his hands hard into the pockets of his coat to keep them from seizing her.

"Then what?" he reminded inexorably.

"Then—then when you appeared here I wondered if I hadn't made a mountain out of a molehill, you seemed so—so maddeningly unimpressionable"—there was a hint of breathless daring in the words.

The effort to keep from crushing her in his arms whitened Houston's lips and steeled his voice.

"O, I did? What about Lawton?" he asked relentlessly.

"Shylock! You insist upon your pound of flesh, don't you?" with a mutinous flash from under her long lashes. "I have never been engaged to him; that was Grace's nonsense. Dug has known for months that I—I——"

Houston caught her by the shoulders.

"We'll settle this now," he announced hoarsely. "Are you going to marry Lawton or—or me?"

She looked up under tear wet lashes. Her lips were tantalizingly sweet as she whispered:

"I'll tell the world I'm going to marry you, Dave, you!"

she must protect your incognito without telling her the very thing which would be most dangerously likely to induce her to unveil it. We must have delay, at least, and that, I think, we will be in position to arrange for without any cause for fear of her actions during the brief interim. Let me try."

Father Pokoff summoned Nastia.

"My dear girl," he began, "we will aid you in every way that we can. But for reasons which we must not at this moment make known, we insist that you act as I direct for the present. Will you?"

"Entirely."

"Then you will refrain during twenty-four hours from in any manner communicating with Dupchinsky or letting yourself be where he would see you and possibly converse with you. You will not breathe a suggestion of any sort to any one that you have seen the princess or me, or that you know where the princess is, or anything that has transpired since you met us today.

"The gravity of these provisions you will understand when I assure you that if you talk with Dupchinsky it will probably end forever all chance of your untangling him from the other woman and winning him back for yourself; and that if you give to any human being a hint that your princess is in New York it will cost her life.

"We have in our hands your possibilities for a reunion with the man you want, and we desire as hotly as you do that you be restored in his warmest and innermost considerations, which, pray God, shall happen if our plans carry and your actions do not destroy your hopes and ours. You have in your keeping a secret, the weight of which I cannot overstate: it is needless to recall to you the attitude of the Grodnian bolsheviki on the day when his majesty was killed. Do you understand?"

"I do."

"And do you promise—everything I have asked of you?"

"Everything."

"Good. Whatever may occur in the meantime, I give you further assurance, as a man and a servant of the church, that in all events you must accept it as absolute that Princess Sabina and I are acting and have acted with none but the friendliest motives toward you."

"Why—of course, father. I would cut off my right arm before I would be so low as to imagine for a wink that either your reverence or her highness would do otherwise. I am but a worm before your feet. It is good of you to hear my childish story at all."

"Do not be too hopeful, I caution you. We cannot, you understand, provide for what may be in the heart of this man, Dupchinsky. But we can answer for the other woman; in twenty-four hours we will have affected a change of conditions in this situation so that she will no longer intervene between you and him. She must and will be taken from him, or he from her—that is peremptory—and it will be accomplished. We require a day in which to think and to act.

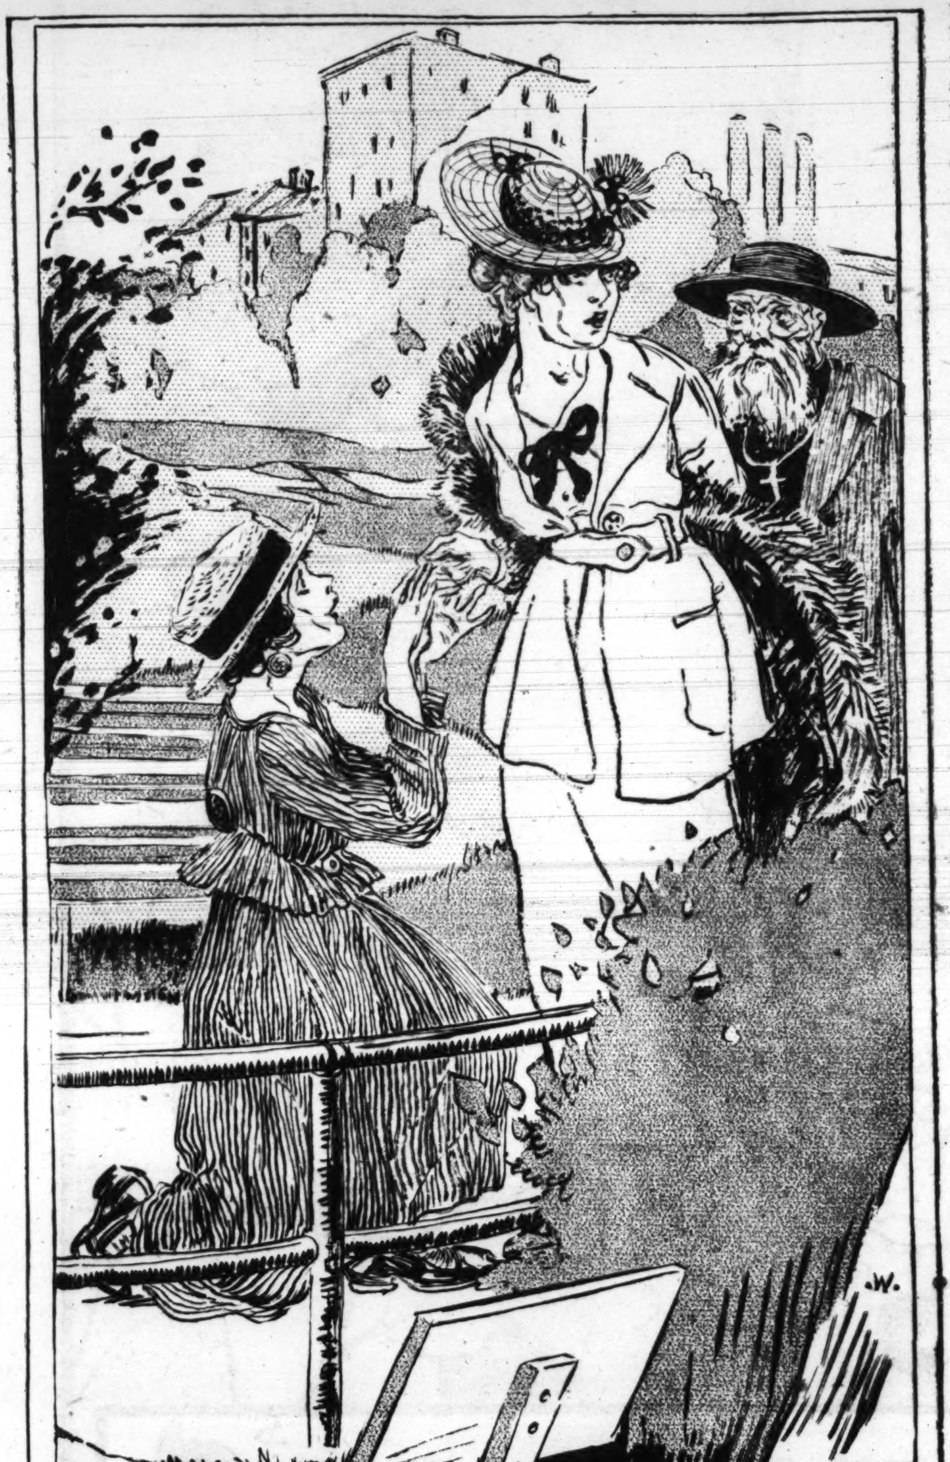
"Meet us here at 10 o'clock in the morning tomorrow, then—and, meanwhile, I reiterate the precautions which I have already voiced."

"It shall be as you say, and I shall pray and be otherwise silent until then."

"God be with you, my daughter."

And Nastia, a wild, new hope flaming in her breast where the cold ashes of her despondency had lain an hour before, went off with the springy stride of youth unburdened of back-breaking despair.

But Princess Sabina, her angel face drawn in shadowed lines of racking misgivings, leaned for once upon the feeble arm of the old priest, for she had taken upon her slender shoulders double the weight of the cares which Nastia had left behind.



"O, your highness—the good God brought me to you," babbled Nastia.

In rejuvenated spirits Nastia returned to her room to rest and think rosy things.

Pale and perturbed, Princess Sabina, who had been her supreme earthly divinity, came back to her threadbare dwelling to cudgel her whirling brain for some miraculous solution to this complicated and many stringed network which seemed closing in on her to strangle her.

But there was yet to be another, an entirely unforeseen entanglement, strung in flashing colored weave into the texture of her woes.

As Sabina entered the corridor and was about to turn toward her own room her eye caught a transitory glimpse of a face which yanked her out of her preoccupied study, flashed across her memory other days of palatial pomp, royal rule, power unchallenged; then the vision veered to ignominious flight and excommunicated vagrancy. She brushed her eyes with her hand and looked again.

Seated, hat in hand, was Count Jan, her distant kinsman.

What was he doing here? How had he found her? Why did he, at this climax of already ensnarled perils, project his presence upon a situation so desperately precarious? If Dupchinsky should come in now there would be no escape. Count Jan was known on sight to every man, woman, and speaking child in Grodnia. Colonel of the king's guard, he had headed every formal parade through the streets; a high living and loose loving boulevardier, he had popped corks in all the bright cafés.

Jan saw her as she saw him. He came to his feet with an animated start. He stepped nimbly to her, knelt, took her limp hand, raised it to his lips, and kissed it more reverently than gallantly.

"Your highness, the respects of your soldier and servant," he mumbled.

"What is the meaning of this?" she demanded. "Since when do you seek me out without summons, even without leave?"

"Pardon me, gracious highness. I come as the emissary of your nobility, the congress of what remains of the supporters to your claims on your throne, united for the sole purpose of attempting to restore you to that royal eminence which by birth and the will of God belongs to your highness."

"Humph. You may rise. This talk of assuming thrones rings with strange and remote unreality upon my ear. At the moment I am one leap ahead of a death more unheroic than that of my noble father, who at least had the satisfaction of meeting his end while defending the institutions in which he believed. Your coming at this time is most unpropitious."

"I could regret nothing more deeply, your highness, than to contribute danger or distress to you. May I not be of some slight assistance in this situation which you say surrounds you?"

"Yes. You may go, as quickly as your feet will take you, and remain in hiding until I send for you."

"But——"

"Don't question my orders. The bolsheviki may defy me. But you, I make bold to presume, have not yet turned revolutionist."

"I will go to the far ends of the earth or into the bowels of hell at your word, your highness. But I pray you, hear me out for a brief minute. I have come far and sought long for this opportunity to convey to your highness the message of your nearest relatives, your loyal army which is banded together to fight and to die, if death be our duty, for you.

"Even a queen will receive the spokesman of her cabinet of nobles, her court of titled retainers."

"Proceed, then. But make it terse. Standing here with you may cost me my life. But tell me first how you contrived to find me, for if I am as easy to discover as you seem to have made it for yourself, I may expect my enemies to parallel your success hot upon your heels."

"My detectives, your highness, have been for days shadowing a certain young American, one by the name of Hallam."

"Hallam!"

"You know of him? A correspondent he was, who chanced to be in Grodnia at the time of the overthrow of God's will as expressed in the reign of his majesty, your father."

"But, why follow him? What has he to do with me or where I may be?"

"Crossing the ocean, overflowing with zeal in my purpose to find your highness and lay before you the words of my peers, I permitted myself to repose confidences in this Hallam, trusting that he would be of use to me here in my search. He has been of little direct assistance to me since our arrival. I have spoken with him frequently. Meanwhile I had engaged private investigators. Hallam sneered at their abilities, but they have been of priceless service.

"I became convinced, after several conversations with this Hallam, that he, too, for some hidden reason—news for his paper, I fear—has been messing about in affairs affecting your highness. He is known to me to have interviewed at impressive length one Dupchinsky, a notorious revolutionist whose name your higness may have heard."

Sabina started visibly.

"This convinced me that he would bear watching, and I have had him traced, day and night, for weeks, without his knowledge, of course.

"My men reported to me that he trailed Dupchinsky to this house last night. They trailed him, in turn. They told me of this Dupchinsky calling here—either a phenomenal coincidence or a sinister circumstance, I fear. They reported to me, further, of the presence of a woman clad in Grodnian costume, who, likewise, was following Dupchinsky when he came here, who waited across the street until he departed. You will see now that while Dupchinsky was in this house—of which your highness may or may not have knowledge—there awaited his return this woman, Hallam, and my detectives. Dupchinsky was traced back to his quarters; the strange woman was traced to her abode; Hallam remained hidden nearby for several hours, until all lights were extinguished in this building, then went home.

"I received this intelligence about midnight of last night, and immediately concluded that this house contained a factor of prime moment in my search. I had men on watch all the remainder of the night and nothing happened. Early this morning I came, myself, and lay on the floor in an apartment on the opposite side, where I had rented the privilege. I saw the woman return. She was identified to me by my men, who were beside me. I recognized her immediately as your highness' former maid Nastia. This, naturally, told me that the scent was indeed hot. As she stood on the walk I saw that Hallam was not far behind her, he evidently having picked her up when she started for this street.

"I saw Nastia cross to the steps of this house, when suddenly, to the greatest thrill of my life, I caught sight of your highness and Father Pokoff descending. Hallam at the same moment saw you, and I was alarmed to note upon his expression indubitable evidences of the fact that he recognized you or at least recognized in you some element of great importance to whatever his purposes may be. When Nastia joined you and strolled off with you I sent one of my men behind. Hallam, too, snooped along. I remained on watch there for a few minutes, but nothing further of moment transpired, so I crossed to this house and rang the bell. Not knowing what name either your highness or Father Pokoff might have assumed, I inquired of the woman whether there was not a priest domiciled here. She said there was. I told her that I had need of communion with a holy man and I would await his return. So she bade me be seated."

"Much that you tell me, Count Jan," said the princess, "is of interest and no negligible importance. I thank you for persistent and intelligent service in my behalf. I had no suspicion that so many were buzzing about my doors. The activities of Dupchinsky and Nastia are known to me, I believe, as far as they have transpired in or about this house. But I am amazed at what you tell me of Hallam."

"Hallam, your highness, is dangerous. He is far from a fool. These newspaper bloodhounds have no consciences or respect for anything or any one. He has been perniciously assiduous in pressing his inquiry. The press can ruin us—pardon me, your highness—may ruin you, heaven forbid."

"Wh—where do you suppose this Hallam is at this moment?"

Count Jan stepped to the window, shielding himself behind the curtains. He peered surreptitiously out with half an eye.

"There he is—hiding in the vestibule of that house—now!"

Jan turned, vexed, alarmed.

"Thank God!" breathed the princess, to his perplexed amazement.

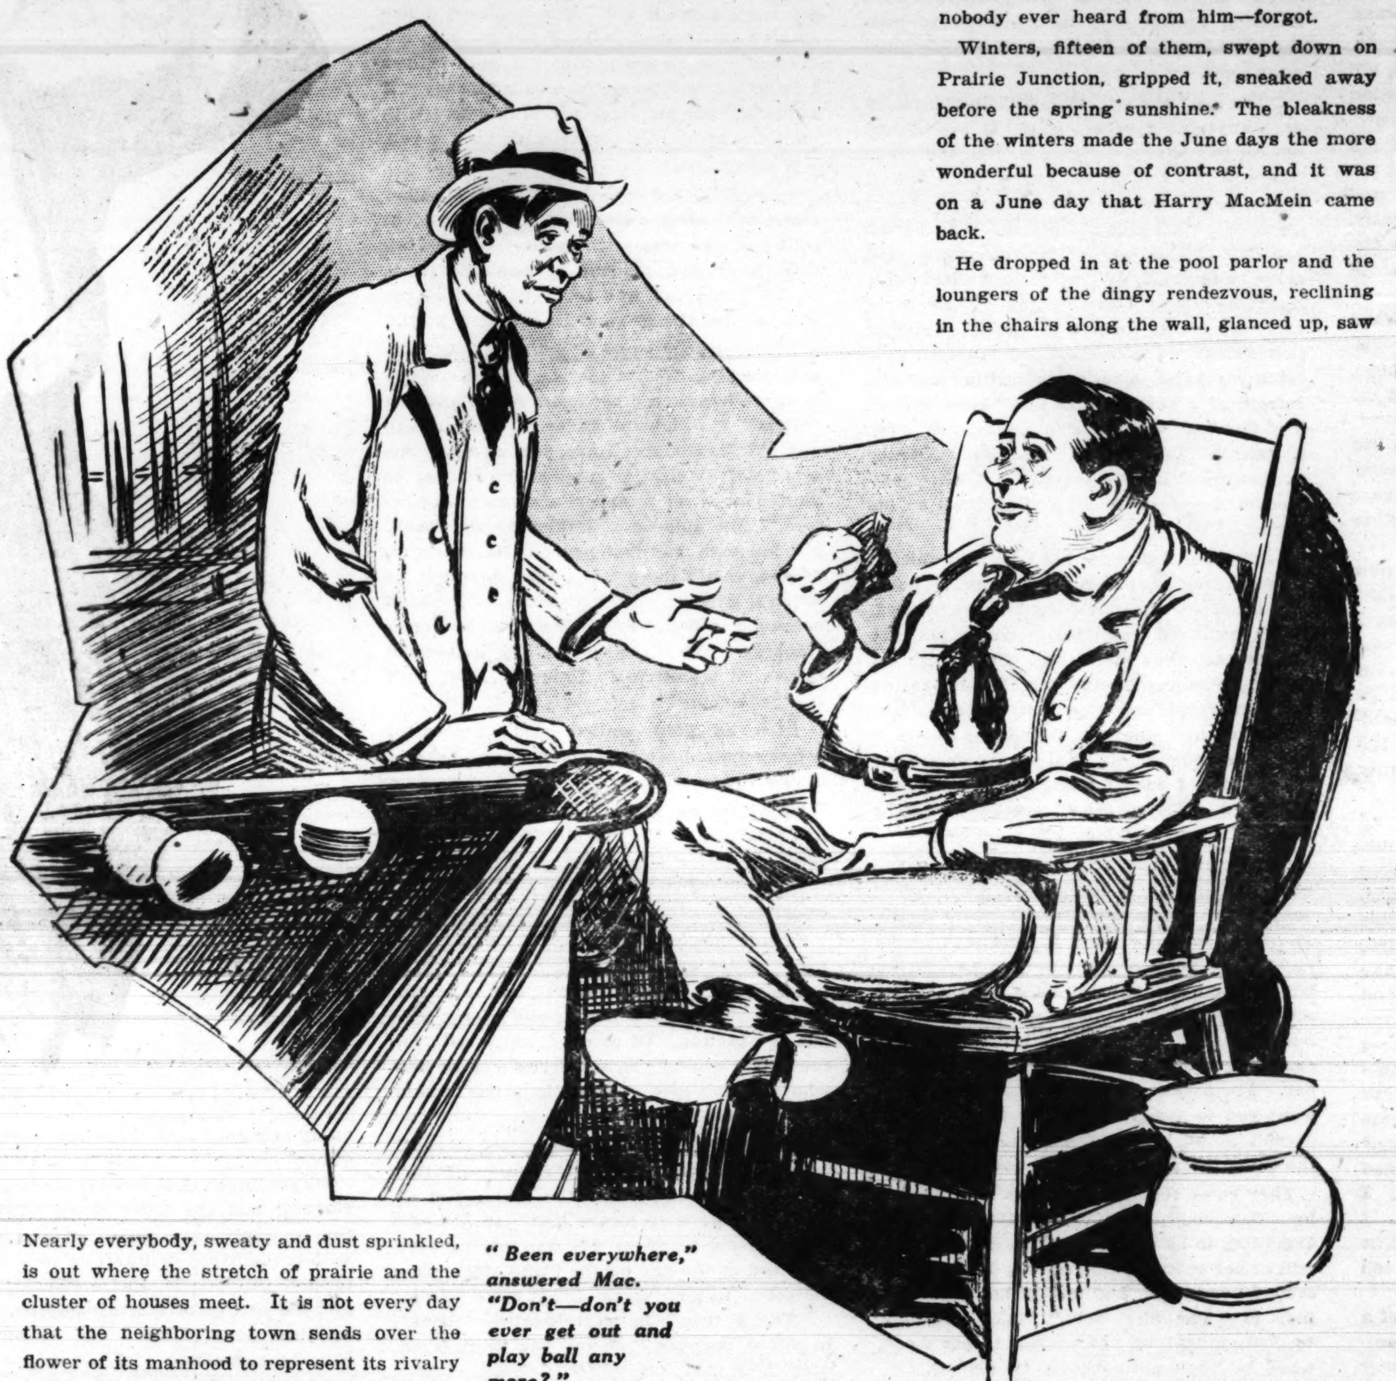
When He Realized Youth Was Failing Him, He Came Back to Where He Had Left It In Its Zenith.

THE afternoon of a summer's day. A ball game going on at the edge of town. The stores along Main street have closed and Ben Tupley, standing beside his hotel bus, is announcing in stentorian voice that he will convey fellow citizens to the scene of the gala event in return for the small payment of "a dime—10 cents, going right out!"

Nearly everybody had already gone out.



" Been everywhere," answered Mac. "Don't—don't you ever get out and play ball any more? "

Nearly everybody, sweaty and dust sprinkled, is out where the stretch of prairie and the cluster of houses meet. It is not every day that the neighboring town sends over the flower of its manhood to represent its rivalry through athletic skill and cunning. When the sun goes down Prairie Junction will be either hilarious and gloating, or it will be quiet, and throats that have yelled themselves hoarse will have a gulp in them.

The sky is blue above the invaded cow pasture—blue, save for a great, white, harmless cloud that tosses and tumbles high in the heavens just as clouds of its kind tossed and tumbled when there was only the prairie to look down upon. In lieu of a grandstand buggies have been driven in to form a semicircle, and my lady, reclining among the cushions, loses none of her dignity in becoming a spectator of the combat. But the men folks, shirt sleeved, smoking cigars, yelling witty remarks, are excited beyond keeping their seats. And the small boy, who has eluded the St. Peter collecting tickets at the gate, crowds close to the base lines. The small boy is a very much tanned, shrill voiced proposition, and his fists are clenched due to the intense loyalty which he feels for the town to which the angels brought him, and his eyes are wistful with hero worship for the players who've gotta win—gotta! And he misses no move that is made by Harry MacMein, who is twirling for his native heath.

And Harry MacMein is worth any one's watching. There is a charm in the manner with which he simply walks out to the pitcher's position. Tall, limber, quick of movement, keen of eye, cool of nerve, agile, accurate. Years enough, but none too many. He plants a spiked toe in the soft earth, gloves the ball at the back of his head, chews gum as if unconscious that every eye is upon him, twists himself like a contortionist, and hurls the ball right in the groove. He is glorious. He is youth. It is his hour.

The summer sun causes necks and noses to blister, and Lem Mulkins, white coated and perspiring, noisily dispenses with many a red and green bottle of soda pop. Off in the nearby field, a farmer rides among the corn rows, the echo of the shouts that go up from the arena floating out to him. A bee hovers for a time around first base and then mumbles away to quieter clover. The afternoon passenger train pulls into the town and immediately out again, and the fireman waves from the engine—a hint that the town is but one of many towns in the big world. But the hint is lost on the populace partaking of its popular pastime. Does not the world really end where the sky touches the prairie? And if the town does not win the day, then sackcloth and ashes.

It is a long, drawn out contest. The small leather sphere is whacked many times to the fence and beyond, and differences must be adjusted with the umpire. The big white cloud high in the sky has become a low, shadowy cloud in the west, and the sun is lost behind it when Harry MacMein reaches out with his gloved hand and grabs in a ball that has been batted high above him. He might miss it. There is suspense. But he doesn't miss it. His catch means the end of the game and victory, and he makes the catch.

"Good boy, Mac." "There's a fellow that if the big league knew about him they'd snap him up in a minute." "You can depend on Mac in a pinch." The remarks tickle against his ear drums. He is youth. It is his hour.

"Mac" walks back to town with one of the Holton girls—the one who smiles so easily at everybody and at everything, Emily. He swings along, towering above her, his cap on the back of his head. And the crowd, loitering home about them, fling friendly phrases. And the sun, emerging clear on the prairie's edge, lights up the close of the day with pink.

Folks wondered why Mac and Emily didn't get along together after they were married, wondered why he went away, wondered why nobody ever heard from him—forgot.

Winters, fifteen of them, swept down on Prairie Junction, gripped it, sneaked away before the spring sunshine. The bleakness of the winters made the June days the more wonderful because of contrast, and it was on a June day that Harry MacMein came back.

He dropped in at the pool parlor and the loungers of the dingy rendezvous, reclining in the chairs along the wall, glanced up, saw that he was a stranger, returned their attention again to the manner in which the ivory balls were being maneuvered about on the green tables.

"You ought to remember me, Barney. You used to catch when I pitched for the home team."

"You know, I thought it was you just for a minute there when you come in the door," squinted Barney, resuming his chair again after shaking hands. "Where ya been?"

"Been everywhere," answered Mac. "Don't—don't you ever get out and play ball any more?"

"Great guns, no," chuckled Barney, taking a chew of tobacco and craning his fat neck to watch the result of a shot that was being made on the green table.

"Tell me about the old bunch," urged Mac, huskily.

Barney disengaged himself rather reluctantly from witnessing the thing at hand before becoming reminiscent, but with prompting from Mac in the bringing back of names from the cobweby bygone, he disposed of them all. They had moved away, they stayed at home nights with their children, they had left the world altogether. "By the way," finished Barney, "you married Emily Holton, didn't ya? It's been so long ago."

"I'd just as soon you would have forgotten that," flushed Mac. "That's one of the things that's kept me from coming back, hating to run on to her. Emily and I didn't get along very well. She had the settling down idea and I couldn't see that stuff at all. I was bound I was going to stay young."

He sat looking straight ahead for a time—the man who had experienced the glory of youth and who had expected to retain it on and on. Finding that youth failing him, he had come back to where he had left it in its zenith and where he expected to find it again. The old thrills, why not? The old companions, were they not waiting in the old haunts?

He was beginning to understand now the leering manner in which the courthouse in the center of the square had looked down at him on his way up from the train. The clock in the tower had not only boomed the hour. It had said as it boomed, "Yes, I faintly recall when you and your chums sang in evening serenade, but there are new songs and voices now." Now, after the talk with Barney, there was left but an ache where expectancy had throbbed.

He went forth on the street and old men fumbling with canes, dimmer of vision than when he had seen them last, hobbled on engrossed in their errands. Boyhood, clear eyed, glanced at him with no hint of recognition. The new baker and the new printer—transients now as they had ever been—whistled along their ways, apparently conscious of no guilt in being usurpers. And the generation that did greet—the gulf of years glazed the gaze that accompanied commonplace comment. He was glad he did not happen on to Emily. He did not want to see her. He wanted the glory of his youth back, that was all.

And he found himself mocked. He had chased a phantom to its last stand, he had reached for it, and it had vanished into thin air.

Maples had put forth their leafage again and the boughs were loaded luxuriantly. Insects droned in the blue grass, butterflies trailed above the foxtail and mullen, robins hopped among the lilacs. The sunshine sparkled and the restful shadows lengthened whether you watched them or no. It was the same old June. The same old June, but the leaves were fresh leaves, and it was the first summer for the butterflies that fluttered in the sunshine. The same old June—yes, and no.

He walked out across the railroad tracks. The sun was going down. And as he neared the old field there floated to him the softened shouts of a game in progress—aye, an echo of all the voices of youth that had ever shouted there. He quickened his step and then approached, haltingly. The bunch that called to one another on the hallowed play place wasn't any bunch that he knew. They knew him not. A hurried glance in his direction and they turned eagerly to each other again.

A moment before he had half counted on joining in the game. Now he realized the absurdity. Their unvoiced taunts were bitter enough. Just when had he passed beyond the pale of the land in which they reveled? It was awful, that life should be like this.

And then suddenly he forgot himself. He forgot himself in watching one of the lads walk out to the pitcher's position—tall, limber, quick of movement, keen of eye, cool of nerve, agile, accurate. He saw the youngster plant a spiked toe in the soft earth, glove the ball at the back of his head, and hurl it right in the groove.

And as he watched, the curl of cynicism left his lips and the ache inside him was gone. He found himself glorying greater than when he himself had played with such power and punch.

The shouts echoed across the evening touched prairie that was again green with corn. The sun pinked the sky—was gone.

And then from one of the houses at the edge of the field came a woman's voice across the quiet. "Mac," she called, "how many times do I have to yell to you to come home. Supper's ready."

The lad burst away, his cap on the back of his head. And half way through the shadowed clover blossoms the man caught up with him.

"Wait a minute," pleaded the man, "it was me she was calling, too."

Together they passed through the patch of light at the open doorway. She paused, puzzled at the sight of the man, but looking in his eyes and satisfied with what she saw there, Emily brought out another plate and drew a third chair to the table.

The Red Shawl

SYNOPSIS.

Revolution sweeps Grodnia. The king is killed by a mob and his daughter, Princess Sabina, escapes in the garb of a peasant. An aged priest, Father Pokoff, accompanies her in flight. The two meet an American newspaper correspondent, Bob Hallam, who bribes guards to permit them to cross the border. Naroush Dupchinsky, a bolshevist, is assigned to seek and kill the princess. He takes passage for America on the same boat with the Princess Sabina, who is passing as a peasant girl, Sophia Gorov. Struck by the girl's beauty, Dupchinsky makes love to her, much to her distress. Chaos reigns in Grodnia, and Count Jan is sent by leaders of the old régime to find the princess that a marriage between the two may be arranged and the queen put upon her throne. He meets Hallam, en route home, confides his mission, and asks his aid. The princess reaches New York and goes into hiding. Dupchinsky annoys her. He boasts to her his mission, and she finally promises to marry him "when he has killed the princess." Nastia, the bolshevist's forsaken sweetheart, trails him to New York.

SEVENTH INSTALLMENT.

DISCOVERED.

BOB HALLAM, the hero of the staff, laureled with the honors of sterling work done in Europe, was on leave of absence.

To most folks a vacation is associated with green grass and cows. Bob was spending his irresponsible period in town. For one thing, he had put up with a plethora of bucolic living and scenery abroad, and the city looked refreshing to him. For another, he had some one to find, and he proposed to devote his period of furlough to seeking her.

Count Jan, the royalist ambassador of Grodnia, was similarly occupied. Jan had kept in daily touch with Hallam, to whom he had unbelted his identity and purposes. Bob, having accepted the hospitality and confessions of the vagrant noble, could scarcely cut away from him in simple dismissal, so he let Jan victimize him into boresome luncheons and prolix discussions. Jan had engaged private detectives, and at $10 per day per man, with shady expense accounts added, he was receiving nightly verbose reports on thin paper, detailing how and where each operative had spent his time, and leading nowhere that indicated the whereabouts of the princess.

Hallam, in the hours when he was free of the titled millstone, was prosecuting a subtle search on his own account. He did not feel at liberty to make open inquiries for fear that he might embarrass Sabina. But he, knowing the town as he did, wandered about the Slav districts, putting forth camouflaged feelers. He ran upon the track of Dupchinsky early, and while not immediately connecting the presence or motives of the bolshevist with anything directly affecting the princess, he was interested to know that one of the foremost of her enemies was on hand.

He reasoned that this agitator, so fresh from the killing which had ended the long race of the anarchist pack in Grodnia after the royal fox, must be in America on essential business of his clique. Surely no staff officer of that group would go a-journeying so soon after the first triumph, while the robbing and the ruling was so fat, on any matter disassociated from the immediate activities of the Grodnian soviet.

What, then, could have brought him? Surely not general propaganda, for, while all bolshevists in all lands were brethren and shared the common drugdream of baptizing the whole world in the scummy waters of the movement, still it struck Hallam as hardly logical that at this prime stage of Grodnia's reign of the butchering aristocracy would they tell off a valuable arm for foreign missionary assignment on behalf of the cause at large. Dupchinsky had been sent by the inner council, Hallam concluded; had been sent with a definite objective, and no trifling one.

From a friend in the federal building he procured credentials as an immigration officer and made inquiries at Dupchinsky's abode. He found that the alien occupied his rooms only from bedtime, which was usually at about 1 in the morning, until breakfast, in the neighborhood of 9. Most of his remaining hours he gave to the coffee house.

The United States government had semiofficially proclaimed that pronounced bolshevists, noncitizens, were not wanted in these confines. They were being deported in batches as undesirables, not specifically as members of that crew whose deeds of bloody horror had spread about the globe in cabled descriptions. Secret service men and officials of the immigration bureau were not uncommon in the coffee house and throughout the region where it was situated.

Dupchinsky turned white when the young American touched him on the shoulder, beckoned him into an inner room, showed his insignia of authority and cross-questioned him. With twitching lips the foreigner lied as glibly as his chattering teeth would let him. He spoke bad English and supplemented it with dashes of Slavonic argot. Hallam understood both.

"You have been lying like a horsethief," said Hallam when Dupchinsky had made his statement, purporting to be a refugee who intended to find work at a mechanical trade, and claiming to come from a country some miles distant from Grodnia. "You are Naroush Dupchinsky of Grodnia, and you were one of the front rank stars in the episode of overturning the government. You are prodigally supplied with money and are not seeking work. You do not intend to become a decent member of this republic. You are here in furtherance of some dirty deal which is of a nature not encouraged, not tolerated, I dare say, by the United States. Now, come clean or I'll have you interned and shipped back to where you came from."

Dupchinsky waved his hands, crossed his heart, swore away his soul. He admitted that he had been a bolshevist, but pleaded that the sights of murder had broken down his resolution and he had flown to America to find peace and to serve his itch for liberty through the slower but more human channels of republicanism. Hallam gave him the lie again, quoting to him the rabid sermons which Dupchinsky had bellowed forth in that very basement.

"I—I was merely illustrating to my friends, here, what the bolsheviki say—how they defend their theories—not how I feel about it," he parried.

Hallam laughed. It was a good comeback, and he raised his respect for Dupchinsky because of it. But he was more satisfied than ever that this man, here under a false name, spending a rich man's allowance, never working or seeking work, stumbling and prevaricating under questioning, in New York so soon after Grodnia's reversal of central affairs, a flaming anarchist at home and a violent coffee house propagandist over here, was an inside worker of no inconsequential character in America for the soviet of Grodnia.

But he was as indubitably convinced that Dupchinsky could not be either bullied or tick-tack-toed into committing himself on his exact line of operation. So he made a mental reservation that the bushy haired deceiver would be worth while watching, and, with a gratuitous warning to his man not to do any coarse work within this jurisdiction, Bob took himself along.

Dupchinsky was in a haze of tremorous terror for a few days after his inquisition, but, seeing no more of Hallam, filliped him out of his calculations and proceeded over the zigzag trail, that printless path which he hoped would lead him to Princess Sabina. After the scene with Nastia it occurred to him that for a second reason he had been precipitate in so tactlessly antagonizing her, for she was not only the one person who might have identified the princess to him, but she was one of the only two who could give direct testimony to the officials of a commission from the inner council; she did not know, of course, the nature of it, as he had shared his secret with none but the girl who had promised to marry him when the great masterpiece of international machination was completed.

Yes, it was a bonehead error to have so flatly "bounced" Nastia; it would have been better politics to have salved her for the time, even at the price of being beset with her whinings.

He felt rather sure that he had not seen the last of the girl. He knew her type, and he surmised that she would "hang around," assuming no aggressive, but just hoping along. Nothing was more distant from his hypothesis than a suspicion that Nastia had followed him and was bolstering up her low tensioned nerve with her high voltage of despair to face the girl who now meant as much to Dupchinsky as his exalted aspirations, his classic trust.

But Nastia pushed her breakfast away on the morning that followed the tragic night of her heartbreak, set her greenhorn hat with a piteous try at elegance, and set her drawn face toward the house where, on the window screen, she had seen the moving picture of her lover's hand holding another hand.

When the timorous girl came to the spot where she had stood while painfully watching the shadow scene, her backbone wilted. Perhaps—probably—this other woman would not understand her Grodnian babble. Dupchinsky spoke a smattering of broken English; he might get on with her, whereas Nastia, whose linguistic education had never extended beyond her mother tongue, might not. And, further, this woman was most likely Americanized, and American trains of thought ran on other gauges than those at home. Would she not laugh at this ungainly creature, bursting in upon her to rave, in a foreign tongue, about the loss or larceny of a man's fluctuating affections? Maybe she wouldn't even find the right woman—more than one could live in that house. Bitterly resolute as her intentions had been when she set out, she now was weakening under the pummeling of doubts and misgivings.

It was a beautiful morning as far as sun and breeze could make a morning so. Many people were passing, up and down, and Nastia noticed how carefree they seemed, either roaming without evidence of any serious interests or all embraced in personal things which gave spring to their steps, light to their eyes. All were smiling or straining, all except her, the unhappiest sinner in Christendom, standing between the total loss of all that life might ever have held dear and the unpromising chance of aid and mercy from one whom she did not know, would not know if she saw her, could not address on any grounds other than charity if she should confront her.

She stood there, palpitating and debating, as the door of the house on which she gazed opened.

A priest came forth. Nastia straightened with a jerk. There was somewhat about the contour of the figure in holy garb which fell familiarly upon her eye. He turned his full face toward her. Santa Maria! It was Father Pokoff. A gripping impulse dragged at her to run to him. He had known her since babyhood. He was a good man. He was from home. He would understand. He would help! But a moment . . . where had she seen him last? Was it not Father Pokoff whom she had seen hurrying down the road from the palace with her mistress, Princess Sabina? This was more than suggestive—it was tremendous.

The father was hesitating on the upper step. The door was still open behind him, as though he were waiting for some one. And so he was, for some one was coming to join him. Nastia focused one look and all but swooned. The one who stood beside the priest was her princess—Sabina!

Clad in a neat walking habit, her blooded beauty set off by a trim toque of modest yet presentable American fashion, Sabina was coming down the steps with the priest.

Nastia started with a bound. Midway in the street she stopped abruptly. What meant this? Sabina was coming from the house where—from that house.

O, no; that first thought was too outrageous. But her royal highness would know; surely she would know who the other woman was, and help Nastia, who had helped her in a crucial crisis to which Sabina owed her life. Not that Nastia exacted gratitude—not from her royal highness. But she could ask for assistance, advice, ask in bended humility, as became her in the presence of an impersonated throne. Nastia's feet found wings. In fevered steps she loped to the base of the stairs, and Sabina, conscious that some one had stopped, glanced down. With a gasp and a thud she recognized Nastia.

The father at the same moment saw and knew her, too.

"O, your highness—the good God brought me to you," bubbled Nastia.

"Sh! No 'highness' here. H—how did you find where I was?"

"I didn't, your——I was seeking some one else."

"Some one else? In this house? A man, perhaps?"

"A woman. O, if you will only let me tell you my terrible troubles. You can help me, I know."

Sabina let the puzzle drift through her mind a moment. A woman? There was only one other woman in the house, and she the motherly housekeeper. What could Nastia want of her? No; there was mischief in sight, and danger.

"Come with us," she beckoned Nastia. "We were starting on our morning stroll."

The girl fell in, and Sabina led the way to a small park, which at that hour was not densely peopled except for passers through. The three sat upon a bench.

"Now, tell me what is on your bosom," said Sabina.

Nastia, with blushes over her rôle as a castoff plaything, with hesitant tongue in the presence of her queenly mistress, made known the turns and twists which had driven her against the barbed wall of fortune's reverses and love's adversities. Long before she had finished Sabina and Father Pokoff knew who the woman was that the unstrung girl had come to find.

It was a deadly dilemma for Sabina. She reckoned that she might lean with a chance of safety on Nastia's lifelong and inbred loyalty. But against this would be ranged that potent and often unreasonable emotion, jealousy. Which way would Nastia "jump"? There was scarcely any use deceiving her as to the identity of Dupchinsky's inamorata. Sabina read in the girl's vehement and passionate declarations that she would hound the spot where dwelt that mysterious rival, and in that event she might confront Dupchinsky there, in which calamitous circumstance there would be sure to be excitement, agitation, and—exposure; death!

"O, your highness—forgive me; I forgot—surely you must know this woman, living in the house with you," pleaded Nastia.

"I know her," said the princess.

"Then you will deign to help your humble servant and worshipful slave?"

"I will help you as far as it is in my power. So, also, will Father Pokoff. But you will be surprised as never you were before in all your life when I make known to you the whole truth. You must pledge yourself to do nothing rash, nothing hasty."

"I will do anything that you command."

"I hope so. You must move with the utmost discretion."

"I will. I will. I am yours to order, and I will obey."

"Very well. Go to that bench yonder. I will call you in a few moments. I must speak in private to the father before I can tell you more."

Nastia, bewildered, moved to the other bench, out of earshot.

"What shall I do, father?" asked Sabina, anxiously. "I cannot tell her what Dupchinsky's mission is; thank heaven, she doesn't know yet. I trust her good faith, but in her violent love for this beastly bolshevist she might answer a mad impulse to betray me, when she finds out everything, to rid herself of the one who has dispossessed her in the affections of her lover.

"On the other hand, I must provide that Nastia shall not, without intending me treachery, reveal to Dupchinsky who I am in order to convince him how chimerical his infatuation is, seeking thus to wean him away from me and back to her. This she might reasonably do without any suspicion that he has a secret design on the life of Princess Sabina of Grodnia.

"I cannot long hide from the girl that I am the one on whom Dupchinsky has chosen to fasten his abominable fancy. And when she learns that I am she I will stand accused and confessed as the obstacle between this luckless maid and her husband to be, the ostensible cause of his change of heart, unless I can make plausible explanations which will at the same time provide against loosening all the slender but vital threads of this interinvolved tangle.

"When it was a question as between Nastia's breed and my safety she did not hesitate for a flicker; she would have died for me, I believe. But now it is quite different. Between her devotion to me and the love of this murderous Dupchinsky her decision is not to be complacently awaited, father. No one knows better than you how, from the bottom of my soul, I wish this girl well, and would give years from my life to restore to her this preposterous person who has shackled himself to me with fetters which I cannot tear except by giving up my breast to the knife blade of this infamous assassin. I am sorely tempted, father, to tell her everything and let him do his utmost, claiming meanwhile the protection of America."

"No, no, my little one. You know what such protection means. Czars have been bombed to death in the midst of their own guards in Russia, in the heart of the most solid system of royal spies and police in history, and in times when the nihilists were not nearly as powerful and as closely organized as they are now. Your life will never again be safe if Dupchinsky or any other bolshevist knows where you are.

"You must carry on along the lines which we have traveled so far, as perilous and painful as such procedure will unquestionably be to you. There is a chance that we may yet contrive to silence Nastia, though you have advanced several arguments which, unfortunately, are strongly against her shielding you. You dare not tell her why

His Loyal Heart

Edith's Problem Had Seemed Quite Simple, but It Became Complex as the Days Passed.

MISS HATFIELD sank back in her chair, settled herself comfortably from force of habit, and regarded her visitor quietly but with a deepening resentment in her brown eyes. Why did he so steadfastly refuse to understand? she asked herself impatiently. Was it obtuseness, stubbornness, grim determination, or merely the characteristic inability of some of his sex to realize that any woman can withstand them?

Her eyes, fixed on her unhappy victim, unconsciously grew sterner as this reflection came to her, and Mr. Oakley, already writhing mentally under the penetrating, if not arraigning, quality of her gaze, offered it the further tribute of nervously crossing and uncrossing his feet. He also coughed gently. These things were unlike him, and the disapproval in the eyes of his hostess deepened into good natured disdain.

"I hope you enjoy this," she remarked briefly when the silence was becoming something of a strain to them both. "I hope, too, you realize that I do not. I find it extremely irritating."

Mr. Oakley wiped his brow, opened his lips to speak, closed them again as if on better thought, and, reluctantly removing his gaze from her face, mournfully transferred it to the rug. Miss Hatfield frowned.

"The situation contains at least one new element," she finally observed, more affably. "To see you dumb for once is something I never dared to look for. You warned me years ago that only death could silence that loving tongue. But now——"

"I have something to say to you," he stammered, "something very—er—vital and important. I hope you'll listen—er—patiently till I have finished. It won't take long."

"George," she said steadily, "once for all you must understand that this thing must end. I can't have you continuing to propose to me year in and year out, night after night, day after day, every time we're alone for five minutes. I won't have it!" She hesitated, then added, deliberately: "I tried to make that clear to you last Monday night, and thought I had. I told you then if you ever spoke to me of love again I would be forced to end our friendship. This insistence, this—this—persecution, is unworthy of you. You've had a week to think it over, yet you come here again tonight with the same old story."

"But it isn't that, you know," he explained hurriedly. "It isn't that this time, I mean. It's—it's something quite different. I came——" His voice grew suddenly faint as Miss Hatfield's eyes met his. "I came to tell you some news," he added desperately.

She waited in silence. She had the air of a just judge momentarily suspending sentence.

"Well?" she asked at last. "Why don't you do it?"

"I'm—I'm going to be married," he stammered.

"I beg your pardon," she murmured, doubtfully. It seemed really incredible that she could have heard him aright.

"It only happened last night," he said, "and I've only known her since Tuesday. She's a southern girl, and I met her at the Blakes'. She's visiting them. Of course it's rather sudden"—his eager voice became self-conscious again—"but the Blakes know her people and all about me and my family, so it's going to be all right, I guess." He stopped and looked at her expectantly.

"Don't you think it's a pretty good thing?" he added boyishly.

Edith laughed, and in the laugh got rid of an annoying obstruction in the throat. She was able to throw back her head and look him squarely in the eyes, with her old brilliant smile, and she did it. Getting up, she crossed the room and stood beside him, her hand on his shoulder. He tried to rise, but the steady hand held him down. She was a little behind him and glad he could not see her face as she talked to him.

"My dear boy," she said quietly, "how can I tell? Of course it's a good thing for her, but how can I tell, without knowing her, whether it's a good thing for you—especially," she added, almost coldly, "when you hardly know her yourself. How can you tell? It isn't like you to be so—so impulsive."

He turned quickly to face her and his hand went up to cover hers but was withdrawn the same instant.

"I thought you'd like it," he muttered apologetically. "You've always been telling me to, you know."

His friend made a brusque movement away from him. She crossed the room swiftly and dropped into a low chair facing the fire.

"Of course I advised you to fall in love with a nice girl and marry her," she threw back at him over her shoulder with brusque honesty. "But I certainly didn't urge you to make an idiot of yourself, George, and you seem to have done it, thoroughly."

He drooped again under this arraignment, and for a time they sat silent, Miss Hatfield arousing herself only long enough to veto sharply his modest suggestion that they have more light.

"Tell me," she said at last, "do you really care anything for this girl? If you do, of course it makes a difference. On the other hand, if it's something you've done out of pique, or on a temporary impulse, or to teach me a lesson it's—it's abominable." Her voice broke on the last words. He rose quietly and came to her side, where he stood silent for a moment looking down on her. From some other room near them in the great apartment house came the notes of a piano, played by a tentative hand, laboriously picking out the refrain of a new popular air, "Love Me All You Can." It was played over and over, with a faithful but dreary iteration. Oakley caught it and his lips twitched. With wholly recovered self-control he smiled down on his friend.

"Of course I care for her," he said quietly. "I would not have asked her to marry me if I had not cared. She's not"—he hesitated, then continued resolutely—"she's not the one woman. You know that. But I can't get the one woman. She knows all I'm offering her, how much and how little. I've told her about you and what our friendship means to me. She understands. She wants to be your friend, too. I wish I might bring her round tomorrow night to see if you like her," he added diffidently. "May I?"

"Are you really 30, George," she asked cheerfully. "Or is it only 13? I've often wondered. I suppose I shall never really know. It sounds absurd, but perhaps it's all right. You know how much I hope so. Bring her tomorrow night by all means and let me look her over. And now," she gave him her hand, her lips smiling, her face serene again, "good night. Go home and dream of her. I'm afraid I shall, too. That I don't want you to marry the wrong woman in me doesn't make me indifferent to your doing the same thing with another one."

They came together the next night, at an hour flatteringly early in its betrayal of their eagerness to be with her. Miss Hatfield was still at her solitary dinner table, drinking her second demi-tasse, and lost to her surroundings in "The Sick Soul," which somehow seemed mournfully appropriate to her mood, when her maid announced their arrival.

"Miss Bowdoin and Mr. Oakley, miss," she said.

Edith laid down the book with which she had beguiled the dreariness of a lonely meal and looked up alertly.

"Bring them in here," she directed. "And make some more coffee."

They came, and after the first moment of greetings and pleasant confusion the two women's eyes met in a long, friendly, but appraising glance. After it Miss Hatfield put her hands lightly on the girl's shoulders and kissed her on the cheek.

"We must be very good friends, my dear," she said cordially. "Try to like me, for I'm going to like you immensely."

The southern girl, barely 20, pretty, soft voiced, exquisitely gentle, and feminine to the core, answered warmly in her soft southern drawl.

"Will you really?" she asked eagerly. "I'm sure I shall like you. She regarded her hostess with eyes which held a child's frank admiration. "George—Mr. Oakley—made me love you before we came," she ended shyly.

"He has been a busy man this last week," laughed Edith, mischievously, as she poured coffee into the cups the maid brought. "Teaching you to love him may not have taxed his energy—I may say that as a venerable pupil of his; but teaching you to love me, a stranger, couldn't have been so easy."

Hallie Bowdoin echoed the laugh. "It was," she asserted calmly. "I was such an apt pupil. Two lumps, please." As she drank her coffee she proceeded to expound her simple creed, gliding into personalities with the easy candor of youth.

"I think friendship is such a beautiful thing," she went on serenely. "It's almost the most beautiful thing in the world." Her glance at her lover indicated her conscientious ground for the "almost." "So when George told me of your friendship and his and what it meant to him I knew it must mean a great deal to you, too. I came tonight especially to ask if you would take me into it—let me share it. Of course I know you can't really care for me, so soon; but you will try, won't you? And you won't feel that my coming spoils it?" She hesitated a moment, then finished, looking straight into her hostess' eyes as she spoke. "I don't believe I could marry George," she ended slowly, "if I thought our marriage would interfere with your friendship for him or with his for you. I just couldn't!"

Tears filled her eyes as she spoke, and her sweet childish lips trembled. It was evident that she was wholly in earnest. Miss Hatfield, a shrewd student of human nature, realized this and was touched. Rising, she went behind the girl and kissed her gently.

"That is very sweet of you, my dear," she said simply. "It is just as I said. We're going to like each other enormously, and you will add a delightful flavor of freshness to our old friendship. Have you an older sister? No? Well, I'm going to be a sister to you! I've never promised a woman that before." She glanced at Oakley as she spoke, but his gaze was fastened on the charming face of his fiancée. He transferred it to Edith's, with an added emphasis in it which conveyed to the elder woman all he had been thinking. "Isn't she delightful?" he seemed to ask. "Wonderful? Unique? Now, isn't it a good thing?"

Then, as Edith smiled back in cheerful acquiescence, his expression changed, became almost apologetic.

"Play for us, Hallie," he commanded royally, and as the girl complied he crossed the room to where Miss Hatfield sat and drew his chair close to hers in the old confidential manner.

"I was sure you'd like her," he murmured, under cover of the Chopin nocturne Hallie was playing. "You do, don't you? And you see how sweet and generous she is—not jealous or exacting. Of course," his voice grew deeper, "I couldn't have married any woman who wouldn't love you and help me to hold your friendship."

Edith looked at him, touched, yet amused. "I am to understand, then, from you both," she asked lightly, "that the real object of this marriage is to please me?" He did not answer for a moment. He was looking over her head at the girl on the piano stool, playing softly to them in the firelit room. Then:

"That's true," he corroborated. "But," he added, boyishly, "do say you think it's a good thing to do."

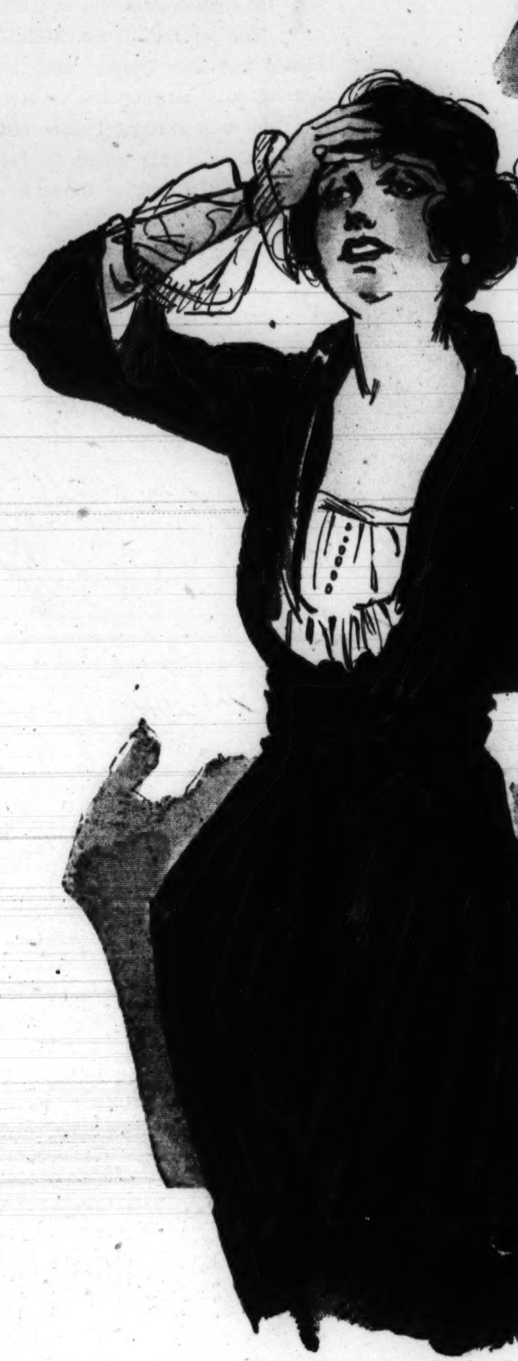
She was serious for once.

"I can say it in all sincerity, dear boy," she murmured. "You seem to have chosen very wisely. You should be very happy."

As she undressed that night in her room, after their radiant leave taking, she smiled wanly at her reflection in the mirror. "They will be happy," she told the woman there. "And if my knowledge of life has taught me anything, they will have forgotten my very existence within six months."

In this surmise, however, Miss Hatfield was mistaken. Mr. and Mrs. George Oakley were married in New York in the hospitable home of the Blakes. Their honeymoon, however, was spent in the south, near the bride's adoring father, and it was from a prosperous city of his wife's native state that George Oakley wrote her of his intention to make that place his future home.

"Hallie's father owns a newspaper here—the Daily Record," he explained, "and it has been running down badly. They want a new editor, and I'm to have the place. It's a big opportunity; it inspires me. I want to do big things. You approve, don't you? I want you to be proud of me. The one thing I regret is that it keeps me from New York; but, after all, I can get there three or four times a year, and you must write often. I'm sending you files of the Record. I want you to go over them and tell me what you think of its possibilities. I see some rough sledding ahead, but it will be worth while, and I shall enjoy any good stiff fights the work may involve."



"I will go there," she fir

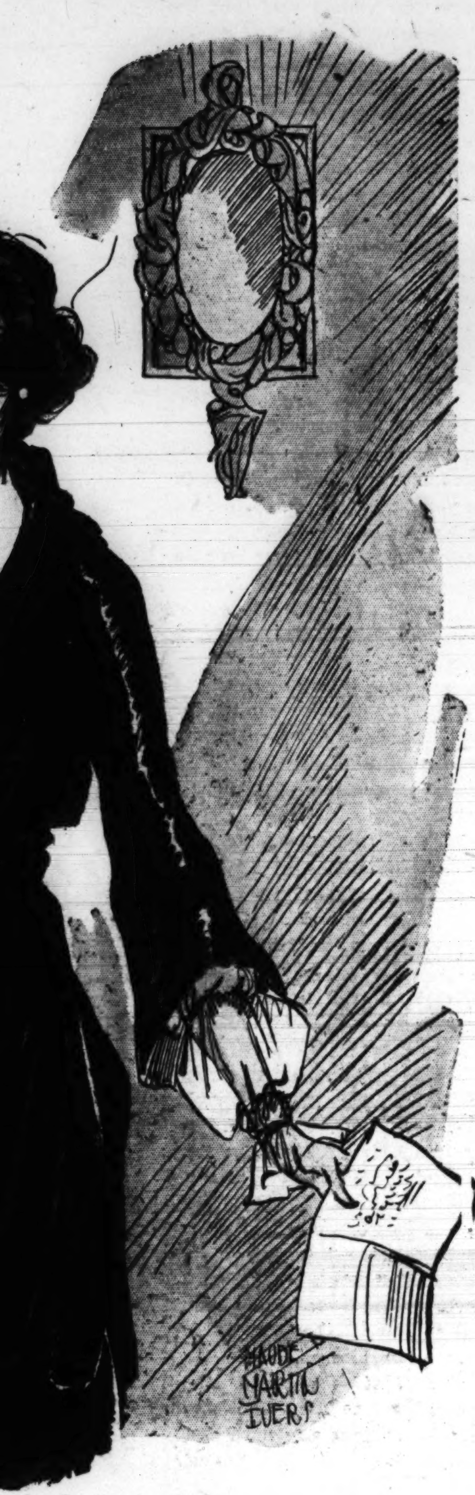
He continued thus, over many pages. Miss Hatfield laid the letter down with a sigh. She was very busy, quite content, and happy, with a multitude of interests to hold her attention. Of course, she would miss George and his matter of fact assumption that she had lost none of her claim on his leisure. But the upbuilding of a newspaper held interesting possibilities, and she would be glad to help George all she could. He wrote constantly, and as her letters revealed a growing interest in his work he added inside journalistic gossip, problems of the day, editorial questions, and the like. He wanted to know what she thought of this or that. He asked her advice constantly, which surprised and flattered her, and he usually took it when she gave it, which astonished her more. Incidentally, he selected a home for Hallie, with Edith's help, and both he and Hallie consulted her feverishly as to its furnishing and decoration.

There had been, it seems, a choice of two houses, and Oakley sent the photographs to Edith, asking her preference, naively adding, "Hallie rather leans to number one." Edith sent back a warm indorsement of "Number one," though she saw better possibilities in the other. The incident made her thoughtful.

Oakley ran up to New York about this time, very full of his newspaper, his new work, his new associates, his new home, his wife. There was not a trace of self-consciousness nor of loverlike sentiment in his attitude toward her, but he claimed all her time while he was in the city, and gave her the precious privilege of selecting wall paper and furniture for him during the day, rewarding her with dinner and the theater at night.

A year after his marriage he telegraphed

by Elizabeth Jordan



’ she finally decided.

her: “It's a boy. Ten pounds. Both well.” Then, as if to deprecate the boyish enthusiasm of this message, he followed it up with a letter distinctly apologetic in tone.

“Knocks a man off his balance a little,” he explained. “First child and all that, you know. Sets the imagination to work. The youngster hadn't been in the world an hour before I had him in the editorial chair of the Record, giving it to the fellows red hot, and smoothing my declining years and all that.” Then he became didactic and rather more apologetic. “It's a man duty to become a father, of course,” he explained. “We had an old professor at college who used to hammer away on that theory by the hour. Have children, work for them, slave for them, give up your life for them if necessary—that was his creed. Well, it comes right home to a man when he has some of his own. I looked at that little lobster before I left the house this morning and I was ready for the whole duty, even if it involved my being in hot water until I could make him look a pale-pink.”

His new paternal honors vied with the Record's achievements in his weekly letters after that. “We've called him Hatfield, after you,” he wrote triumphantly a few weeks later, and Edith hastened to send a large silver porringer suitably engraved and fitting words of appreciation. She was very busy. She had a new book under way; a theatrical manager wanted her to dramatize a previous book, and several new men appeared in her life, one with a mysterious and Byronic cast of countenance. She found him interesting and he was at hand. Hallie and George and the baby were remote, though George's constant letters kept him much in her thoughts. She was swiftly recalled to vivid interest in him one morning two years later by a telegram:

“Newspaper reports exaggerated. Pay no attention. Letter follows. George.”

Miss Hatfield flew to the morning newspapers. Their contents were certainly exaggerated, as she had expected, but they included nothing concerning Mr. Oakley or his family or the Record. Pale with friendly apprehension, she scrutinized the evening editions and those of the following day. All was peace, seemingly, as far as the Oakleys were concerned. The afternoon of the second day brought George's letter—a brief one.

“The newspapers may mislead you,” he began. “I can endure the world's misunderstanding, but not yours. Senator Daniels shot at me first. Then, not till then, I shot at him. Luckily neither of us was hurt. He couldn't hit an elephant ten paces off and I was too excited to shoot straight. We're both out on bail, and I've come straight to the office to write you. Now I must telephone to Hallie, for she may hear rumors before I go home and get nervous.”

Edith Hatfield laid down the letter. One thing in it kept sounding in her ears. “Now I must telephone to Hallie.”

“George Oakley is an idiot,” she exclaimed. “I've always had a sickening suspicion of it. Now I know it.” She must do something to end what she vaguely designated to herself as “this sort of thing.” But what could she do? A wild idea of marrying the Byronic person occurred to her and was dismissed as too sacrificial, no matter how curative.

“I will go there,” she finally decided. “I'll make them the visit I've promised so long. I'll look the ground over. I'll see what the conditions are between Hallie and him. I'll see Hatfield. Then I'll know what to do. I'll stop this nonsense and put Hallie in her rightful place if she isn't there now, and I'll destroy this Fra Angelico portrait of me with which George has filled his happy home.”

Such a decision was equivalent to prompt action with her. Two days after Mrs. Oakley's delightful response to her letter suggesting a visit Miss Hatfield was on her way south. At the end of the fourth day she stepped off the dusty train to meet the outstretched hands of George Oakley. Hallie was there, too, and a small person in skirts, very wabbly as to legs and curly as to hair, who surveyed her for an instant with round eyes, and promptly retired behind his father's left leg, where he clung with grim determination, shooting glances at her like a shy cupid. Mr. Oakley disengaged himself and firmly planted the archer in the open.

“O, come now, Hatfield, that's no way to act,” he urged deprecatingly. “Here's the lovely lady you came to meet. Here's ‘godmother,’” he pronounced the word as if it were an invocation. “What is her name? Tell it to the nice lady like a little southern gentleman.”

The curls bobbed violently. What seemed to the uninitiated an acute attack of croup agitated the figure of the small person in skirts, but it was merely Hatfield Oakley performing the verbal surgery of amputating her name.

“E-dif.”

“Edith,” translated his parent triumphantly. “Isn't that great? First word he ever spoke. Taught him myself. But he's got a lot more. Listen.

“This is baby's ‘godmother.’ Now, who is this ‘booflum lady’?”

Fresh symptoms of that acute agitation with which these conundrums seemed to rack this infant ego. The crowds around the station coming and going paused good naturedly to look at the pretty group and to applaud the wondrous fluency of the editor's son. Two negro porters, loaded with Miss Hatfield's handbag, rugs, umbrella and dust coat, grinned with calculating servility. The oracle again became blobbily oral.

“Ha-fil's yomudder.”

“Hatfield's godmother.” It was Hallie who this time translated the verbal pottage with a brisk decision in her tone.

“Now that the oration is over,” she said, “we'll go home. George would have had a band, I think, and public speeches if he had followed his impulses, but I induced him to compromise on this.” She indicated the infant now riding triumphantly on his father's arm with evident relief.

“It's really more of an achievement than it seemed,” she went on before Edith could speak. “We've been training him for eighteen hours a day since your letter came. George put in all his home hours at it and I filled in the time he was at the office. The nurse and cook and housemaid and coachman sang it at him between whiles. If that blessed lamb heard any word but ‘Edith’ and ‘godmother’ now he wouldn't recognize it.”

Edith's problem had seemed quite simple when she started south, if indeed it was a problem at all. It became exceedingly complex as the days passed. She knew that George Oakley was a busy man and that the Record was in the thick of a political fight of great intensity and state importance. Yet from the hour of her arrival he had calmly detached himself from his desk and stood prepared at any and all times for escort duty, walks, drives, talks, and sweet companionship. If he was not actually in the house he seemed always at the door, waiting for her in an automobile, and as the days passed Edith noticed that Hallie remained more persistently in the background, and sought every opportunity to leave her husband with the woman who was his friend and hers. Her manner, like that of George, was perfect. She was affectionate, intimate, spontaneous, delighted with the presence of her friend in her home; he was happy, cordial, warmly friendly, and wholly happy to have her there. He seemed almost pathetically eager to talk of New York, of its plays, its music, its art, its books, its people; and listening to his eager questions Edith believed she read a longing for the old days, the old life.

It was obvious, however, that he loved his wife, his work, his home, his son; though with the exception of the last he took them with a matter of fact acceptance that got on Edith's nerves. She found herself resenting him—his attitude toward her, so full of deference, almost as one approaching a shrine. She contrasted it with his manner to Hallie and felt her heart harden toward him. He noticed her increasing reserve, the coldness she could not control, and met it with an increase of attention, of interest, almost of tenderness. He anticipated every want; he seemed to read her wishes before she had formulated them. He and Hallie gave several dinners for her and a tea. It was evident that they spared no effort to make her not only known by their friends, but admired and loved by them. She had never received in so short a time so much attention. It was almost adulation. Yet day by day the situation became more impossible.

It was the night before her return to New York that Edith determined to take the situation in hand and end it or clear it up. She had come with a mission and it seemed to be working out the wrong way. She could not go away leaving it thus. She must talk to them both. It was all so absurd, so childish; yet the situation held such tragic possibilities. Hallie was a wonderful actress and a wonderful woman, sound and sweet to the core. But Hallie loved her husband, and no woman who loved her husband could endure seeing him put another woman as an idol on a pedestal and bow before it, however reverently. She must say something, do something. But what?

It was a warm night in late September and the flowers in the old southern garden were still in bloom. Aimlessly Edith walked out among them late at night, seizing a moment to escape her friends. The harvest moon was in the sky and it seemed to beam on the sleeping city with a peculiar benignancy in its mellow rays. Edith looked up at it impatiently. How lovely the world would be, how sweet life would be, she reflected, if we poor humans could rid it of its wholly unnecessary tangles—if only we could all understand. Well, three persons at least should understand one another that night before the moon sank behind those great elms. She walked resolutely back to the house. As she crossed the veranda toward the open French windows, her steps noiseless in her light slippers, she heard the voice of George, borne to her ears with a new note in it that first startled, then held her.

“I tell you Hallie, I will not,” he said, almost irritably. “She's all right. I'm off duty for a few minutes. Let me have peace.” She went forward toward the French window nearest her, meaning to enter the drawing room over its low sill. She heard Hallie's voice, soft, remonstrative, but did not distinguish its words. George's reply, however, carried very well.

“Out in the garden, I suppose,” he said, still with that odd note of irritation in his voice. “I saw her starting down the left path toward the birch copse. Lord,” he added simply, “how good it seems to have a few minutes alone with you, Hallie!”

There was a hammock happily near. Miss Hatfield, suddenly conscious that her knees were not as supporting as usual, sank into it. The voice of Hallie, deep with feeling, replied. “Oh, George,” she cried, pleadingly, “don't spoil everything at the last minute, when you've been so good till now. It will break my heart if you do. And you promised——”

She was almost sobbing. Miss Hatfield was not a stupid woman. At first as she realized the significance of what she heard a deep flush burned her face. Now, however, she smiled and settled herself comfortably in the hammock, shamelessly attentive. George's voice when he spoke again showed the influence of his wife's tone. It was argumentative but tender.

“I don't think we've been quite right in all this, Hallie,” he said quietly. “But I'll keep it up to the end and I'll drop a few hot tears on the station platform as the train moves out. I don't mind admitting to you that they will be tears of joy, for the strain has been a little too much for me.”

Hallie's tone was almost bitter.

“And you pretended such devotion to her. You told me when we first met——”

He interrupted.

“I know. And I felt it. I still feel it. Edith Hatfield is the best friend a man ever had or could have. If you had let us alone she and I would have got along all right. But when you began to dictate how I must treat her and made me swear to think of her first in everything and forced me to write every week for three years and made me ignore you and the boy when she was here and devote myself to her as if you didn't exist——”

Hallie interrupted, now almost fiercely.

“Well,” she said, “you did swear, and you must keep your oath. She is perfectly lovely and your friendship is the most beautiful thing I've ever known. I took an oath, too; I swore that I would preserve that friendship—that I would help it to grow and develop. I wanted it to be like Chateaubriand's for Mme. Recamier, which lasted forty years. When you began to get careless and neglectful, like any other selfish married man, I had to remind you of your duty. Oh, George,” there was infinite pity in her sweet voice, “think of what you are to her. You are all she's got. Think of the horrible loneliness and emptiness of her life if you fail her. Why, you are the custodian of her ideal!”

The custodian of this precious charge grunted restively.

“Not half as horrible as my life's going to be if you keep this up,” he asserted doggedly. “I've been almost afraid you were going to present the baby to her, and I know you're planning to hand me to her as a final souvenir just as the train moves off. Hallie, oh, Hallie”—the tone had lowered on the last words, but there was almost a cry in them—“do you care so little for me yourself——”

The last words came forth muffled in something soft, which had crushed against the man's lips.

Miss Hatfield's sense of humor had rarely failed her. It did not fail her now. For a moment she gave herself up to it, then she made her decision quickly. She rose and went inside, surprising the pretty tableau. She gathered both their heads in her hands and, still holding them together, laid her cheek against the parting in Hallie's soft hair.

“Oh, you children, you blessed children!” she said. “I heard it all!”

As they looked up in a horror which faded as they met her radiant eyes, her laughing face, she added simply:

“I'll tell you how I've been feeling; then you'll understand. And now we're going to begn this friendship all over.”

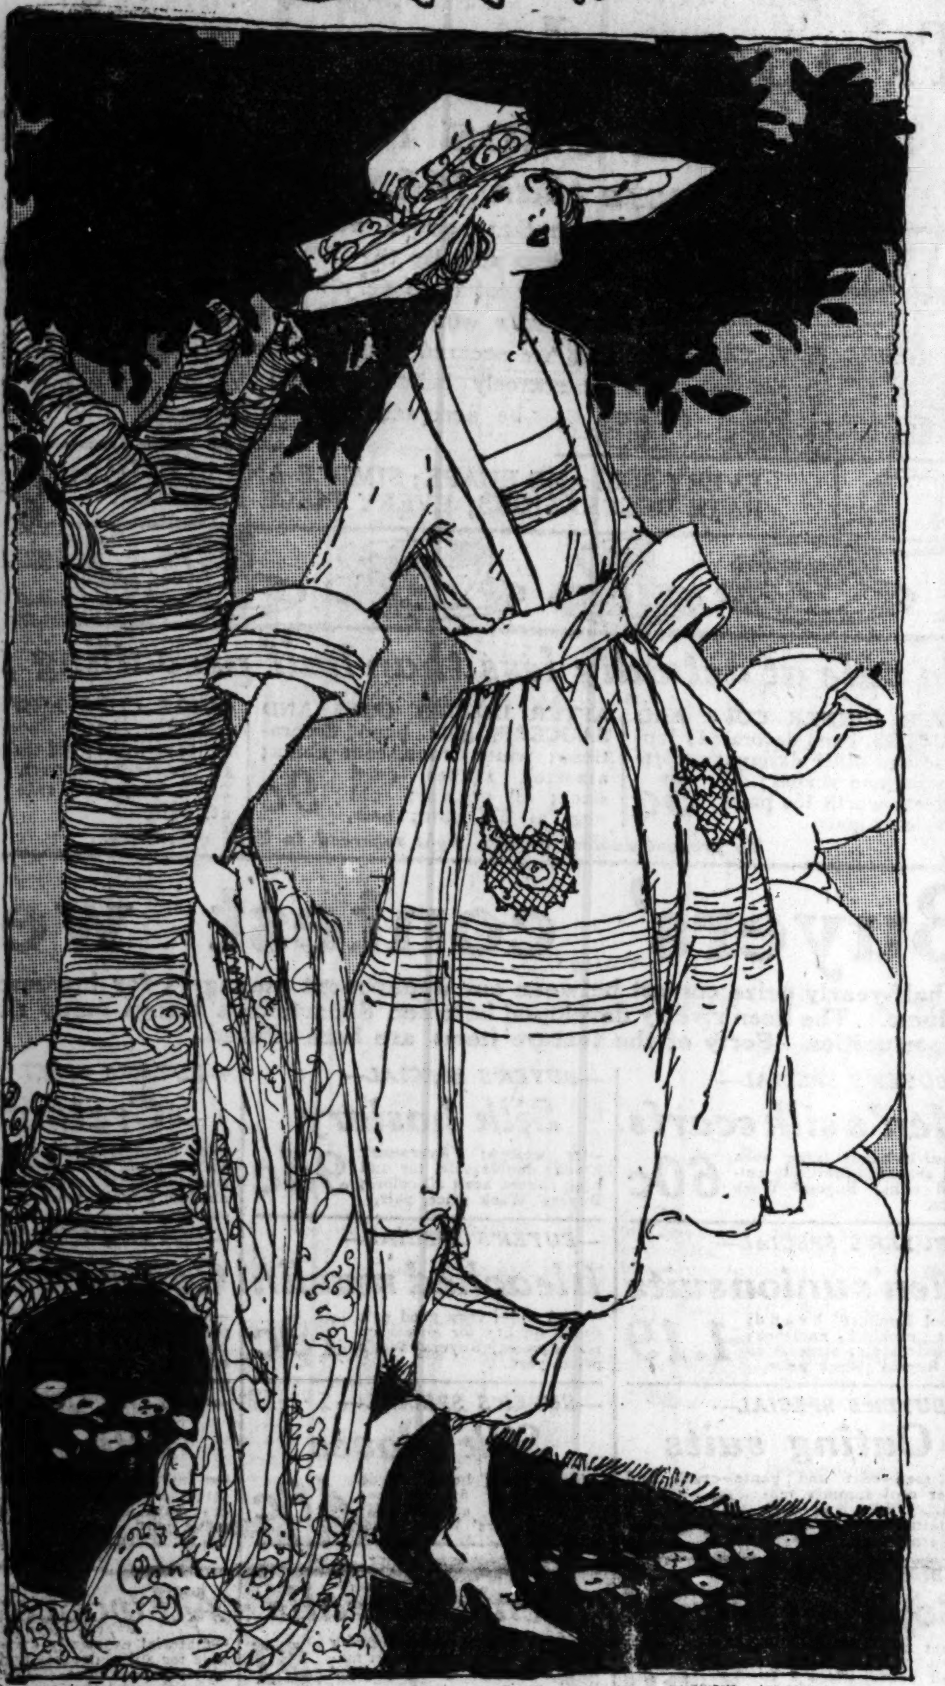
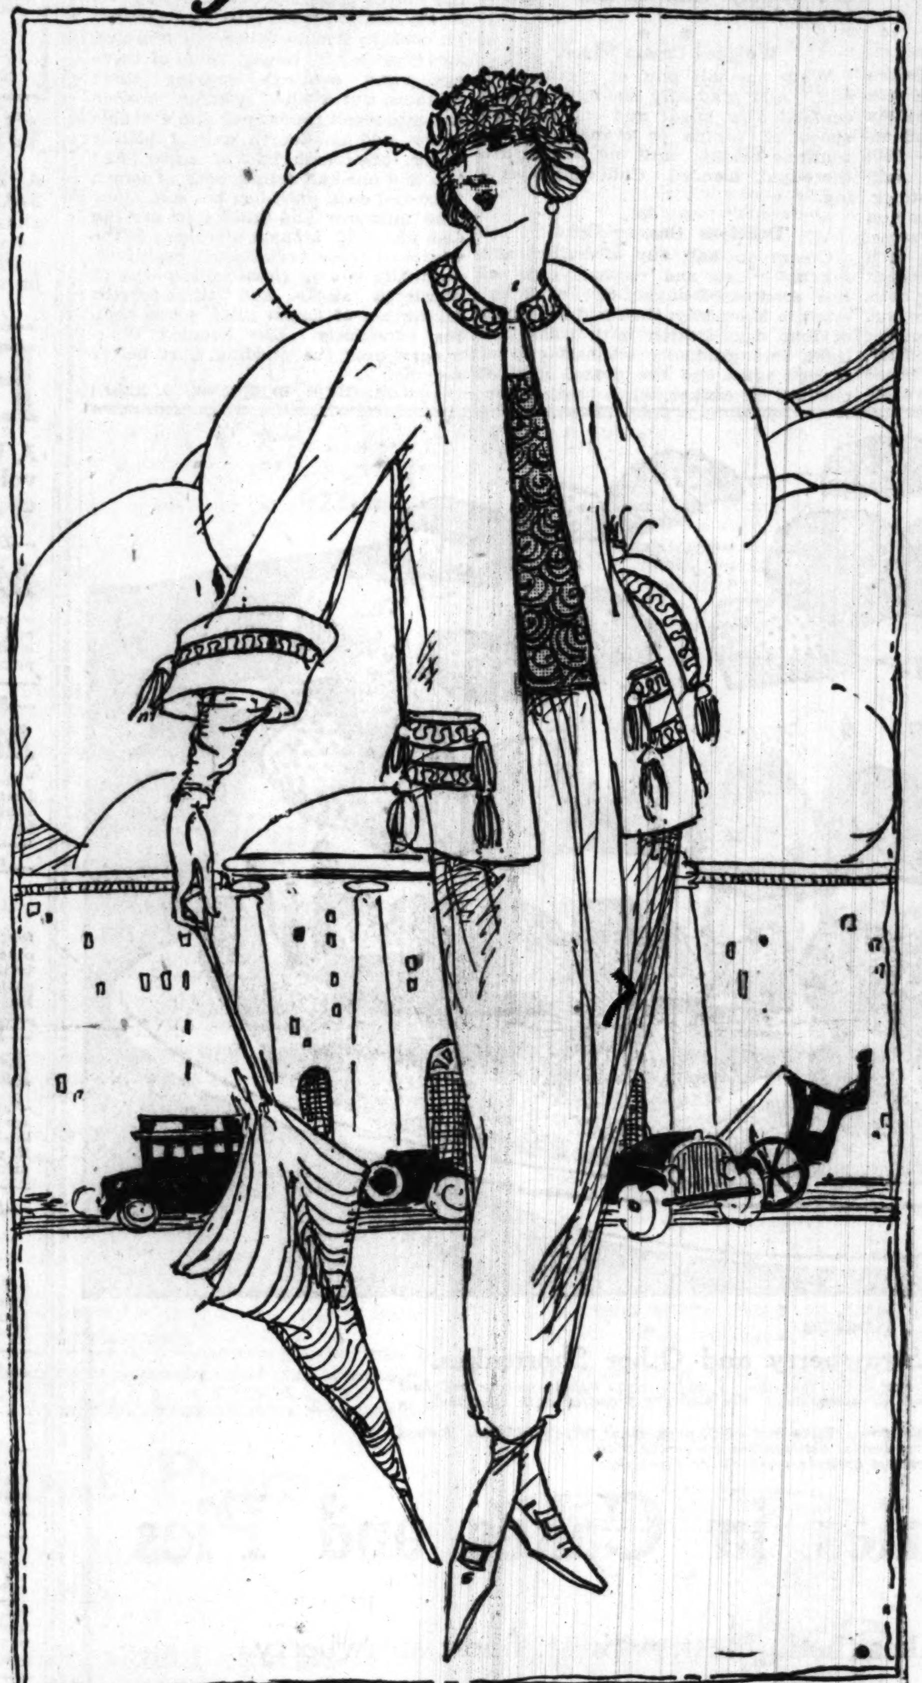
The Vacation Wardrobe

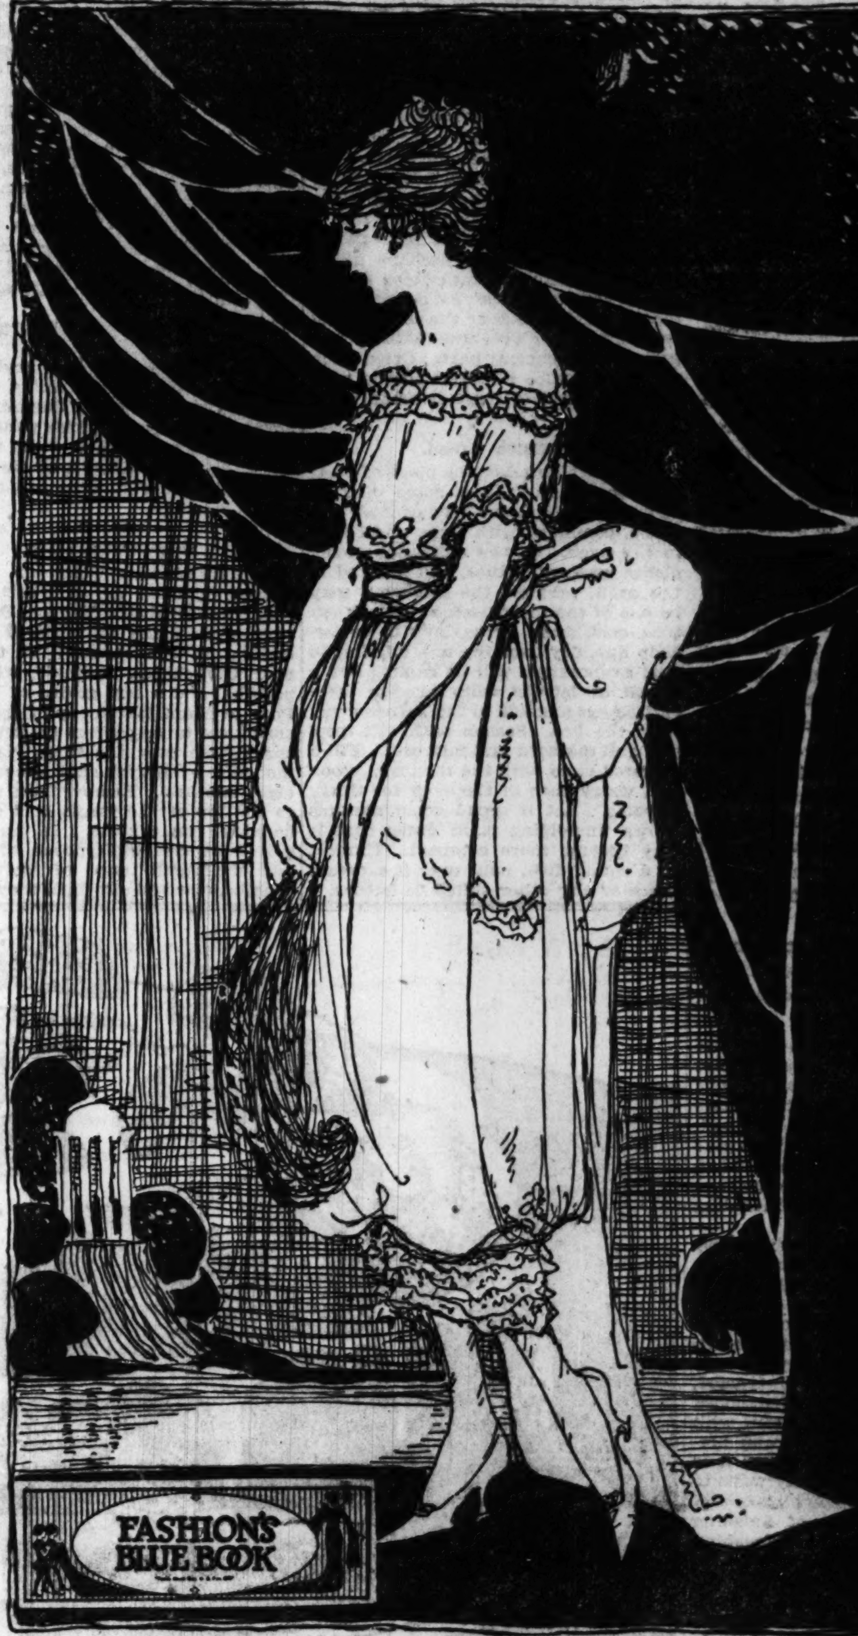
by Corinne Lowe



Irish lace, revived this summer, forms the pockets of this lovely little dress of rose color organdy.



A suit of natural colored pongee looks unnaturally chic when you add to it a gilet of jade green silk embroidered in black braid and a turban of the same fashionable color.



Please train the sash—this is the leading thought of this charming summer evening frock which drapes turquoise chiffon over rose pink satin, adds ruffles of cream lace and finishes with a sash of pink satin developing into a train.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—June has always been unduly flattered by the poets. Often as not, it is cold and rainy. And even when summer decides to park at this section of the calendar—well, after all, who of us has time to go out and watch this propaganda of leafy grots and flying cloud and kine in clovered meadows?

No, we are much more needle deep in June than knee deep in it. Most of us are sewing for the summer wardrobe; and while we are working at that the old June parade of nature passes us by.

We are showing today a variety of clothes designed to cover most every need of the vacation days. First of all, there is the suit in the center of the page. This is of pongee, a fabric which has always been serviceable and is now extremely fashionable. It is trimmed with self-color embroidery and tassels and the vest is of silk in the jade green which is now so much affected. This vest is covered by a scroll design of black braid.

Jade, "oh, saucy 'jade," as the old English writers put it, we see it everywhere nowadays. Jade millinery is particularly good and in jewelry we have the note repeated in various delightful oriental chains, in earrings, and other accessories. With natural pongee this lovely jeweled green is particularly stunning—a reason for the fact that with this suit mentioned is worn, not only vests, but turban, in the oriental shade.

At the lower right of the page is one of those navy taffetas which do for the Casino, the morning or afternoon bridge, or the restaurant supper dance. It is made with the popular surplice waists and short sleeves—and, by the way, these latter are now beginning to take here. What is more important, however, the overskirt is draped in the way which some of us call Camargo.

A word about this new silhouette. There are many forecasts about wide, full skirts for the fall. So far no American designers have dared to perpetrate 'em. True enough, the stage is responsible for some wide, calyx-like skirts of taffeta frocks. But it is not a mode which has been adopted on the lee side of the footlights. And, although some fashion crystal bowl gazers claim to see these voluminous skirts raging in Paris by next August, mose people think we are going to get the most of our fullness at the sides. Front and back will be kept flat—the paper doll effect—and the fullness will come over the hips and at the sides.

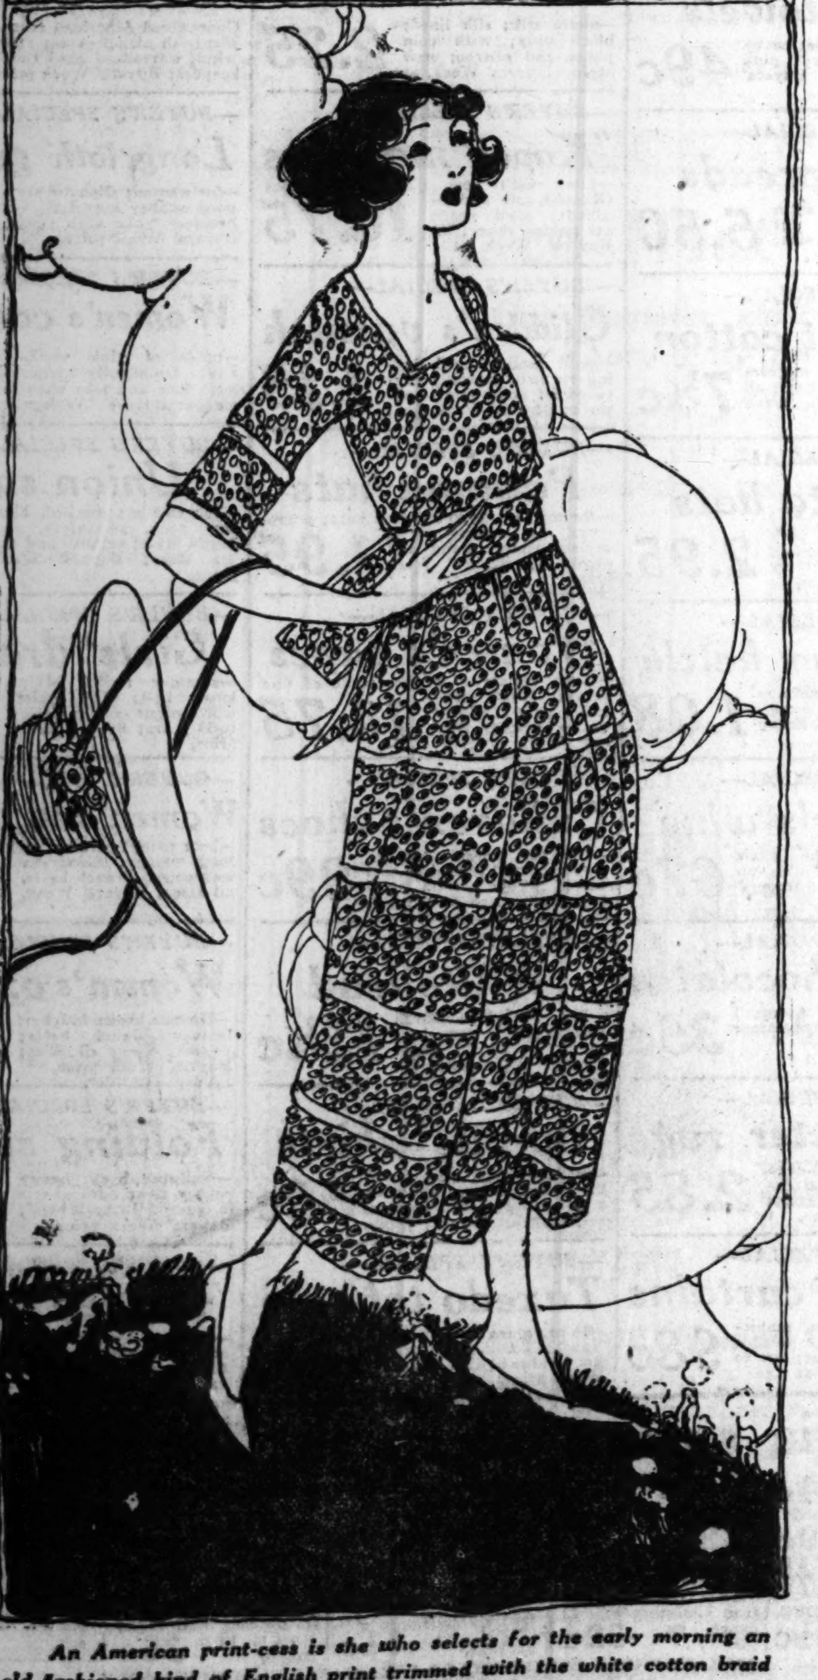
All this is a direct but puny descendant of the farthingale, a Spanish furbelow which came to Paris with Camargo, the Spanish dancer that upset the court of Louis Quinze—or was it another perfectly good Louis? The farthingale of other days was voluminous, a hardy pioneer that built up the hips and wore down the furniture. Today—alas and alack, 'tis only a near-farthingale. Nevertheless, tunics distended at the sides, panniers with side puffings, various loop drapings, ruffles of lace or of other material introduced only on the side widths of the skirt—these show a plain influence of the grotesque farthingale.

This new silhouette obtains mostly, of course, in silks and other formal gowns. When, however, you come to the simple little morning frock found at the lower left of the page, you discover the simple line of other days. While the skirt is quite full, there is no special bouffancy at the sides. This frock is one of the quaint English prints which, together with calicoes and cretonnes, forms the premise for most of the smart morning frocks of this year.

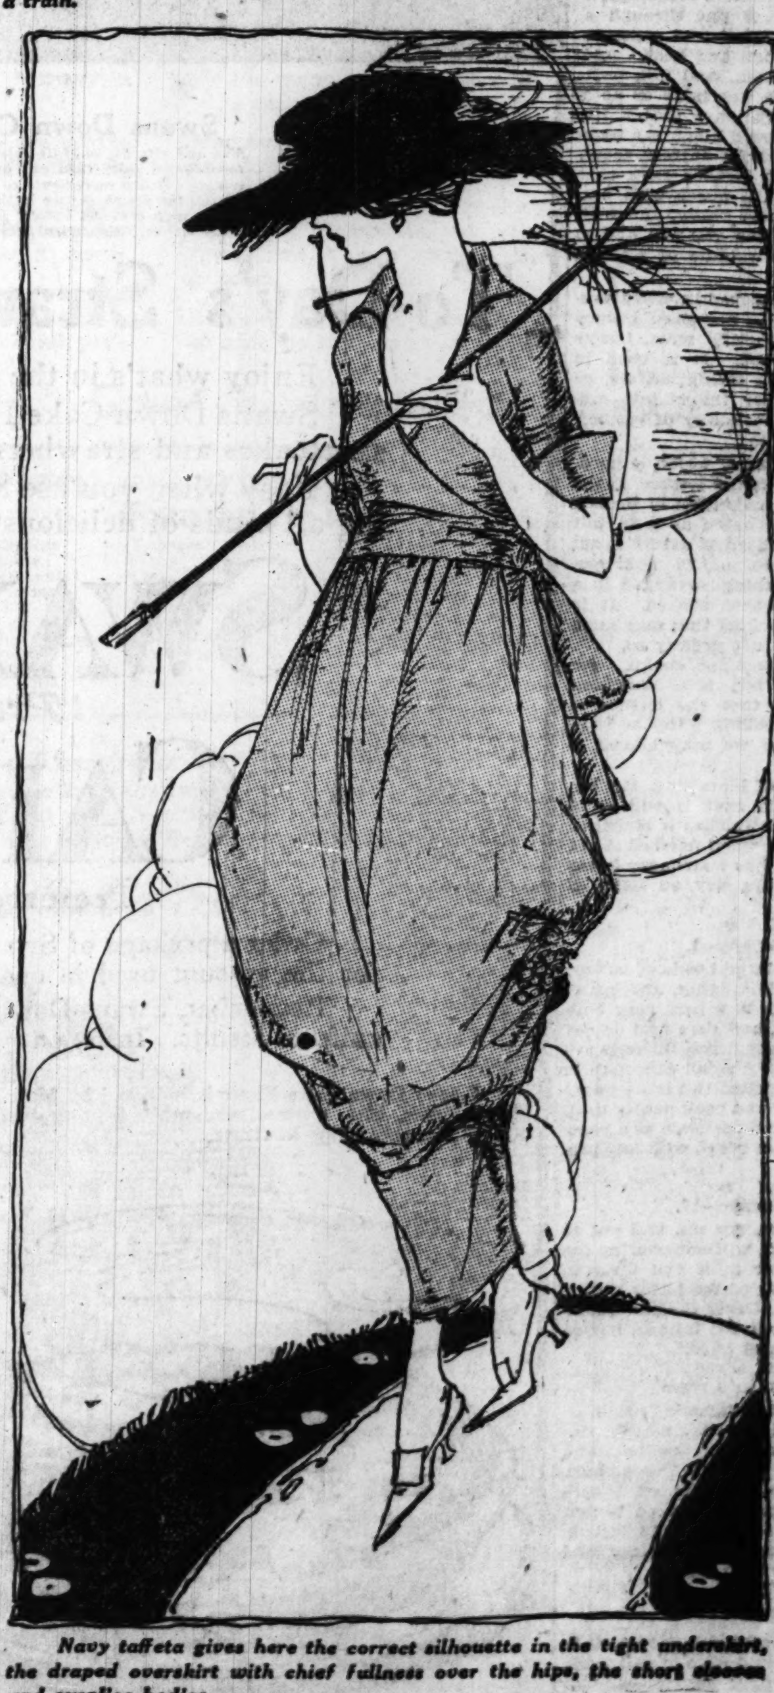
The frock of this kind shown here has a design of rosebuds in natural color and unnatural profusion. It is trimmed with the white cotton braid which we ourselves can remember so well as raging during our childhood.

Hand tuckings are another way of sending out the summer frock. At the upper left, for example, the rose colored organdy frock made for summer morning or afternoon shows groups of such hand tuckings on bodice, sleeves, overskirt, and underskirt. The pockets here are of Irish lace, which has been much revived this spring and is found on some of the loveliest new waists.

Both frocks and blouses of batiste are being selected by many a woman nowadays. Whether dress or blouse, the batiste is frequently embroidered in an allover pattern. The effect is charming, as when, for example, one finds a white batiste embroidered allover in pink rosebuds and trimmed with tiny bands of pink batiste made into a braiding and appliqued to the fabric in embroidery motifs of stripes and circles.



An American print-cess is she who selects for the early morning an old fashioned kind of English print trimmed with the white cotton braid now so much affected.



Navy taffeta gives here the correct silhouette in the tight underskirt, the draped overskirt with chief fullness over the hips, the short sleeves and surplice bodice.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

By Jane Eddington.

COOKED LETTUCE.

IN some countries all green leaves which are considered edible uncooked are called salads or "salad greens." Other edible leaves used in cooking are called pot herbs.

Any of the numerous species of lettuce, while called salads, may also be called vegetables. One French magazine of cookery, five years ago, set out to establish a firm place for lettuce as a vegetable, and for five months gave column after column to the subject. One month alone it gave forty-six recipes for cooking lettuce and in all it printed nearly 150 lettuce recipes, besides the long history of lettuce as a food. I have translated these recipes, for the reason that at this time of year acres of lettuce go to waste. Always the market waste, especially of leaf lettuce, is great.

Just why some people plant lettuce in their gardens is hard to understand. I have known cases where those who planted it would neither eat it as a salad nor cook it. One case I noted last year was in a poor cottage garden, where the children of the house looked frightfully undernourished and especially in need of leaf vegetables.

Lettuce contains the growth principle which children need. It contains iron and other precious minerals. It is, in fact, as a health insurance food, better than half the vegetables we eat. Those people who eat for the purpose of maintaing health over long periods of time can hardly do better than to use lettuce frequently.

A box of leaf lettuce costs usually about 40 cents. When garden lettuce is in its prime a market box often sells for less than 20 cents. By the way, there is no time of the year, after the lettuce has got beyond the seed leaflet stage, when it cannot be cooked. The spindling stock and blossoms of late summer and latest fall make an excellent vegetable. The terminal buds give the vegetable a little more body than do leaves alone. All parts are good to eat, and most wholesome, including the stalk.

There is no vegetable easier to prepare for the cooking than lettuce. One method of preparing it is called "chiffonade," whether the lettuce is used in salad, in a soup, or is stewed or braised. The name simply means that the lettuce is cut up like slaw. A nice head of leaf lettuce may be inspected, washed, cut up on a board, blanched or not, and put to cook in butter, with almost less trouble than we can prepare any other vegetable. After it is cooked there are a good many ways to finish it.

There are more ways of finishing cooked head lettuce than of finishing the leaf. The general directions, which will be found repated endlessly in the recipes for cooking it, read: Blanch, rinse with cold water, drain, and press or dry. After that it is cooked in plain water, in butter, in meat stock, in thick meat gravy, or in some sauce.

Take the French recipe for puree of lettuce. It says: Blanch, braise, stew in butter, drain, and put through a fine strainer. Then put into sauteuse (frying pan of a sort) and heat. Add a little butter, season, and mix well. Dress and use as a vegetable or as a garnish. This recipe says that a lettuce purée can be used alone as a vegetable or as a garnish for entrees, meat, fish, eggs, etc. It further says that you can prepare this purée with butter, with cream, with gravy, and with sauces. For a stuffing you can add to it a fourth of its volume of mashed potato.

Lettuce may be cooked in many vegetarian styles and be almost as savory as with meat, especially when butter and cream are used. It is used in crusts of pastry, in frying batters, or made up with other things into croquettes, and all the family of cromesquies, quenelles, etc.

Plain braised letture, which is hardly different from stewed lettuce, is the favorite general preparation in French usage. It may be eaten as it is, but more commonly a head of lettuce is cut lengthwise in two, or in quarters, stuffed with something, arranged in a saucepan, and further cooked. It is recipes for such cooking that may seem elaborate, but are not greatly so.

We blanch lettuce for cooking for various reasons, but this blanching may be so light that the lettuce is taken out of the boiling water as soon as it is put in, or we may blanch it more.

The advantage of blanching, say lettuce chiffonade, is that it will be a bright green when finished if blanched and an olive green when finished if not blanched. It also has a stronger flavor and is less delicate, say on toast, if not blanched.

Chiffonade—I.

Look over two large heads of lettuce carefully, wash thoroughly, and cut it up like slaw. Put in a pan, pour boiling water over it, and then cool or not—it does not make much difference—drain and put into a small saucepan in which has been melted two tablespoons of butter. Cover and cook gently until tender. Season and use plain as a vegetable or garnish, or serve with any preferred sauce.

Chiffonade—II.

Pick over, wash, cut up, and put to cook in the butter, without pouring the boiling water over it, if you want to get the full benefit of the bitter principle in the lettuce. Cover the pan quickly so as not to wilt the lettuce, but so that it will steam at once.

Lettuce in Cream.

Lettuce cooked chiffonade fashion or in any other and seasoned may be finished deliciously with cream and served on toast. Add to the amount made by two good heads of lettuce stewed in two tablespoons of butter, two tablespoons of cream, and boil up so that the cream is half reduced, and serve on toast or with rice.

Braised Lettuce.

Lettuce blanched and put to cook in a little meat stock, a slice of salt pork, and some seasoning vegetables, covered and cooked over the least bit of fire, is called braised. This is more savory than without meat fat, and it is the way to prepare it when it is to be stuffed, or whether stuffed or not, when it is served with the fine sauces like Hollandaise, Bechamel, Espagnole, etc. Often the directions for serving it are to pour over the cooking liquid. If a little water is put in the frying pan in which ham is fried in butter, this makes an excellent liquid in which to braise lettuce. Add it to blanched lettuce in a saucepan with several tomatoes, one onion, and two or three carrots sliced, with a bit of salt and a pinch of sugar, and cook.

How to Serve Cooked Lettuce.

It is easy to use some of the nice French methods of serving cooked lettuce. Even a head of lettuce may be cut in half lengthwise. Commonly the French would then double this into a compact piece and arrange the pieces around a round dish, perhaps filling the center with green peas, or a mixture of vegetables, or rice cooked some fashion, and then pour the cooking water or a sauce over the lettuce, and perhaps the central part. Often such pieces of lettuce would be served with alternate slices of toast or bread fried.

Lettuce Bread.

A dish which takes the place of meat in France and Italy is some mixture of greens which have been cooked, seasoned, combined with eggs, and baked in the oven. Of the numerous oven dishes made of lettuce, and finished in the oven, perhaps the following may be one of the most useful: Blanch lettuce, cool, drain, press, stew in butter, chop fine, dry over the fire, stirring so that evaporation will be rapid. For a pound of lettuce whip two or three entire eggs and add to the lettuce away from the fire. Season with salt, pepper, and mustard and mix well. Fill a buttered mold with the mixture. Cook in a water bath in the oven for thirty minutes. Let it stand some minutes before unmolding it in order that it may become more compact. Unmold on a round dish, pour over it a cream sauce or any other suited to lettuce.

All measurements are made level in these recipes. A teaspoon of regulation size holds sixty drops. Three level teaspoons equal one level tablespoon. Sixteen level tablespoons equal one cup (one-half pint). The half-pint measuring cup is the standard measuring cup used in modern cookery.

Banana Omelet.

Melt one and one-half tablespoons of butter in an omelet pan. Break four fresh eggs without separating the whites from the yolks into a bowl, beat with a fork until well blended, add one-fourth cup of cream or milk, one-half teaspoon of salt, and a few grains of pepper. Peal and thinly slice one large, firm banana, and saute in two tablespoons of butter five minutes, tossing lightly and constantly. Turn in the egg mixture and lightly stir with a fork two minutes, let stand one-half minute then fold the edges toward the center, let stand another half minute, then turn on a hot serving platter and serve at once.

This omelet is particularly good for luncheon.

I prefer the cast iron frying pan (spider) for use when making omelets; there is less danger of burning these delicate mixtures in these pans, owing to their thickness; they retain the heat and give it off slowly and the omelet can be cooked with little fire, once the pan is heated.

Eggs Swiss Style.

Butter either a glass or earthen shirred egg dish. Line the bottom with thin slices of Swiss cheese. Break six eggs or as many as required and according to the capacity of the dish over the cheese, sprinkle with salt, paprika, and a few grains of nutmeg. Pour over one-fourth cup of cream and sprinkle a tablespoon of grated Parmeson cheese over the top. Place in a moderate oven until eggs are set (about eight minutes). Remove from the oven to the top of the range, and continue cooking one minute. In an omelet pan melt two tablespoons of butter, add one-fourth cup of soft bread crumbs; toss and stir until they are delicately browned. Sprinkle over eggs and serve immediately.

If served for luncheon, hot rye popovers will prove a pleasant accompaniment.

Hot Rye Pop-overs.

Sift together two-thirds cup of rye flour, one-third cup of white flour (preferably pastry), and one-fourth teaspoon of salt; then add gradually while stirring constantly, one cup of milk. Add two eggs beaten until thick and lemon tinted and one teaspoon of olive oil or butter. Beat with a crank egg beater at least three minutes. Turn into well buttered warm iron gem cups and bake in a hot oven from thirty-five to forty minutes. Pop-overs made with rye or entire wheat flour require longer beating than those made of white flour alone. Serve while hot.

Strawberry Cottage Pudding.

Cream one-third cup of butter, add gradually one cup of sugar, stirring constantly. Add one egg beaten until thick and lemon tinted; sift together one and three-fourths cups of flour, one-fourth teaspoon of salt, and three teaspoons of baking powder. Add to the first mixture alternately with one-half cup of milk. Add one teaspoon of orange extract; turn into a buttered and floured shallow cake pan and back twenty-five minutes in hot oven. Serve with strawberries sprinkled with sugar and slightly mashed, and whipped cream sauce.

Whipped Cream Sauce.

Whip one-half pint of cream until stiff. Add gradually one-third cup of confectioners' sugar and one-half teaspoon of vanilla or orange extract; continue beating until ingredients are thoroughly blended. Chill before serving.

Delicious Orange Cake.

Cream one-half cup of butter, add gradually one and one-half cups of fine granulated sugar, stir until the mixture is creamy; then add the yolks of four eggs beaten until thick and light, and gradually one-half cup of orange juice and the grated rind of one-half an orange, while beating constantly. Sift together one and one-fourth cup of pastry flour, one-half cup of cornstarch, four teaspoons of baking powder, and one-eighth teaspoon of salt. Then cut and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs. Turn into two buttered and floured square layer cake pans, measuring 8½ inches square and 1½ inches deep, and bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven. Spread between layers, top, and sides with orange frosting and sprinkle thickly with chopped pecan nut meats.

Orange Frosting.

Mix two cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water in a saucepan; bring to the boiling point, cover and let boil one and one-half minutes (this prevents the sugar from crystalizing on the sides of the pan). Remove cover and continue boiling until the sirup spins a thread when dropped from the tip of a small wooden spoon, or to 239 degrees Fahrenheit on the sugar thermometer. Then pour gradually and in a fine stream, into the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. While beating constantly add one-fourth teaspoon of tartaric acid and one teaspoon of orange extract. Continue beating until of the right consistency to spread.

Fig Custard.

Scald one quart of milk in a double boiler. Mix two tablespoons of cornstarch, three-fourths cup of sugar, and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Pour on slowly scalded milk, stirring constantly; cook in double boiler ten minutes. Add the slightly beaten yolks of three eggs and continue cooking three minutes. Cut one-half pound of washed figs into small pieces, put into a double boiler, add one-fourth cup of boiling water, one-fourth cup of sugar, and one and one-half tablespoons of lemon juice and cook until figs are soft. Combine mixtures and turn into serving dish and chill. Make a meringue of the whites of three eggs beaten until stiff, gradually adding three tablespoons of powdered sugar and three-fourths tablespoon of lemon juice, while beating constantly. Pile heaping tablespoons over the pudding, just before serving.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Questions on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

"PUTTING ON AIRS."

FEW things are more offensive and unpleasant than an air of superiority to our fellow men, an attitude which some call snobbish and others designate as highbrow. Many of those who have it are unconscious of it, while some assume it thinking, O, so mistakenly, that it is distinguished.

The women who are really "grandes dames" never adopt a patronizing manner towards any one. They may have a conspicuous position in the social world, but it could not be guessed from any tendency to condescension on their part. They are as courteous towards those who serve them in any capacity as towards their friends and acquaintances.

This attitude is best summed up in the French motto, "Noblesse oblige," which, when analyzed, means the higher the rank the more one is in honor bound to be gracious, considerate, and unselfish to all.

MRS. J. C.: The books on etiquette which I recommended may be obtained through any reliable dealer.

F. S.: You are correct in thinking that a social note or a letter of introduction given to some one to deliver should not be sealed.

* *

I. G. S.: It is not proper for a young girl to attend unchaperoned a man's commencement festivities which are of more than one day's duration. Although no real harm should ensue, in the "eyes of the world" she would have placed both herself and him in an unenviable position.

* *

MRS. L. L.: It is the merest courtesy on a man's part to rise from the pew where he is sitting when his wife comes into church a few minutes late, and to step into the aisle, allowing her to enter the pew and take her seat.

* *

MRS. F. W.: Most people prefer a cold bouillon to a hot cream soup on warm days. At a small, informal luncheon soup is not really necessary at all. Why not have some kind of fruit cocktail instead?

* *

D. J.: The correct place for a stamp is right side up in the upper right hand corner. I believe that there are certain sentimental meanings attached by some people to the different ways in which a stamp may be put on a letter, but I should advise you to keep to the accepted and conventional position.

* *

E. McM.: A spoon should never be left in a cup or glass, but should be taken out and placed on the saucer or plate provided for that purpose. It is distressing to a well bred man or woman to see any one drink from a glass with the spoon still in it, and secured against the edge by means of the index finger.

* *

S. A. A.: Wedding announcements, with the "at home" cards inclosed, are sent out on the first mail after the ceremony. At an afternoon wedding the bridegroom wears a morning coat, gray striped trousers, a white shirt, gray waistcoat, tie, socks, and gloves of the same hue, and patent leather shoes. If the bride's father is not living, and she has no near male relatives, it is permissible for her mother to give her away.

* *

MRS. K.: When you have been visiting a friend and several people have entertained for you, it is customary either to write each one a note expressing your appreciation of the kindness shown, or send what are known as your "p. p. c.'s" These are your calling cards with p. p. c. written in the lower left hand corner. The letters stand for "pour prendre congé," meaning "to take leave." This is a French courtesy, which we have adopted.

* *

A. W. G.: When a woman meets a man whom she knows, it is her place to bow first. This follows from the fact that it is her privilege to indicate whether or not she cares to recognize the acquaintance.

* *

R. E. B.: For an evening house wedding, I am sorry to have to say that Dame Fashion—or would Sir Fashion seem more appropriate here?—decrees that evening clothes must be worn. A dinner coat cannot be substituted for its more formal and less convenient brother.

STRANGE INCIDENTS AT WEDDINGS

Tell us about the strangest wedding you have attended—and the funniest. There's scarcely a wedding but has some humorous details. Tell your experience and that of friends. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on strange and humorous happenings at ceremonies. Manuscripts cannot be returned. Write on one side of the page. Address Strange Weddings Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

O, Me! O, My!

A few years ago I attended the wedding of a friend. The bride to be had taught our village school for many years and was about 35. The bridegroom was a farmer who resided about six miles east of the village. He was 40 years of age and noted because of his absent mindedness.

All agreed that the bride would be lucky if Jim didn't forget to come to his own wedding. However, contrary to all expectations Jim appeared on his wedding day and the ceremony was performed at the appointed time. Congratulations followed and then a luncheon was served.

Then the bride went to her room to change her wedding dress for her nifty suit of gray and the bridegroom went to the barn to get his horse and buggy, saying he would return in a few minutes and take his bride home with him.

Some little time elapsed, then the bride came downstairs carrying her suitcase. The guests had all remained, intending to give the happy pair a good send off of rice, old shoes, etc. Finally a couple of the guests went to the barn to see what was detaining the bridegroom. To their consternation they found the horse and buggy gone.

When the bride was told the news she didn't get the least bit fussed, but calmly sat down in a comfortable chair to await the return of her newly acquired husband.

After a time the telephone rang and a man's voice full of suppressed mirth said: "Tell that bride to cheer up. I've sent Jim back after her."

Jim had deliberately started for home without his bride. He had gotten about two miles out into the country when he met a friend, who hollered, "Where's your wife?" Whereupon Jim threw both hands up in the air and yelled, "O me! O my! I've forgotten my wife!" Then he turned round and drove furiously back for his wife. O. W. H.

Interviewing the Minister.

My brother was married young and felt embarrassed. He went to interview the minister relative to the ceremony, and after much stammering and many blushes, managed this surprising request: "Will you come up to the house and marry me and another girl?"—MRS. A. C. T.

On the Wedding Journey.

They were both popular, and when they were married at her father's country home many friends were present—and, present also, but more in the background, was an abundance of rice and old shoes. The thoughtful bridegroom had left his fast little two seat roadster at the side door, however, and sometime between the cutting of the wedding cake and the time for goodbyes we missed them. Nothing would do but that some of us try to catch them, so half a dozen piled into an automobile. Ten minutes later we pulled up beside their car, in which the brand new "missus" sat nervously watching an equally new hubby, on his knees in the dust, patching a blowout! J. P. P.

Automatically Speaking.

The minister had asked all the necessary questions in the first part of the ceremony, and now came to the final one. Turning to the audience he asked:

"Does any one offer any reason why this couple should not wed?"

To his surprise and that of all listeners the reply came from the bridegroom:

"I do." For that answer had been rehearsed so often in his mind that it was automatic. E. R.

In Case of Fire.

The minister's doorbell rang violently shortly after midnight and on arising he found a couple at the door who desired to be married that night. They were strangers in the city and were to leave the next morning.

The minister's wife was one witness, and, being unable to locate any one else as the other, the minister at last decided to make use of one of the city firemen, as the engine house was nearby.

As the man could not leave his post at the alarm desk, the wedding party repaired to the fire station, where the wedding ceremony was performed. F. T.

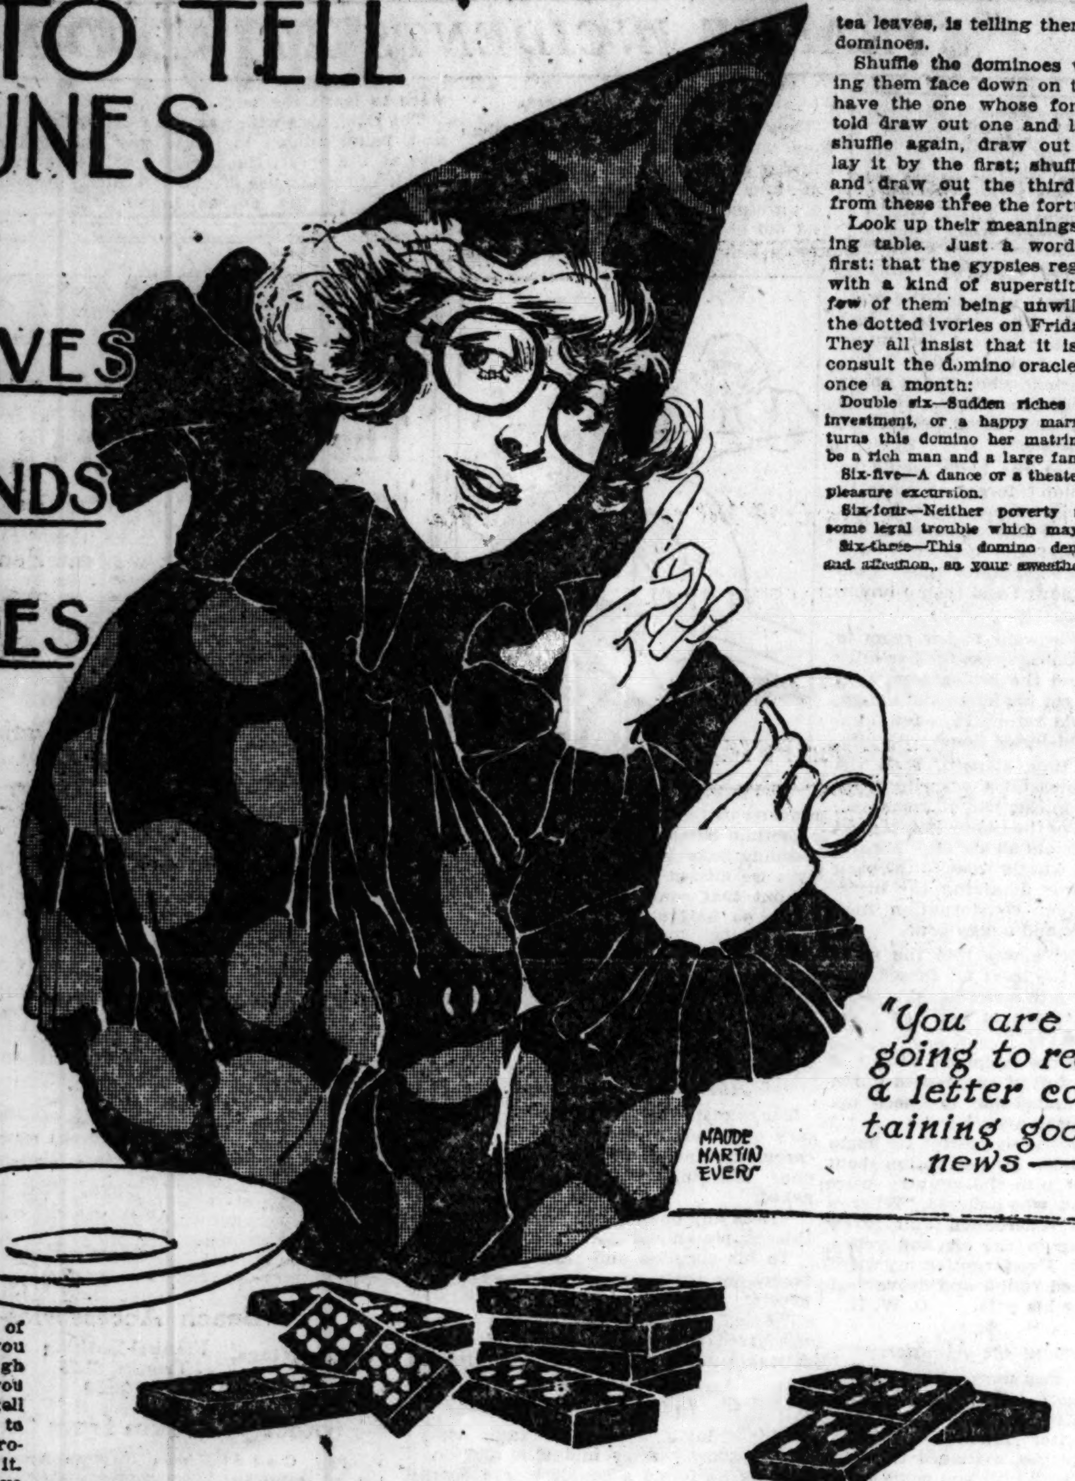
HOW TO TELL FORTUNES

with TEA LEAVES COFFEE GROUNDS and DOMINOES

by/ Doris Blake



"You are going to receive a letter containing good news—"
MAUDE MARTIN EVERS

NOW that we're on the subject of fortune telling, how would you like to try future gazing through your tea cups? As I warned you last week, when I told you how to tell fortunes by cards, I don't want you to take this matter as coming from a professional or one with a firm belief in it. It is because everybody loves to have his or her fortune told, whether it be by tea leaves, coffee grounds, cards, or crystal gazing, and because it is a means of making one's self a more entertaining hostess or a more popular guest, I offer you the following directions:

Pour the grounds of tea or coffee into a white cup, shake them well about in it, so that their particles may cover the whole surface of the cup. Then turn it upside down on a saucer and turn the cup completely around three times, to drain the liquid and superfluous grounds away.

If you are telling the fortunes, let the one who is consulting you turn and drain her own cup. Then you take it out of her hands and fix in your mind her position in life and her associations, so as to make your statements fit.

A good imagination is going to make the successful soothsayer with the tea cup in her hand. Don't expect to find exact forms as explained below. Take your cue from a faint resemblance to the figure, if that's all you have to go by:

Straight lines foretell peace, tranquillity, and long life.

Long, wavy lines denote vexations and losses.

Square figures foretell happiness and security.

Oblong figures, family discord.

Curved or twisted figures are sure signs of annoyance.

Circles predict money.

A crown signifies honor.

A triangle denotes an unexpected journey.

The anchor, success in business, at the bottom of the cup; or success in love, at the top.

The cross predicts adversity.

The heart signifies pleasure; if two are together, or one, with a ring near it, marriage.

Dots, like dust, mean money.

The ring predicts marriage, but if found at the bottom of the cup, separation.

The sun is a sign of the greatest good luck.

The moon (or crescent) denotes high honors, and if at the bottom of the cup good fortune by land and water.

The rod shows differences with relations about legacies.

Flowers are signs of peaceful and joyous life.

Birds are good omens; denote kind thoughts.

Fish, good news from across the water, or good luck on the water.

Dog, a good and faithful friend.

Other animals, troubles and difficulties.

Human figures are good signs; denote marriage.

Mountain, if by itself, favor of people of high position; if in the midst of other grounds, powerful enemies.

A snake denotes an enemy; if at the top of the cup, easily overcome.

The letter (or square block) denotes good news; if surrounded by dots, contains money; if accompanied by a heart, an acceptance; but if covered with a thick cloud of dregs, a refusal.

The coffin (quite by itself) denotes long life; at the top, surrounded by dots, a legacy from a relative; at the bottom, the relationship will not be close.

A star denotes happiness and success; if surrounded by dots, a great fortune.

The lily predicts a handsome husband or a beautiful wife, if found at the top of the cup; but if at the bottom, ugly and disagreeable.

The tree points to lasting good health; several trees, show your wishes will come true; if surrounded by dots, you will make your fortune where you are.

If there is an appearance of heavy clouds in the cup, your hopes will be disappointed; if light, you may expect good results. If surrounded by dots, clouds bring success in all you undertake.

The rider denotes good news from abroad, or a good situation in a foreign country.

The clover leaf is lucky; if found all by itself, it predicts serene and undisturbed happiness; if surrounded by clouds, it shows the presence of disagreeable things to mar the happiness.

Another means of fortune telling, easier to master than either cards or tea leaves, is telling them by means of dominoes.

Shuffle the dominoes well after laying them face down on the table; then have the one whose fortune is being told draw out one and lay it face up; shuffle again, draw out another, and lay it by the first; shuffle once more, and draw out the third domino; and from these three the fortune is told.

Look up their meanings in the following table. Just a word of warning, first: that the gypsies regard dominoes with a kind of superstitious dread, a few of them being unwilling to touch the dotted ivories on Friday or Monday. They all insist that it is bad luck to consult the domino oracle oftener than once a month:

Double six—Sudden riches by speculation, investment, or a happy marriage; if a girl turns this domino her matrimonial fate will be a rich man and a large family.

Six-five—A dance or a theater party or some pleasure excursion.

Six-four—Neither poverty nor riches and some legal trouble which may be avoided.

Six-three—This domino denotes constancy and affection, as your sweetheart will marry you and you will have much happiness.

Six-two—A man turning this domino will get a good, practical, and economical wife and a girl will meet equal good fortune in a thrifty and industrious husband.

Six-one—Two marriages, the second happier than the first.

Six-blank—The death of some one in whom you are interested, perhaps a friend, relative, or an acquaintance. Or it may mean the death of a horse, a dog, or some other animal.

Double five—A change that will bring great success to you.

Five-four—A girl will marry a poor man, have a large family, and then be a widow. For a man it means a flighty, irresponsible wife.

Five-three—You'll never be poor.

Five-two—Unhappy marriage.

Five-one—A social gathering, where you will become entangled with some creature of the opposite sex.

Five blank—If a man turns it, he will be a gambler or a broker of doubtful character, if he has brains enough; if not, he will be a swindler. To a girl this domino means misfortune.

Double four—Invitation to a wedding soon.

Four-three—A complete change in your circumstances—lucky for some, unlucky for others. If you are rich you will be poor and if you are poor you will be rich.

Four-two—Danger from dishonest, unscrupulous persons.

Four-one—You will receive a dunning letter.

Four-blank—Foretells quarrels and separations, resulting in old maids and old bachelors.

Double-three—Great riches, not by marriage nor carrying great happiness with it.

Three-two—You are going to collect some old debt you never expected to be able to.

Three-one—Danger of loss of character to a girl; to a man, loss of money through a dishonorable woman.

Three-blank—Your wife will be shrewish, unprincipled, and end by disgracing you. To a girl it means a weak livered, spineless husband.

Double two—A jealous husband or wife awaits you.

Two-one—For a time you will be a gay rich widow, but finally will settle down. To a man, it predicts a gay Lothario, a philander.

Two-blank—Bad luck—loss of money or valuable article.

Double-one—Excellent luck in marriage.

One-blank—Flowers or checks unexpectedly received.

Double-blank—Worst sign of all. Bitter disappointment over the one thing that means the most to you.

Too High to Lend.

Our neighbor, who has a great habit of borrowing, came over one afternoon to borrow some baking powder and I told her I had none. In the course of conversation she mentioned the high price of baking powders, when my brother spoke up: "Look on the grocery bill and see how much they charged me for the can I got this morning." F. Described in Detail.

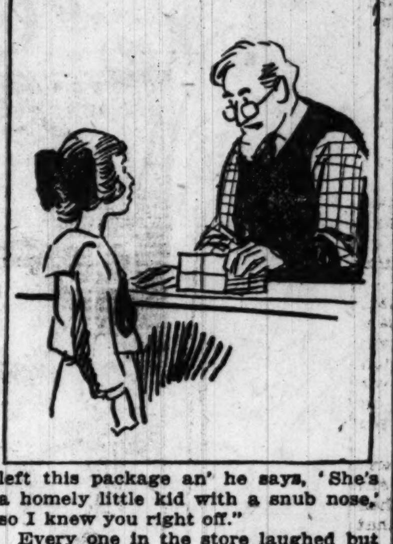
I think mine was when I was 13 years old. My father telephoned that he had left a package for me at the hardware store two blocks away and that I should call for it, that he had described me to the manager and that I would have no trouble getting it.

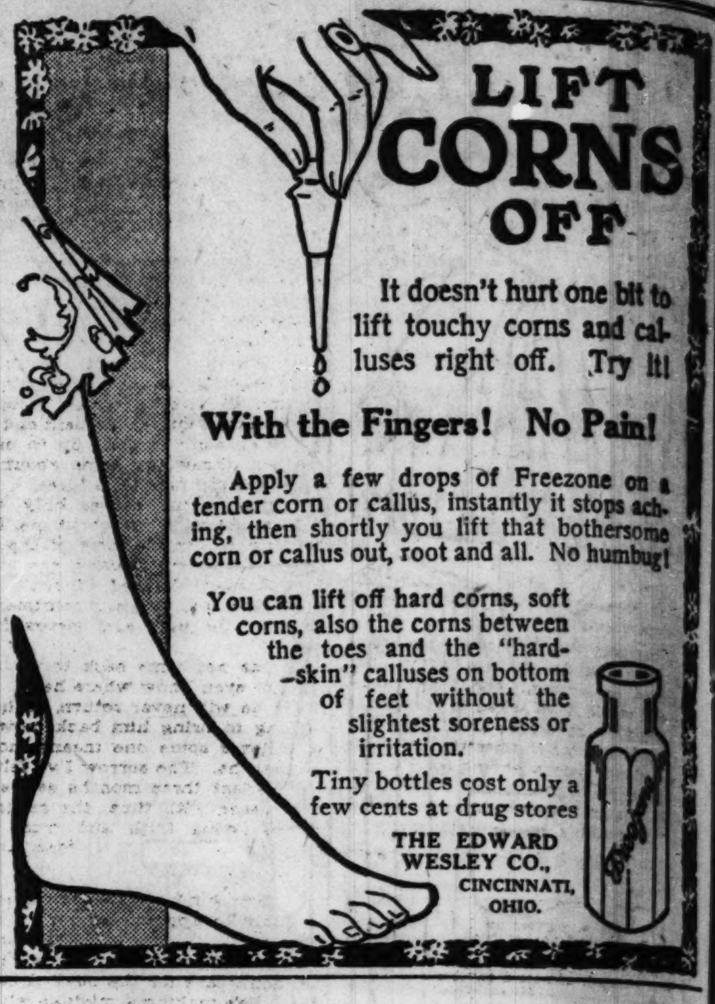
I went to the store and a little old man came and looked at me over his glasses and said decidedly: "Well, you're the one for that package, all right, all right."

He was so decided that I became curious and asked: "How did you know me so well?"



He said: "Well, little lady, your dad left this package an' he says, 'She's a homely little kid with a snub nose,' so I knew you right off."

Every one in the store laughed but me. E. M. B.



LIFT CORNS OFF

It doesn't hurt one bit to lift touchy corns and calluses right off. Try it!

With the Fingers! No Pain!

Apply a few drops of Freezone on a tender corn or callus, instantly it stops aching, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus out, root and all. No humbug!

You can lift off hard corns, soft corns, also the corns between the toes and the "hard-skin" calluses on bottom of feet without the slightest soreness or irritation.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

"The Tribune" will pay $5 for every letter published on your kissing experience. Tell what promiscuous kissing cost you, or if you regretted after you met the one man that you had not been able to give him the first kiss; or, if your experiences were different, tell that. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

FATE PLAYS MEAN TRICK.

BECAUSE it may be of help to some one who might read it, I shall relate a personal experience, from which I am still suffering.

In the town where I have always lived, there has been a great deal of promiscuous kissing. I, however, instinctively disliked the practice, and my wishes in regard to the matter finally became respected and accepted good-naturedly.

When war was declared I had come to care a great deal for one of my companions, an orphan, who I felt loved me and would have asked to marry me if he had not been poor and if war had not made matters so unsettled. On his last furlough before leaving for France, out of appreciation of my natural reserve, he contented himself with warmly shaking hands with me.

During the months the boys were overseas I was, of course, anxious to do what I could for them. I impartially knitted for them, sent them what I could, and wrote them frequent, friendly letters.

This spring our boys received their discharges. All of the town was out in gala array to welcome them; happy, excited, and proud as only a town can be of its returning heroes. As the soldiers stepped from the train the girls rushed up to them and welcomed any and all with kisses and embraces. Carried away with excitement and emotion, I suddenly rushed up to one of the men, threw my arms about him, and raised my face for a kiss.

I came to my senses only when, with the friend's arm about me, I saw standing on the platform of the train which was slowly leaving the station the lieutenant I loved. I shall never forget the look of disappointment on his face, the hurt and sorrow in his eyes.

He has not come back to my town. I do not even know where he is. I am afraid he will never return, as he has nothing to bring him back, now that he believes some one means more to me than he. The sorrow I've felt during the last three months seems only to increase with time, the realization of the loving faith and trust I destroyed.

MARGARET.

Cute Remark Hits His Heart.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been reading your answers and think a great deal of them. I'm going to ask you to answer one of my questions, which might be a little off from the others.

"I'm a boy, 16 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, blue eyes, and an Irishman's nose, which I am proud of; light skin and light hair. I'm working in a small office. There are three girls employed here, and the ages of these girls are about 25 years. They are good looking compared to the majority and I like them to a certain extent, but when they begin teasing me like this, 'Pretty boy; hasn't he nice hair,' etc., I don't care if they said it all day and all night if I did not blush.

"I'm about the easiest one to make blush. The first part of me to blush is my ears, then my face gets as hot as though I had been running in the hottest day in summer. I suppose I have too much blood, and when I hear those cute remarks it hits my heart and the blood leaves my heart and rushes to my face. It comes up in about three seconds. Maybe my heart isn't used to such exclamations, which I am almost positive it isn't.

"I like girls if they would not bring up such silly [as I call it] sentences. Maybe you don't. But if it defected upon you as it did on me I'm sure you would call it the same as I do.

"Please give me your advice on this proposition. Do it at your earliest convenience, for I would like to show them I would not blush when they say what I have said to you in the above.

With that Irishman's nose which you are so proud of you ought to be able to detect that the girls are having fun at your expense. Of course, these girls think you are just a youngster, which you really are. I am sorry that the tang of the old sod hasn't touched you with more of the native ability to laugh good humoredly over a situation like that. Learn to do it, L. G. L., and your blushing troubles will be over.

A Girl in Every Port.

"To: Miss Doris Blake.

"From: An ex-gob or jack.

"Subject: Wimin.

"It is respectfully requested that you give me the following information, because you have helped a number of readers:

"1. I have a girl in Boston that I love and she is worth a great deal of money.

"2. I have another that is an actress in N. Y. City and I love her also.

"3. While in the Asiatic fleet I met a girl at Seattle, the only one in the family, and her father has a large farm.

"4. I met a girl in Ponta Del Gata while on leave and she showed me a good time. Her mother owns a large hotel and I love her more than all the others.

"Every one has accepted my proposal.

"Now the question is which one shall I marry? JERRY."

If it's a matter of such small consequence to you, Jerry, why not write their names on cards and toss them up in a hat and choose the future Mrs. Jerry thusly. My, you must be quite a killer with the daughters of the rich. Well, if one of them gets you I guess you'll pay good and plenty for the soft berth you plan to slip into. My private opinion is, Jerry, "ex-gob," you would better keep on sailing the less troubled waters of the sea!

She Won't Go Anywhere.

"Dear Miss Blake: I read your column almost every day, and perhaps you could advise me about this question: There is a girl friend of mine whom I meet quite often, and I think even affectionately. She seems to enjoy my presence, but when I ask her to accompany me to a theater or other place of amusement she refuses, giving some excuse or other. I would like to better our friendship, and it came to my mind that perhaps she does not like my personal appearance; but such is not the case, as I dress better than the average young man. The girl is one year my junior. F. C."

I am sorry, F. C., that I cannot help you to a conclusion of your trouble. It would seem that the girl is not interested. Perhaps, however, if you pursue her with kindness and respectful attention you may succeed in winning her eventually. However, don't urge your company upon her too strongly without some encouragement from her.

Cares Little for Him.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 years of age. For the last months I have been keeping company with a young man two years my junior. He is very considerate and has showered me with attentions when I go out with him with the consent of my parents. I went to school with him in the grades. He seems to pay all his attentions to me, but I care little for him. What would you advise me to do? Your kindness in answering will certainly be appreciated very much.

"POLLYANN."

Now, Pollyann, are you sure that you don't care for the boy? I can see where he's making a mistake with you by being so attentive and considerate. You're probably one of the young maidens who needs every now and then, if you excuse the slang, "to be treated rough." However, if you really and truly don't care for his further attentions and you want to be square with him, you must begin at once to decline his invitations. You can do this gradually and in the meantime accept invitations from other young men, too.

Give Him a Gentle Hint.

"Dear Miss Blake: If a a girl of 16 should be sitting on the porch with a young man of the same age, would it be the girl's place to say that it is time for her to go in the house, or should she wait until the young man mentions leaving? C. R. G."

If the hour is getting late, the girl should say, in just as tactfully nice a way as she can, that it is time for him to be leaving, unless he wants to bring down upon his head parental disapproval. No sensible young man ever takes exception to a hint of this kind.

Considered to Be Engaged.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have come to you for advice. I am 19 years old and have gone with a fellow of 21 for two years. Now, his younger brother has been in the army, and while home on a furlough came to visit me with his brother, my sweetheart. My dear Miss Blake, do you think he has done right by introducing me to his brother only as his friend? His brother, ignorant of the fact that I am his brother's girl, pays quite a bit of attention to me, which my friend does not like, and he has ceased coming to see me. Who is at fault in this? Is it my place to apologize, or his? We are considered to be engaged. Do you think he will come back again? I know he loves me. Answer soon, please. BROWN EYES."

How unreasonable, Brown Eyes! What could the boy introduce you as but as a friend? If you were engaged, it would be different than "considered to be engaged." You could have directed the brother's attention away from you and save trouble yourself. Why blame it on the boy? You would better make it your business to see the older boy and have a talk with him and get matters straightened out before any further complications set in.

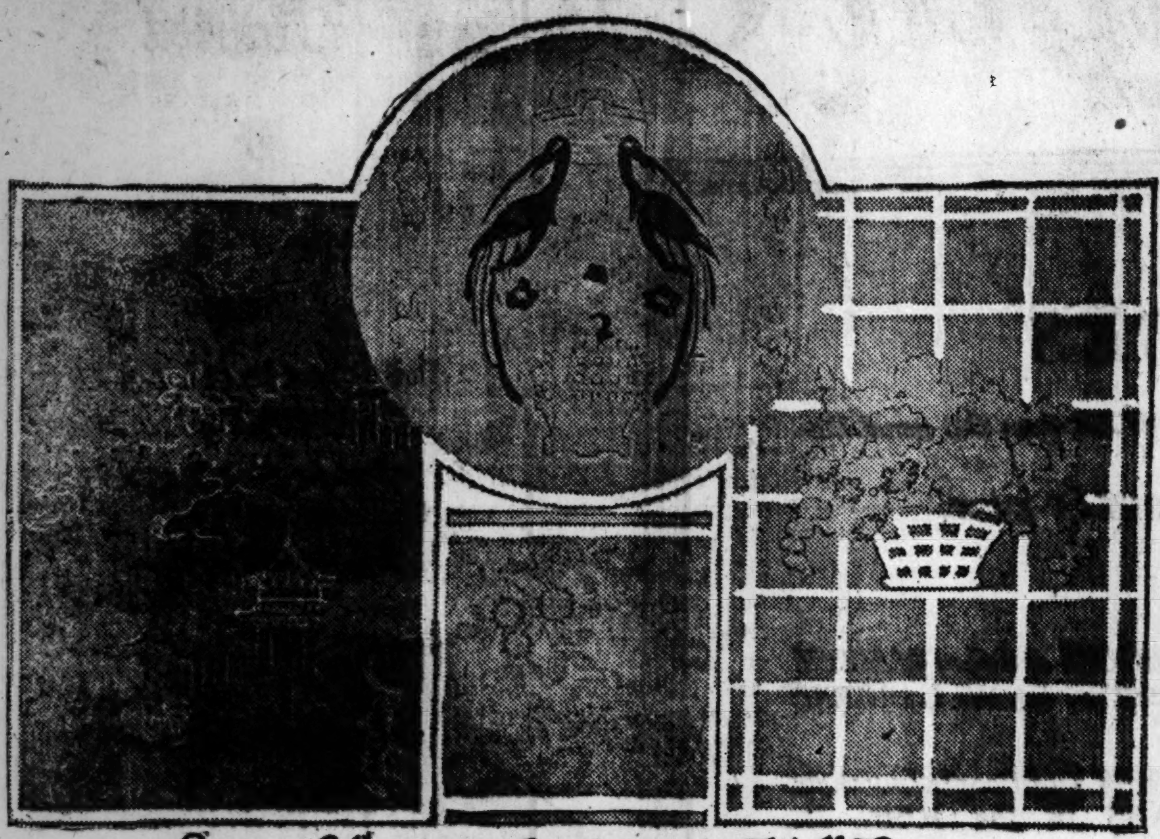
THE HOME HARMONIOUS. - - By Anita de Campi



Some of the new designs in Wall Paper

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped addressed envelope for personal reply.

NEW PAPERS ATTRACTIVE.

THIS is the most propitious time of all the year for the home owner to have her house repapered. The mad rush of the transient flat dweller's papering time is over, the decorators still have their men and apparatus in good working order, and there is a possibility of making a leisurely selection in the wall paper stores and departments. Decorators, too, are able to make especially attractive reductions in the prices of contracts, a consideration worth noting by the votaries of "special sales."

Reproductions of old scenic papers are on the market now at prices within reason. Certain types of furniture almost demand corresponding wall hangings. A room done in colonial mahogany is properly papered, if a bedroom, in colonial stripe, or, if a sitting room or dining room, in scenic paper. A room so furnished set against a "futurist" paper would look about as foolish as father all dressed up in mother's clothes.

That is not to say that the "futurist" and some other new patterns are impossible. On the contrary, some of them are inexpressibly lovely. There is an element of simplicity about them that makes them quite the appropriate thing for "our girl's" room.

A new pattern shows an alternately wide and narrow stripe of pale mustard color on a white ground. The wide stripe is ornamented with a modern medallion shaped motif, picturing a pair of pale blue birds of paradise, facing each other over a gray basket of faded mauve, pea green, and blue flowers. The motif is carried out in flat stencil style. The narrow stripe is dotted with flowers all the way down.

In a room with this paper the furniture could be painted a faint mauve to match the flowers, the ceiling near white, and the floor have an old blue rug. The curtains could be mauve and gray plaid gingham or plain blue sunfast, or pale mustard colored armure. The pattern of the paper is shown in the circle of the illustration.

Another "modern" bedroom paper illustrated at the right has a proper atmosphere of restfulness. Its general tone is gray, relieved by a little basket of flowers against a square meshed lattice work of white, on a putty ground. This is good with a mole colored carpet, white curtains and covers, and inside draperies of old rose or baby blue silk.

The chintz pattern shown in the lower square is suitable for a small bedroom. It is in pastel tints of turquoise, old blue, violet, sage green, and jade pink, on a well covered white ground with a linen finish.

For hall use comes a Japanese paper of lively interest. It is pictured to the left. The background is black and the flowers, fountains, birds, and pagodas are in colors subdued, yet full of life. It could be used with a Chinese blue rug, lacquered furniture, and yellow or apple green glazed pottery.

Many of the new papers are overprinted in colors or in monotone, on a striped ground, the stripes being tiny and of variegated colors that blend to nice neutrality. Sometimes they run horizontally and sometimes up and down.

Pink, blue, and yellow are all discoverable in the stripes of a gray paper having a large acanthus leaf pattern. So delicately are the colors toned that they are only seen on being searched for. The whole effect is that of a two tone light gray, and the pattern is so sturdy that it is suitable for use with rather cumbersome, manny looking furniture.

Every manufacturer seems to have produced a satin and gros-grain stripe this season; the only appreciable difference in the products is in the width of the stripes. Some are pin line, others are wide, some fully two inches evenly alternated, and others mixed in width, or have wide stripes alternating with groups of narrow stripes. These things in light colors are fresh and cleanly looking and make a good choice for those who repaper often. They are excellent with enameled furniture and silk draperies. They show soil more quickly than figured papers.

If patterns are liked, large designs are most appropriate for large rooms and small ones for small rooms. This seems axiomatic, yet it is a rule that is broken so often that it bears repetition.

Before buying, anchor a few maxims deep under your marcel wave. The experience of papering, paper cleaning, and repapering teaches wisdom. Let us pay salubrious attention to the matter of cleaning. Who hasn't had this experience? Bought a lovely paper and had it well hung, thinking it would last several years. Then when the time arrived to have it cleaned (which was not long in coming in this era of soft coal soot) the paper cleaned just splendidly—all excepting one space in the room, and that was just above the radiator. There the dirt was burnt in. It always everlastingly and invariably is!

You rush down to the store where the paper was bought, and think to match it and to buy just enough to repaper that one panel, for the rest of the wall has cleaned "like new," but alas! That pattern is no longer in stock. Moral: Buy paper enough to have a few rolls in reserve for cleaning up time, and keep it carefully put away where you can find it when you want it.

With decorative draperies use plain papers and vice versa. Do not be afraid of monotony.

In a spacious bedroom I have lately used a wall paper of Chinese design. The paper was printed in England and was beautifully blocked by hand. The colors are lavish but well kept down in tone. The design is of large flowers, birds, and branches of apple blossoms. The colors are old blue, fawn, touches of oriental red (almost terra cotta), olive, green, and brown. The white flowers are not really white, but dull old ivory, all on a clay colored ground. The whole thing is as inspiring as an antique Japanese print.

Pictures in this room are among the unessentials. The ceiling is old ivory, the cove in a deeper tint of old ivory. The top of the cove ending in a molding has the molding tinted in a still deeper tone, and this tone is repeated on the wood picture molding, which is no longer used, but treated as merely a part of the decoration. The carpet is one big oriental rug. The window draperies are of old ivory casement cloth, trimmed with a little puffed band of old blue taffeta, and the furniture, which was formerly birdseye maple, has been treated with a glaze of deep old blue lacquer.

Adjoining the room described is a living room in which are some impressive pictures that required a flat background, so the paper selected was a simple two tone clay colored paper, patterned with an allover pattern of apple blossoms, the exact size and shape of the figured paper in the bedroom. The same paper is used in the hall and the dining room.

The ceilings are old ivory throughout. In the dining room, however, the ceiling is beamed in squares, and has a novel treatment. Large bouquets of flowers cut from the Chinese paper in the bedroom are centered in these squares. After being pasted in place they have been outlined with a tiny gilt tracing. It is a gorgeous bit of decoration.

The bathroom and kitchen are in clay color and ivory. This completes the apartment. It is of four rooms only, but the rooms are large, and the choice of wall covering has vested the place with as much dignity as could be found in a mansion.

Girls! Your hair needs a little "Danderine"—that's all! When it becomes lifeless, thin or loses its lustre; when ugly dandruff appears, or your hair falls out, a 35-cent bottle of delightful, dependable "Danderine" from any store, will save your hair, also double its beauty. You can have nice, thick hair, too.

Summer Mending of Winter's Wear and Tear

BY Antoinette Donnelly

THE greatest apothecary shop in the world is conducted by our good old friend, Dame Nature. There's hardly an ill that's known to man but in her overstocked shop you'll find a remedy.

In the summer time—every summer time—there is the annual bargain sale which some folk take advantage of to stock up on, but on which many more folk refuse to read her bargain ads.

Just another case of good and bad housekeeping, only this time it is good and bad personal housekeeping. The good housekeeper scrubs and scours and hangs up bright new chintzes and tones up the furnishings in a general sort of way. The poor housekeeper ignores the brightening and cleansing needs and says, "O, that will do another year!" The good personal housekeeper sees in the summer time chances on every hand to brighten her eyes and tone up her skin and put energy in her lagging step. The bad personal housekeeper says, "O, I guess the old system can get along another spell!"

Of course it's prosaic and it's trite to preach outdoors. But when the theory is as good and reliable in its happy outcome as is the practice of the gospel, why are we not privileged to go on preaching in the hope that a few more souls will see the light.

As a matter of fact, no one has to be told what the outdoors has to offer for the asking. But some of us just have to be reminded. And I want to remind women and girls, especially those whose last two war years of anxieties and trials have left them with a toll of wrinkles or broken sleep or shattered nerves, of the mending powers of the summer sun and the summer air.

Not that it is enough just to sit beneath a spreading chestnut, although that in itself is good. But that provides time for reflection and self-analysis. Too much of which is not good for any soul. So the shady seat were better left for use after one has worked up a healthy tire from some fun provoking exercise, and then it will be a place to dream sweet summer dreams in.

All that I ask is that you make a few good summer resolutions. And after making them make another that you will stick to them.

First, I urge the morning cold bath. The water is not so cold but it may be enjoyed by every one not chronically invalided. That starts your day out right. It gives you the necessary "pep" to stick to your resolutions. And, incidentally, it gives you the basic foundation of good personal housekeeping.

Now whether your resolution shall be golf, or tennis, or swimming, or walking, or rowing—that's for your personal choice. Make it the one you love best, because the greatest good comes from exercise in the complete enjoyment of it. But promise yourself that every day you shall spend as much time outdoors as you can.

Golf is one of the greatest boons yet offered to the nervously weak or run down of both sexes. It is excellent from an esthetic standpoint because the player's sense of action is a constantly shifting one and brings him face to face with nature under new and varied aspects. The mind finds both restful and absorbing occupation in the calculation of distances and in regulating the coördination of the muscles involved in the stroke. Then, the enthusiasm that characterizes golf players over the matter of hazards and bunkers provides a bait for much more ground traversed and much more fresh air breathed than these same people would acquire otherwise without great fatigue. One is able to cover more ground without fatigue in pursuit of a wayward golf ball than ever dreamed of in one's most ambitious moments.

Tennis is apt to be a bit violent and exhausting to people who have been unused to exercise. But it is to be commended for its mental distraction from cares and troubles. To beginners it is advised to start out on a short time circuit until you have got back some of your old time agility and endurance. For those inclined to be "weighty" the stretching involved in tennis is excellent as a reducer.

Canoeing and boating are excellent for those who have a fair power of self-command. In addition to the output of muscular energy they both bring into play the balancing and coördinating faculties, and thus avert the danger of irksomeness.

Swimming has advantages that are over and beyond any of the others. And here's where your summer resolution has a chance at being a huge success once you get the habit. It is a great beautifier. It combines in the one sport the benefits of splendid exercise, the invigorating tonic of a plunge bath, and the health building powers of air and sunshine. A swimmer has to have complete control of the muscles and muscular control gives poise, and poise is essential to beauty and dignity. Swimming is beneficial to the complexion. A sallow skin is the result of a sluggish liver and swimming arouses the laziest liver. It stimulates the kidneys and is a remedy for constipation. It develops the arms and chest, or it reduces them. By the continued pull on the muscles around the waistline it removes the ugly rolls of superfluous fat. Any athletic sports call upon a given set of muscles, but swimming calls for symmetrical development of all the body.

Who Made the First Baby Food?

WHEN I wanted to wean my baby and find a food which would agree with him as well as my own milk had done, I asked my doctor "Who made the first baby food?"

"Nestlé's," he said. "They originated the modified powdered milk form of baby food many years ago and now Nestlé's has the largest sale of any baby food in the world."

Then they must know how to feed babies, I decided. And so it turned out. For my baby didn't seem to feel any difference at all when we changed to Nestlé's Milk Food—and all my fear and worry was gone.

That is why I wanted you to know about Nestlé's—that it is simply pure sweet milk in powder form—already modified—easiest to digest—because the tough curds are broken up—and sure to keep your baby safe summer and winter.

No germs can get in, because you just add water and boil, and your baby is the smiling happy morsel of humanity you want him to be.

I know the Nestlé Company will be glad to help you as they helped me if you will fill out and send the coupon below. They will send you free, enough Nestlé's Food for twelve feedings and a Mother's Book by specialists on how to take care of your baby.

They want your baby to smile, too!

FREE! Enough Nestlé's for 12 feedings. Send the coupon!

Real Love Stories

HIS ADOPTED AUNT.

IN a town where I spent the winter of 1917-1918 they had inaugurated the custom of four minute women, the little speeches which were made by men in most cities being there delivered by petticoat orators. My friends knew that I had done a little public speaking and they implored me to help along a good war cause by devoting a couple of evenings weekly to speaking in the movie theaters of that town. Making speeches was easier to my mind than knitting socks, so I consented to do my bit in this way, and as events turned out it was the most successful piece of work I ever did, for by virtue of being a four minute woman I am now happily married.

One evening a friend accompanied me and as I stepped to the window to buy her ticket and present my pass the ticket seller drawled: "Whole or half for the boy, ma'am?" I looked down in surprise and discovered at my elbow a 5 or 6 year old boy. He had such a frantically pleading expression that I could not resist it. "You want to see the show?" I asked. "Yes, yes!" he replied. I gave the child a ticket and he darted joyfully in.

My speech proceeded as usual to within a minute of its close. Then something unusual happened. I felt a tug at my elbow and looked down to see my protégé of the ticket window, who had evidently slipped onto the stage from one of the rear wings. "Will you be my aunt?" he shouted eagerly. Undoubtedly I had made a great hit with the child, but it was trying to be told about it in front of a giggling audience. "Will you?" he insisted, and I left the stage in great embarrassment. The boy held tight to my hand, and as no one knew who he was, I felt obliged to stay by him, having been responsible for his presence there. Meantime I assured him that I would be his aunt and he was rapturously happy.

I had about decided to take him home until his parents should look him up when the theater policeman, accompanied by a man, came up to us. "O, daddy!" the boy cried before anybody had time to say a word. "She's going to be my aunt!" The man then explained that Freddie had a particular liking for that theater and that he often looked for him there when the lad could not be found elsewhere. All this time Freddie was holding me in such an affectionate embrace that I could hardly appear dignified, and when I gently told him that I must go, he set up a wail of dismay. "He has been very lonely since his mother died," the man explained sadly; "I'm afraid I don't know just how to comfort him." We talked for a little while and finally Freddie agreed to say good-by to "auntie" on condition that he might come to see her in a few days.

When the boy came, his father was with him. "I could not let him come alone," he explained, and I replied that of course he could not, and knowing that Freddie would have been perfectly safe accompanied by the housekeeper, I half hoped that his father came because he too liked "auntie." After that Freddie insisted upon seeing me once a week and his father never seemed to think it was too often. Indeed, it wasn't long before he began coming oftener than the little boy and he was my regular escort on the four minute tours.

Of course all the blissful little details leading up to the happy finish are our own business. Briefly, John asked me if I would do something necessary for him and Freddie. For Freddie he asked that I should leave off being auntie and take the place of the boy's mother. For himself he was going to be selfish enough, so he said, to ask that I give up four minute work and begin a lifetime work as his wife. I replied that being a helpmate to him and a mother to Freddie couldn't possibly be work and then, well, we hunted up the parson right away. V. J. R.

Camp Stories Contest.

Your son, your brother, your husband, or your sweetheart in the service undoubtedly has told you some amusing incident that has occurred in his camp. Undoubtedly, too, there are ever so many stories originating in camp that are still untold. This contest is especially open to the soldier himself if he has a good camp story to tell. It is open also to every one who has been told a good camp story of actual happening. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Camp Stories Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Some Remarkable Shooting.

A play was being given by a group of soldiers, the hero of which was to shoot blank cartridges at a row of bottles standing on a shelf, while another soldier, well concealed, was to break each bottle in turn with the point of his bayonet, thus pretending that the hero was shooting the bottles. Through some misunderstanding the hero started shooting at the wrong end of the row, while at the other end the bottles were being broken. G. W.

Sneaking Into Camp.

A private who had overstayed his leave one night sneaked into camp and was just on the point of entering the barracks when the sentry turned at the end of his beat. The private, who was closely watching the guard, realizing that he would be detected, also turned and acted as though he was trying to sneak out of camp. "Get back there; no man out tonight!" shouted the guard. Needless to add the private lost no time in obeying the order. D. G. M.

Suitably Dressed.

While in the army I was accompanied by a sergeant that, to hear him talk, was one of the brainiest men Uncle Sam had hired. On pass one Sunday, in a certain town, a young woman we met on the street asked us if we cared to go to her house and have a cup of coffee. On arriving we were introduced to her mother, who made excuses in regard to her appearance. She remarked, "I'll go and put on the percolator." The sergeant said, "O, you look all right the way you are." T. F.

Place for No. 1.

The second week after our arrival in France our battery received instructions from a French lieutenant as to the handling of one of their guns which we were to use. He demonstrated it in detail, in perfect English, and taught us the positions of the men. I noticed the shield of the cannon was badly bent and so full of holes it resembled a sieve.

"Now, directly behind this armor plate stands the No. 1 man, and that is you," said he, pointing directly at me.

I lost my tongue. All I said was, "Thank you." A. J.

Only a Pipe.

At a training camp orders were given for a march of great distance, each soldier to carry full equipment. An officer noticed one private's pack looked a little too smooth. He examined it. It contained stovepipe instead of equipment. He examined all the packs and found enough stove pipe to set up a hardware store. J. B.

See Stockyards First.

Jim, his father's pride and mother's joy, had been "over there" for nearly two years. Finally word was received that he had reached an eastern port and would soon be heading for camp to receive his little red discharge chevron.

Eagerly the home folks had waited to welcome back their hero and planned to make the day of his arrival here en route to camp a big one.

At 4 o'clock one afternoon Jim's voice came over the telephone to his dad: "Leaving in fifteen minutes for camp."

Unable to understand the short stopover, the father inquired the time of his arrival in Chi.

"Well, now, it was this way," explained the warrior: "We got in at 9 o'clock this morning, but I had a couple of pals with me who had never seen the stockyards, and I took them out to show them the place." F. Q.

Pro Rata.

In one of the regiments the rats had become such a pest that the officers took drastic measures to get rid of them. An offer was made that to any of the boys twelve hours' liberty would be given every time they brought in a dead rat.

One day a soldier came into headquarters with a demand for five days' liberty. "Five days' liberty? Where do you get that stuff?" they howled at him. He produced a paper sack which, on being opened, showed ten young rats which he had found in one nest.

The joke was on the officers; and the soldier got liberty. W. M.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS

By Mary King.

AFRAID TO TAKE A CHANCE.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

THE same lack of foresight and confidence that makes a girl hesitate to submit a good idea when it occurs to her for the improvement of her employer's business is also shown by her hesitancy to give up a mediocre job when a good one is offered.

Why should an intelligent business girl be afraid to take a chance once in a while? Opportunities are scarce and taking a chance on a new job that promises well is merely taking advantage of a rare opportunity. For a business girl to pass up opportunities is to pass up success.

One reason that a girl gives when she essays to excuse herself for turning down an opportunity for a better job is that she would have to give up the work in which she had been trained. "If I take that job it means that I would have to give up my stenography, and I can't do that," are familiar words to most of us.

The author of the letter given below is hesitating between her reluctance to change the nature of her work and her desire to take advantage of a job that promises success:

"Dear Miss King: Would you give me a word of advice about a change in position that I am contemplating?

"I have been working as stenographer for the last three years and have been fairly successful in that line. I have always been considered a competent stenographer and have been paid somewhat more than the average salary.

"Last week I was offered a position at a salary considerably better than I am now earning and the prospects for advancement look very bright. The position is in a branch office located here of a firm with headquarters in another part of the country. If I take the position I would have complete charge of the branch office and transact all business between that and the head office. I would have jurisdiction over all the salesmen in this territory and do all the buying for the office.

"I know it is an exceptional position, for I know the woman who has had it for the last several years and have always envied her the wonderful place. She is being transferred to the home office to take an important executive job there, and is willing to stay here a while and initiate me into the new work.

"My only reason for hesitating is that I would have no opportunity to use shorthand, and after the time and money I spent in learning stenography, I feel that I would be foolish to give it up entirely. Do you think it would be wise for me to neglect my stenography? T. A. S."

Since you are evidently of an open mind about changing your position, I am in hopes that I can persuade you not to let this opportunity pass by you. The job you describe is an exceptional one and may be the greatest opportunity you will ever have for an executive position.

The fact that you will have no use for your knowledge of shorthand ought not to deter you for a moment. If you are ever called upon to use it in the future you will require little practice to bring your old skill back. However, the chances are that you will never require the knowledge again.

The clever business woman looks upon stenography as only a means to an end, for through this work the great opportunities for the big jobs come. The ambitious woman will count stenography among her accomplishments, but she will feel no qualms at laying it aside for better and more lucrative work.

No. 88.

THE USE OF PIGWEED.

ONE of the most injurious weeds of the garden and field is the smooth pigweed or lamb's quarter. It spreads various plant rusts, mildews, and insect pests to beets and spinach. It grows rapidly to a height of two to four feet and robs cultivated plants of needed moisture and plant food. Grain, grass seed, and clover seed are often lowered in value by the intermixture of pigweed seed.

Pull the young weeds, but don't waste them. Here is a recipe for their use as a pot herb submitted by Miss Gertrude Adams:

"Cut off the roots and soak the tops for a few minutes in slightly salted water, to free them from possible insect life (as should be done with any of the cultivated vegetables). Cook exactly like spinach in a small quantity of water for about the same length of time, and season in the same manner. A few cubes of fried salt pork or bacon can also be used for seasoning. It makes a delicate and appetizing dish."

Here's another idea:

"You're asking readers to contrib
What should be done with weeds,
Though I don't think them worth a mib
For anybody's needs.
When first their pesky tops they show,
Before they run to seed,
Just cultivate or take a hoe
And give them what they need.

"The dandelions may make teas
And soups and stews and such;
But, plague it all, why fool with these
When gardens yield so much!
Just take my dope—all else is bunk—
And dry them in a heap;
Then strike a match and burn the junk
Or bury good and deep.

"PAT."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—[1] I would thank you for the name of the inclosed weed. [2] It spreads rapidly on lawns and in moist, shaded places. Is it noxious?—H. F.

A.—[1] Ground ivy (Glecoma hederacea—L.), formerly used for flavoring and clarifying home brewed beer or ale, as hops are now used. [2] Yes, in the sense that any plant which persists where it is not wanted is noxious. It is a perennial that crowds out grasses and is so hard to eradicate that the entire sod is as well skinned off, once it becomes established, and a new lawn sown or new, clean sod laid in its place.

Q.—[1] What is the time of maturing for popcorn? I do not want its pollination to fall in the same time as my bed of Country Gentleman sweet-corn, which requires 119 days from planting till harvesting. [2] What strain of popcorn does best here? [3] I am using all the horse manure my hard clay soil will stand and want to plant scarlet clover between established sweet corn rows for green manure, turning it under in spring, followed by corn. Does scarlet clover survive our winters? If not, what would you advise? [4] When should it be planted?—E. O. P.

A.—[1] It averages about the same growing period as Country Gentleman sweet corn, but the pearl type (125 days to cutting) averages a week earlier than the rice type. "Extra early" varieties are advertised in some of the catalogues. In a pinch, you can detassel the Country Gentleman corn, taking seed for its propagation from an earlier or later planting. If the corn is not to be used for seed purposes, cross pollination does not signify. [2] From Michigan to Nebraska (including northern Illinois) is the popcorn belt. Any of it will thrive, and you will find many varieties listed in local seed catalogues. [3] There is no "scarlet clover," commonly known as such. There is crimson clover, a winter annual, suited to the eastern states, which would winter-kill here. There is also red clover, which is admirably adapted for just such use. It is a perennial which thrives north of the Ohio river, from the Atlantic to eastern Nebraska. It is important, however, that the clover get a start of at least six inches before killing frost. [4] Plant in drills an inch deep in clayey soil, one and one-half to two inches deep in lighter soil, at the time the corn has reached a size equivalent to the last horse cultivation, perhaps mid-July. Water the young clover in periods of hot drought. Be sure to get "recleaned" seed from a reliable source.

Q.—(1) Can asparagus still be planted? (2) How soon ought it to be up?—Mrs. H. E. S.

A.—(1) Dormant roots can probably still be obtained and can still be planted while the weather remains cool. (2) Planted at the usual time, in mid April, they would be up in three to four weeks; planted now, in two to three weeks. They can be sparingly harvested the third year from seed and fully the fourth year.

Q.—I have tried for three years to establish a phlox bed in my garden. Each year they develop a rust similar to that on the inclosed leaf. The plants and blooms are stunted. What do you suggest?—Mrs. G. L. F.

A.—The phlox panniculata group and their hybrids are very susceptible to rust, particularly in clayey soil or when lacking vitality on account of close confinement, overcrowding, or smoke. No remedy is known.

Q.—(1) My Boston fern showed brown specks on the ends of the leaves last winter. I cut off such leaves under the impression that they are bugs and detrimental to the plant. Was that correct? (2) Large green caterpillars eat our young maple tree bare of leaves every year. Hand picking them and their cocoons does little good. What can be done in spring to prevent this? (3) Our five year old cherry blossoms nicely every spring, but all the blossoms fall off and the tree has never borne fruit. Could too many roots cause this? (4) Later in the season the cherry tree becomes covered with small, slimy, black worms or caterpillars which eat off the top layer of the green leaves. Would the treatment suggested for the maple trees be effective here too?—Mrs. E. W. B.

A.—(1) The small indented brown pustules in regular rows under each pinna or leaflet of the fronds [leaves] contain the spores or life germs by which the plant reproduces itself. They are equivalent to the seed of other plants. Removing them weakens the plant and they should be ignored. Brown tips of the leaflets in winter indicate improper conditions at the previous change of season. (2) Spray with arsenate of lead solution at the rate of five level tablespoonfuls [in paste form or 2½ in powder form] to one gallon of water and three level teaspoonfuls of thin flour paste. Apply during the first week in June and whenever the appearance of chewing insects warrants it later. (3) Probably a sweet cherry and, as such, not suited to this vicinity. If the tree is not exposed to late frosts, the failure to set fruit may be overcome by planting another for cross pollination. A light pruning and thinning out may be needed, but better let the roots be. (4) It would. They are slugs.

Q.—Could you inform me of a method of destroying worms and insects in soil where I have garden seeds planted without injury to seeds?—F. O'H.

A.—Specific insects demand specific treatment. In general, wood ashes or air slaked lime raked or hoed into the soil, fall spading (or plowing) repeated in spring, and rotation of crops will prove beneficial.

Q.—In your article No. 46, April 26, you say that only the Easter lily (Lilium longiflorum) and the showy lily (L. speciosum) can be obtained in Chicago. Will you be kind enough to give me the name of a reliable eastern dealer in other species of lilies?—Mrs. J. R. M.

A.—John Scheepers (inc.), 2 Stone street, New York; R. & J. Farquhar & Co., nurserymen, Boston, Mass.

Q.—1. At the base of the trunk of my peach tree a gumlike substance is coming out. What is this and is it harmful? 2. The tree is grown from a peach stone planted nearly five years ago. Should it be grafted and, if so, how? 3. I have four lilac bushes, about five years old, that have never bloomed. What is the reason of this?—F. B.

A.—1. "Gum flow," caused by mechanical or other injury. It is more or less harmful and may, if serious, cause the death of the trees. 2. Too late now. It should have been grafted or budded not later than the second year. 3. They lack either sun or soil fertility, or pruning has been neglected, so that suckers, direct from the ground, are taking up all vitality.

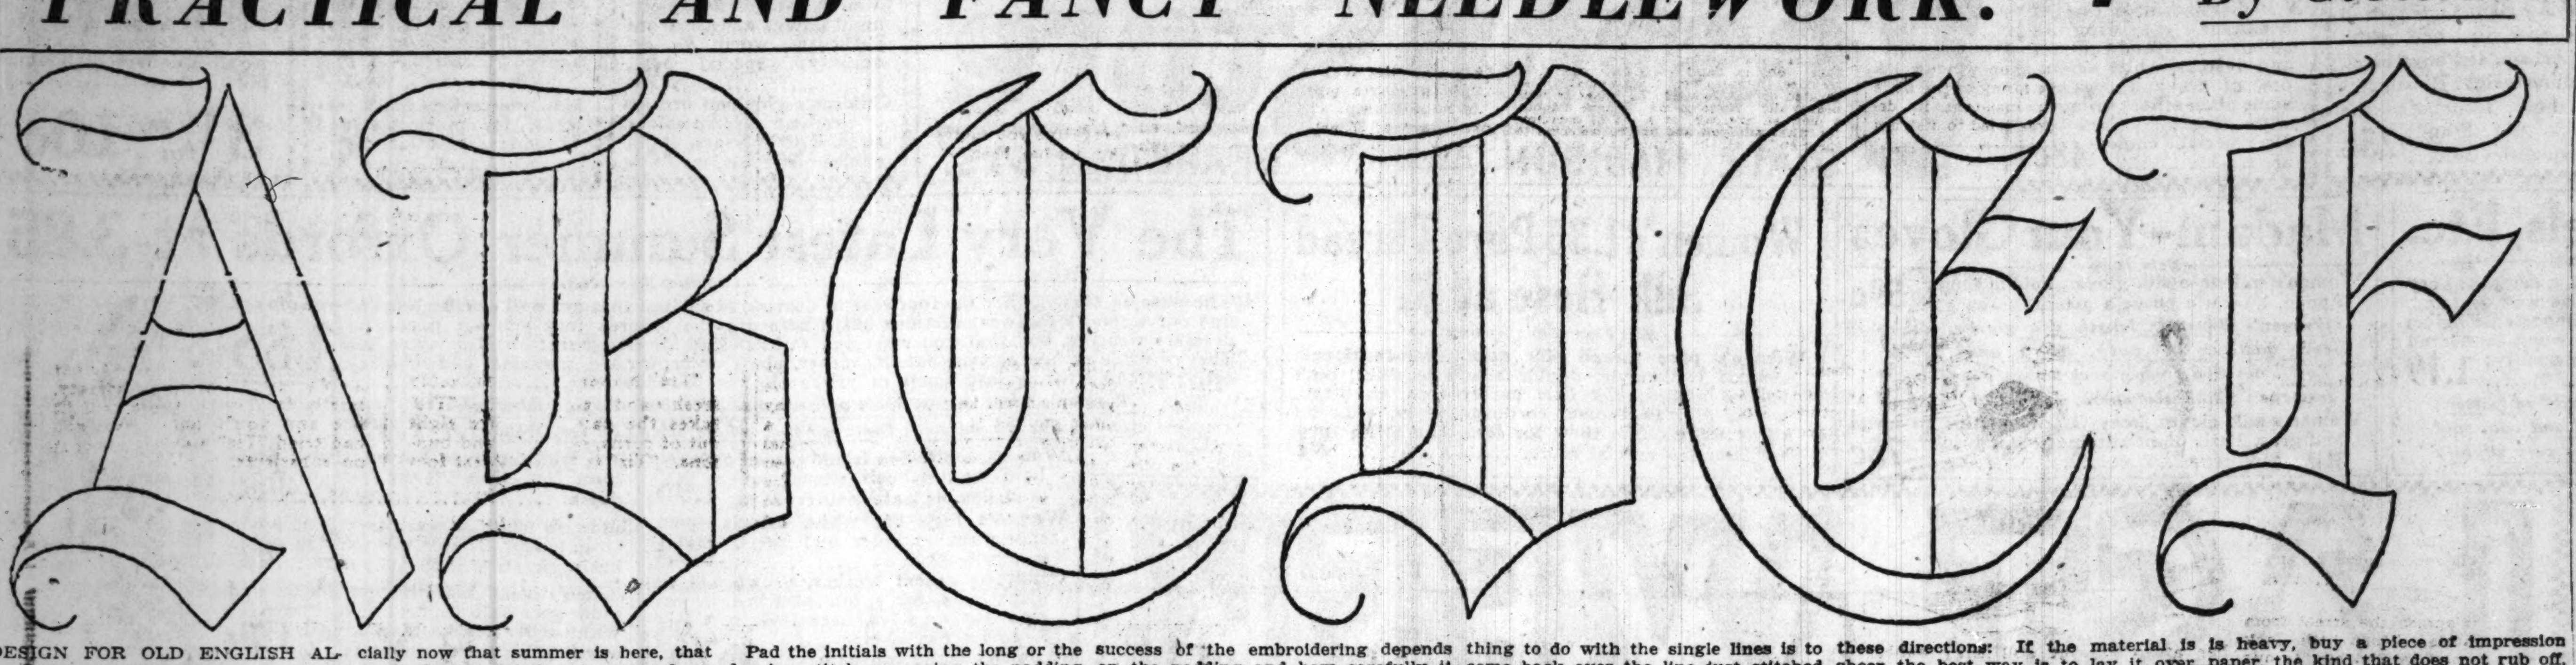
PRACTICAL AND FANCY NEEDLEWORK. - By Clotilde



DESIGN FOR OLD ENGLISH ALPHABET.

There have been so many requests for this old English lettering especially now that summer is here, that part of the alphabet is printed on this page. The remainder of the letters will follow successively in three installments.

Pad the initials with the long or the darning stitch, arranging the padding so that the heaviest portion comes in the center of the widest points of the letter. The largest part of the success of the embroidering depends on the padding and how carefully it is done. The satin stitch is used in the covering and the vine or the outline stitch in the single lines. A good thing to do with the single lines is to come back over the line just stitched and restitch by running the needle through each loop of thread.

To transfer the letter design follow these directions: If the material is sheer the best way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp pencil. If the material is heavy, buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on the material, place the design over it, and trace with a hard pencil.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in deed and the friend in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be only too happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to "The Tribune," but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Wants a Typewriter.

"I wonder if there isn't someone who can furnish me with a typewriter. I am greatly in need of one at present, but I cannot afford to buy it. I shall be glad to pay all transportation charges on it. Hope for good news from you soon.

P. R. B."

Typewriters are not any too common, but if I hear of any generously inclined person who has one he no longer needs, you shall have it immediately.

Two Donations.

"I have a new adjustable dress form. I would prefer to give to a widow or the family of a man who has been in service. I also have a blue high school cadet uniform for a boy weighing about 100 pounds and 5 feet 7 inches in height. MRS. F. D. S."

Mrs. S. is leaving town in a week and any one wishing to take advantage of either of her kind offers must make application soon.

He's a Bit Indefinite.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a pledge to one of the large sororities at our high school. Another sorority is giving a dance soon. I asked a boy to go. He did not accept and still he did not refuse, but he has not said anything about it again. I do not feel that it is my place to ask him again, because there are other boys who would like to go in his place.

"I went to a Masonic dance with him once before, and my parents liked him very much. He is a good dancer and I would like very much to go with him.

"My sorority is giving a dance and I would like to ask him to go, but if he refuses this time I would not like to ask him again. Please advise me what to do. MARIE."

You would be justified in finding out definitely whether the young man intends accepting your invitation to the dance or not, so that you may have time enough to secure another escort should he fail you. If he refuses naturally you must not try to force him into any further acceptances of invitations.

Magazines to Donate.

"I have a good many of the new and popular magazines if any one would like them. I hate to give them to a ragman. MRS R. A. M."

Thank you for letting us know about your magazines. You will doubtless hear from somebody soon.

Evenings Long and Dull.

"I am a young business woman living alone. I wonder if any of your readers have a phonograph which they would be willing to let me store. I will take the best of care of it. After business hours my evenings are long and dull, and I cannot afford to purchase anything so expensive.

"G. L. H."

Your request is rather an unusual one, but there is a chance, of course, somebody has a phonograph and would be glad to store it with you for a time, at least.

They Are Orphans.

"I have a little sister 12 years old and she is badly in need of clothing. So am I. We are orphans. Do you know of any one who would send us some clothing? I will be glad to pay postage. I wear shoes, size 5, but as for the clothing I can make over anything that is given me. I do thank you if you can help me. MISS M. S."

I will write you as soon as I hear of some charitable reader who will send you some clothing.

Boy Scout Suits.

"A friend of mine, who is superintendent of a community house, is anxious to obtain Boy Scout suits for her little Italian boys who are unable to buy their own. Do you suppose any of your readers have Boy Scout suits, outgrown or no longer used by their own boys, they would be glad to "pass on" to these little fellows? I am sure they would be very much appreciated. I write to you, for you seem to be of help to all in need. You certainly do a great deal to make others happy, an occupation to be envied. I. L. P."

There ought to be a generous response to this request.

His Bike Needs Tires.

"I am a boy without a father and I want so much to help my mother all I can. I have a bicycle, but it needs two tires. Do you think any of your friends have these tires? My sister also needs a summer coat very badly. She is 15 years old. L. S."

You ought to have a couple of tires by all means. Here's hoping some one has them to give you, as well as a coat for your sister.

School Books to Give.

"I have some school books to dispose of from first grade to college and if any one wants them they can have them by writing to me. C. P."

Thank you for telling me about your books. If I hear of any one wanting books I shall refer them to you.

Needs Wheel Chair.

"I am writing for a wheel chair for my grandmother, who can hardly stand on her feet at all. I will pay all express charges. J. L. S."

Wheel chairs are much in demand, but plenty of people have them, too, and I shouldn't wonder if I can tell you of a wheel chair your grandmother can have before long.

Would Write Letters.

"I am a daily reader of your department and would like to get in touch with a nice girl about 17 or 18 years old, living in Chicago. I live on a farm and would find great pleasure in corresponding with some girl of my own age. ALICE M."

To the young girls who enjoy letter writing I shall be happy to send the address of the girl down on the farm.

Two Fellers Need a Friend.

"Is there any one in the country or some one with a summer home who would like to take my twin boys, 9 years old, for the summer vacation? I am a widow employed all the time, so it is impossible for me to give them any recreation whatever. Thought possibly I would be able to reach some kindhearted person through this helpful corner of THE TRIBUNE. MRS. M. T."

It will give me great pleasure to furnish the address of the mother of the twins.

Might Please Small Girl.

"I have a set of doll's dishes, some little chairs, and other trinkets that might please a small girl, which I would be glad to give to any one upon receipt of the postage. M. S. V."

Some little girl will be made happy by your gift of dishes and chairs.

Collection Quite Large.

"I wish to thank you and your readers who so kindly contributed to my request for stamps. My collection is quite large now and will keep me busy for awhile. HELEN F."

"Gets-It" Peels My Corns Off!

Any Corn or Callus Comes Off Peacefully, Painlessly. Never Fails.

It's almost a picnic to get rid of a corn or callus the "Gets-It" way. You spend 2 or 3 seconds putting on 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It," about as simple as putting on your hat. "Gets-It" does away forever with "contraptions," "wrappy" plasters, greasy ointments that rub off, blood-letting knives, and scissors that snip into the "quick." "Gets-It" eases pain. Your "lumpy" corn shrinks, dies, loosens from the toe. You peel the corn painlessly from your toe in one complete piece. That's where the picnic comes in—you peel it off as you would a banana peel. Nothing else but "Gets-It" can do it. Get peaceful, common-sense "Gets-It."

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a trifle at any drug store. M'f'd by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Every Housewife should be an EXPERT PURCHASING AGENT. She should know how to BUY as well as the merchant knows how to SELL. She will if she reads Tribune advertising.

"The Logic of a Different Cream for Every Skin Condition Appealed to Me"

She Won't "Experiment with the Only Face She'll Ever Have!"

Rubye de Remer, called "the most beautiful woman since Venus," tells why she uses three of the TESTED seven Marinello Creams

"Women have frequently asked me how I keep my skin so fresh and fair—'you have a skin like a baby's' they say. Nature gave me a good complexion, but I found that I had to care for it to preserve its quality.

"I couldn't afford to experiment with the only face I'll ever have, so when I learned about the wonderful Seven Marinello Creams, I thought myself very lucky. I didn't need to experiment with these creams. Their worth had been proved—in laboratories, in the Marinello School, in the 3500 Marinello shops, I was told. But most convincing argument of all, millions of women with lovely skins were a living testimony to what these creams could do.

"I quickly found that my skin needed three of the Marinello Creams—Lettuce Cream to cleanse my skin better than soap and water could do; Tissue Cream which I rub in every night to nourish my skin and repair the ravages of the day; Foundation Cream to make my Marinello Face Powder stay on better.

"And it's not a bit extravagant to use three creams. I buy a jar each of Tissue, Lettuce and Foundation Creams and they last just as long as three jars of an ordinary cream would. The difference is not in cost but in results.

"Don't use my creams—use yours"

"When I tell women about my three wonderful Marinello Creams they say, 'Well, I am going to get the same three.' 'Oh my dear, you mustn't,' I say. 'Perhaps you don't need the same ones. There are special creams for every skin. Read the chart of the Seven Marinello Creams and find out just which creams you need.' That is the wonder of the Marinello system to me. They have perfected a different cream for every skin condition. I can't say too much in praise of the Marinello Creams." (Signed) RUBYE DE REMER.

The beautiful actress who tells you her personal experiences with Marinello Creams is only one of the millions of women who have learned the value of the Marinello Preparations. If you do not know what Marinello Creams can do for your skin, we will gladly let you sample them. Judy was talking to her older sister, Elinore.

"My, how I would like to go 'way up …n an aeroplane and do a loop the loop, wouldn't you?" asked Elinore.

"No," replied July, "I might get homesick 'way up there." O. H. M.

Frederick loves to visit the zoo, and the lazy alligator, who basks in the sun all day, is one of his favorites. A short time since his mother called him to lunch. "I can't come, mother," he called from the sand pile. "I'm the alligator." L. H.

Our little boy was sent to the store by his mother for a half dozen eggs and some sugar. When he returned his mother discovered he had brought the sugar; but instead of the eggs he had bought lemons. She asked, "Didn't I tell you to bring eggs and sugar?"

"Yes, you did, mother," answered the little fellow, "but I was afraid the eggs would break, so I got lemons." A. W. B.

A little girl dressed in overalls was chatting with the grocer. The grocer tried to tease her by telling her she was a boy. In desperation the little one finally said, "Well, if you don't believe me I'll take off these overalls and then you'll see I got a petticoat on." C. A. S.

We live just across the street from one of the schools. When little Jack started in school I invited him to our house for dinner on rainy days. He accepted this invitation many times during the winter, as he lived some distance from the school. When spring came we said to him that the rains were over now, and how we would miss his visits. Instantly he replied, "O I've changed it now. I'll come every day the sun shines." V. A.

Ernest was looking rather sober as he sat down to his dinner. Knowing he was to have a new teacher that morning, I said to him: "Well, Ernest, didn't you like the new teacher?"

"I should say not," was his reply, "'cause she takes off her smile for the boys and puts it on for the girls." M. O.

Nelly was in the habit of calling on her neighbors frequently. One day when she came in her mother exclaimed: "Where have you been? I've hunted everywhere for you.'

She gave a mischievous smile and said: "O, I'se ist been over the top." W. E. C.

Fred and his small sister were looking at the toys in a shop window. A doll having taken the fancy of the little girl, she was most insistent in demanding it. The nurse tried to distract her attention, but still she wailed, "Why can't I have the lovely dolly?" Fred, with the wisdom of 8 years, said condescendingly, "Don't you know yet that everything costs money?" S. W. L.

The other day my little boy came in and said he had met his teacher.

I said, "I hope you were very polite and tipped your hat, Paul."

"O, no, mother," he said, "I just whistled to her. She was across the street." F. S.

A little boy was awakened one night by a thunderstorm. He called to his father and said, "What's that?" His father answered, "O, it's nothing, keep quiet and go to sleep." Johnnie replied, "Well, it's a awful lot of noise for 'nuffin." R. B.

I was giving a talk to my children on the imagination. After the talk I asked: "What is the imagination?" One little fellow answered: "It is the thing we think with when we're dreaming." M. L. P.

Elizabeth had been cautioned by her mother not to cross the newly oiled street, but the small playmates on the other side were irresistible. When she returned some time later her mother said: "O, Elizabeth, just look at your white shoes! That stain will not come out."

Elizabeth looked thoughtfully a moment and then replied: "That's why it's called stain, isn't it, mamma?" Mrs. E. D. C.

Gertrude awakened early one morning. She looked out and saw that it was bright, so asked the time. When told that it was only 5:45 she said, "O, don't the summer mornings get up early?" C. S. C.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Or, what is your beauty ill? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, an exercise, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly "Chicago Sunday Tribune."

THANK YOU: A DOUBLE CHIN? Get after it in its early youth and keep after it and you can raise it to a nice, useful, decorative bit of face furnishing. Let it go on in the way it is going and you have what every woman doesn't want to have on her person—an age telling wing of physical architecture. No, you won't just naturally outgrow it, especially with your tendency to flesh. Why not go in for a general toning down? The chin will respond to the reducing work along with the rest of you. You weigh twenty-five pounds too much, so I think you would better get to work before more accumulated fat will bury the energy to be up and doing about it. You would better let me send you a reducing diet and a set of exercises, including some especially beneficial to the double chin. They're too long to print and all I ask is a stamped, addressed envelope in return for a sylphline form and a carefree state of mind. Is it worth it to you? It has been to a lot of other women.

ANDREE: NO, THE SKIN FOOD I recommend has no tendency to promote growth of hair. In fact, the chances of a hirsute growth from massaging wrinkles around the eyes are slight with any cream. Since you lost the formula I'll repeat it here: One ounce of white wax, one ounce of spermaceti, two ounces of lanolin, two ounces of cocoanut oil, four ounces of oil of sweet almonds, four ounces of orange flower water, and a quarter ounce of boric acid. Melt all the oils and wax in a double boiler, remove from the fire, and beat until cold, adding slowly and gradually the orange flower water in which the boric acid has been dissolved; lastly, pour in five drops of benzoin. Be sure that the ingredients are fresh and of the best quality.

C. W. T.: THE HAIR COLOR PRESERVATIVE you inquire about has to my knowledge been analyzed and found wanting in its advertised merits. In fact, it has been pronounced harmful. Don't use it. If you insist upon using a dye, which you do against my advice, let it be a henna dye, as that is the safest. It comes in every known color, not only in red and bricky red, as many believe. Then have it done by an expert in the business, but make up your mind once you start you have a life job ahead of you. It has to be done frequently and well, otherwise your head will be a pretty mess. Why don't you let it "gray" and make a business of dressing it with individual beauty? I know gray haired women who have acquired a reputation for beauty not had before the hair turned by making their hair just the last word in good grooming. Surely you can do it!

Blind Women

Many women are blind to the bad effects of cosmetics, creams and powders.

They think they can make a new complexion by covering up the old.

They think that pimples, blotches and coarse skin can be hidden, but never was woman more mistaken.

The only beautiful complexion is the natural.

A natural complexion loses its beauty when the skin is diseased, and it recovers its beauty when the skin is restored to health.

To overcome coarseness, roughness, pimples, blotches, blemishes and irritations of the face, apply a little Cadum Ointment.

In this simple manner the skin can be restored to health, and the original beauty of the complexion brought back.

Don't hide the impurities of your face under a mask.

Remove them with Cadum Ointment, a French preparation made in this country from the original formula.

A nightly massage with a mixture of one part cold cream and one part Cadum Ointment keeps the skin in fine condition.

Much suffering from skin troubles may be avoided by the timely use of this wonderful remedy. It stops the itching at once and is very soothing and healing, wherever the skin is irritated or inflamed. Cadum Ointment is good for eczema, pimples, blotches, chafing, rash, ringworm, cuts, insect bites, etc.

One Recently Married, the Other Engaged

Miss Marjorie Eloise O'Brien, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. O'Brien of 4724 Ellis avenue, was married on May 27 to William V. Kelley Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley of Lake Forest and 1550 North State parkway. Mr. and Mrs. Kelley are spending the early summer at Atlantic City.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Bisbee of Forest Hills Garden, L. I., announce the engagement of their daughter, Hazel, to Clarence Morell Seaton of Chicago. No date has been set for the wedding.

Chicago Lagging Behind in Many Civic Enterprises

By Mme. X.

WE Chicagoans think our city is up to date. As a matter of fact we're drunk with words. We construct—or are in process of constructing—a short but wide roadway from Chicago avenue to Randolph street and all cry out in chorus, "Isn't this beautiful!"

It is no more beautiful than a nice healthy eyeball would be beautiful without eyelids. As eyelids give an eye character so it's the architecture along a boulevard that makes it a civic asset or the opposite. Up to now no plans for giving eyelids to either North or South Michigan avenue have been revealed.

This lack of either a broad, all embracing scheme or continuity of purpose in those in charge of the bettering of Chicago's outward appearance doesn't seem to trouble the average inhabitant at all. Like the Bandarlog he jumps up and down and says, "There's no city so progressive, so wonderful, so beautiful as ours!" It do it myself before folk from other places, but down in the bottom of my soul I know such talk is flubdub.

London's War Memorial.

In London they're planning a war memorial in the shape of a Victory avenue 4,000 feet long and 175 feet wide, starting from Lambeth bridge, Westminster, intersected with plazas 800 feet wide, dedicated to each of the allies. This broad and stately boulevard will be bordered by beautiful buildings, people's pleasure palaces, a war museum, and other edifices in architectural harmony with the whole scheme. To this end the government recently voted a preliminary $50,000,000. The enterprise is to be begun immediately and finished within a comparatively few years. No twenty-five years of eloquent talk for the British public such as we have enjoyed in Chicago.

In Berlin the war interrupted the construction of what was to be one of the show pleasure drives of that community. But, as a contrast to our leisurely and chatty methods, it is worth recording that in three years the Berliners had constructed a boulevard six or seven miles long going from the Tiergarten towards Grunewald. The roadway was perfect, the bridges were all finished and of attractive design, and the pedestals for the statues which were to border the way were all in place—in three years, mind you, not twenty-five years!

Plan Club for Women.

In still another direction Chicago is far behind the times. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, San Francisco all have one or more clubs for women organized like men's clubs, with well equipped clubhouses, including bedrooms, private dining rooms, first class restaurant service, Turkish baths, swimming pools, manicures, hairdressers, reading rooms, sun parlors, and everything else devised for the comfort and consolation of oppressed womankind. Chicago has no such institution.

The Woman's Athletic club comes nearest to filling the bill, but, as it has no bedrooms, is not in the same category with New York's Colony and Cosmopolitan clubs, or Boston's Chiltern club.

There is on foot a plan to organize such an enterprise. A small group of influential women is developing the idea. Leading this group is one of Chicago's best known, most capable, and energetic young married women, one who has steered so many local sociophilanthropic undertakings to brilliant victory that her name—which may not now be revealed—is synonymous with success. So you may soon hear of a definite project to enlist your interest and support, which scheme, as now devised, promises to supply a long-felt want.

It proposes to be a harbor where many of the well known women's clubs, like the Fortnightly, the Friday club, the Scribblers, the Young Fortnightly, et al., may find refuge. It will give to those of its members who want them most attractive accommodations for a short stay in town—a great boon to many a suburbanite or other out of towner. A squash court for the young and agile is part of the plan. Up to date Turkish and electric light baths are projected. Lounges, tearooms, dining rooms, assembly rooms, and cardrooms will be at the service of members. So keep your eyes and ears open for further information on the subject.

Revive Charity Ball.

Just as we are relaxing from the winter's tension, shedding the alert habits bred of several Liberty loan, Red Cross, and Y. M. C. A. drives, and preparing to sink into the delicious coma of the summer months, come the clarion calls of some of Chicago's most vigorous, intrepid, public spirited social leaders to call attention to plans for next autumn and winter.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers and the women who with her cherish and support that appealing institution, the country home for convalescent crippled children at Prince's Crossing, are going to get up an old fashioned charity ball such as used to be an annual event in Chicago in the seventies and eighties of the last century. It is to be on Nov. 14 and many of the features of those old, simple, cheerful balls are to be revived.

In those early balls the chief event of the evening was the grand march around the hall, a procession composed of most of the prominent people and led by Mrs. George M. Pullman and Mrs. George L. Dunlap. As both of these Chicago grande dames are still "on the carpet" it is to be hoped that once more they may lead us around in a stately parade for the delectation of opulent boxholders.

Novel Affair for Charity.

Once more that Napoleon among women, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, is organizing her cohorts to capture the public in the interests of her favorite charity, the Passavant Memorial hospital. She leaped into fame in 1906 when her Streets of Paris set the high water mark as the biggest, most brilliant, artistic, highly successful philanthropic and money making undertaking that had up to that time been known in Chicago.

Since then whatever she has had a hand in in the way of the civic or philanthropic has been a success. In the recent Victory loan drive in the Twenty-first ward, where she was cochairman with Harold F. McCormick of the ward loan committee, the women under Mrs. Coleman's leadership secured subscriptions amounting to $5,874,650 from 4,421 subscribers, while the men from 8,978 subscribers secured $2,543,000.

Now Mrs. Coleman comes to the fore with what certainly sounds like a most delightful and thoroughly original plan to part us from our dollars with the least possible pain. The idea sprang from Mrs. John A. Carpenter's fertile and perfectly equipped brain. It is to produce at the Coliseum a facsimile of Atlantic City's famous board walk, with the shops, restaurants, movies, and other shows on one side and as much of the sounding sea and shifting sands on the other as may be introduced into the Coliseum. The "push push" chairs will be there in abundance, and some of our finest, sturdiest youth, with blackened faces, will be among the pushers, so we must be discreet in our conversation.

Shops of All Kinds.

There will be shops galore where you can buy toilet articles, lingerie, hats, blouses, frocks, "gents' furnishings," antiques, toys, novelties of all kinds, and already most of these have been bespoke by energetic dames. There will be fortune tellers, cinemas, dance halls, chic and costly restaurants, and the homelier, less expensive joint where you can see your waffles cooking in the window. Pretty girls will sell you balloons, popcorn, ice cream cones, lemonade, matches, and cigarets.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank will be in charge of the entertainment committee, and the Midnight Follies being planned by her promises to break us all of our early to bed habits. There will be a dashing, splashing soda water fountain and a more sedate and meditative tea shop.

The first week in December is the date set for this enterprise, and the money derived from it will be devoted to the building fund of the hospital, whose directors are planning the best and most complete hospital yet devised for the city's big north side. The most striking feature of the hospital will be its provision of less expensive rooms for people of small means. Up to how most hospitals have catered chiefly to the very poor and the very rich—the former bunking together in big wards, the latter secluded in separate and costly rooms. For the man, woman, or child who can only afford to pay, say, $15 a week, yet desires privacy, the Passavant will provide quarters.

MacVeagh Gets Portrait.

By the way, Eames MacVeagh, who bought shares [oh, euphemistic term!] in the portrait Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis offered to paint for the Passavant fund, won the privilege of having his portrait painted by this increasingly eminent young artist, and tomorrow begins his sittings.

Mrs. Davis has been busy this winter, and among the canvases she has turned out were likenesses of Mrs. Bradford Brinton of Dixon, the late Willard Straight [on horseback in his polo outfit], and Arthur Cable [in his aviation uniform], all of which were considered highly satisfactory by those for whom they were painted. They certainly "looked good to us."

Garden Clubs Coming.

The Garden club of Illinois is going to entertain the Garden Clubs of America from June 24 to June 26. Two delegates and other nondelegates from each of the thirty-eight clubs composing this national organization are coming to this annual meeting and will be allotted, à la old church convention customs, among the members of the hostess club. Mrs. Willis Martin of Philadelphia is the president of the national body.

Every one is setting her garden in order from Evanston to Lake Bluff as the principal occupation of the visitors will be to be shown through all the gardens within reach.

Among those who are opening their houses to these 100 visiting garden experts are the Mesdames Walter Brewster, E. L. Ryerson, F. C. Farwell, C. H. McCormick, Joseph Cudahy, Louis Laflin, A. A. Carpenter, James L. Houghteling, Hermon Butler, William G. Hibbard Jr., and Frederick Greeley.

What, by the way, has become of the woman who used to pamper her complexion by donning a thick chiffon veil at the advent of the dangerous March wind? Full well does the writer remember shrouding her face in dark blue, or green, or gray veils in the springtime of life, from March 1 to midsummer, in order to insure a perfect pallor free from tan or freckles.

Thank heavens that we have grown more enlightened and that freckles and sunburn are now courted, not shunned! Also that we can wear short skirts and that the feminine waistline is now as unhampered as that of the men's is a cause for gratitude.

What strange ideas as to the desirable and beautiful have obsessed the world of fashion. "That woman," said a man I know, pointing to one of our exceedingly well dressed women, "was a real swell when I first came to Chicago. She wore the biggest bustle in town."

Go tomorrow to the English room at the Blackstone and buy some of the pretty, useful, quaint articles made in the Favill occupational school by the handicapped! Especially for your summer quarters will you find desirable and lovely things. The charity in question is one of the best, most valuable in its aims and achievements which we have. Mrs. William S. Monroe is in charge of the sale.

HIGH SCHOOL SUMMER COURSE.

THE summer high school is now an established institution here, and yet there are many who are unaware either of its existence or of its methods and opportunities. It grew out of the feeling that, for the young people who do not leave the city during the summer, the vacation is too long, and that idleness begets habits; that the clever ought to be kept busy, and that those who have found high school work hard should have the added assistance which the summer school gives.

It is maintained for a number of different classes and types of students.

It is maintained for the ambitious, energetic pupil who is anxious to graduate from high school in less than four years.

Again, the pupil who has failed in some subject and wishes to make up that failure so as to go on with his regular class in September, may accomplish this through the summer school.

Or the pupil who has almost completed the high school course and by taking work in the summer term can finish his course and receive his high school diploma in August, will find it of great value.

Or the junior college students who are anxious to continue their work during the summer can do so at Crane Junior college. And Chicago teachers who desire to make promotional credits may also attend the Junior college.

Any subject in the high school course of study may be taken in the summer school, and in addition to these high school subjects there will be offered this year at Crane Junior college courses in algebra, analytical geometry, descriptive geometry, physics, chemistry, and college English.

The work in the summer high schools is arranged differently from the work during the year. The day is an hour shorter and is divided into six periods. The pupil is supposed to take two subjects, though he may take only one. Under special conditions he may take three, but this is not advised.

He recites twice a day in each of his two subjects—that is, he recites four periods and has two periods for study. The work is so arranged that he has a study period in which to prepare his second recitation in each subject and since he recites twice in each subject per day he accomplishes as much in eight weeks as he would ordinarily accomplish in sixteen weeks. He even does more, because the work is intensive and the recitation periods longer than during the regular school year. So he secures the same credit that he obtains in the twenty weeks of regular school work.

There are several decided advantages and attractions to summer work. To those who are naturally studious and also to those who because of previous failure must be studious, it offers eight weeks of work free from the usual distractions. There are no social affairs, no entertainments, no rehearsals, no interruptions, but a quiet morning's work done each day. Also, as the classes are smaller the pupil receives more individual work.

If the pupil receives only one subject he remains in school no longer than the subject requires. If his first class does not come until the second period he is not required to be present until that period.

By taking two subjects in the summer school a pupil can accomplish the same amount of work he would otherwise accomplish in a fourth of a regular school year. Two summers' work and he would be able to finish high school in three and one-half years, instead of four. As for the pupil who is entering high school next fall from the grades, the advantage is great. If he begins work in the summer school this summer, attends high school three years, and summer school four summers, he finishes his high school course in three years from this August.

Although the summer school is a part of the free public school system a small tuition is charged. The payment of the tuition is at the rate of $6 for one subject and $12 for two or more subjects. This payment is made in advance.

The daily session begins at 8 o'clock and runs to 1 o'clock. The summer term is eight weeks long, beginning Monday, June 30. There are three high schools offering summer school work: Crane Technical, Lane Technical, and Englewood.

For boys and young men interested in automobile work special courses will be offered in automobile operation, care, and repair.

There will also be eight elementary schools this summer, but they are for pupils who have failed to pass their grades through some reason or other.

For any further information on this subject, or for any information on schools or education, write the School Counselor, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

"I should like to know if making up credits with a private party is as good as the instruction received by a preparatory school, providing one can pass the college examinations? F. B."

Of course the passing of the examinations is the main test. Private instruction is often more rapid than class room work, but hardly as thorough. Then, too, there are some of the preparatory schools which are accredited to the different universities, and if you complete your work with them you do not have to pass an examination to enter certain colleges. Write and tell me what college or university you intend going to and I can give you better advice.

"Will you please give me information regarding the two year college course at Crane Technical High school? Does the work there admit to the state university for the completing of a college course in engineering? Have you a catalogue of the junior college?
"W. J. B."

The courses offered at Crane Junior college are as nearly equivalent to the courses offered at the state university as is practicable. As a result courses successfully completed at Crane are credited at the state university and students are enabled to proceed with their work on exactly the same basis as students who spent their first two years there. Similarly students have been credited at the state universities of Michigan and Wisconsin and at the University of Chicago. I will send you a catalogue as soon as I receive another supply of them. Their engineering courses take up advanced technical subjects with the same opportunities that the freshmen and sophomores have in institutions of engineering.

"Will there be any public grammar schools open this summer vacation? I am asking for a girl of 11 who is in high fourth grade and we want to keep her busy part of the summer, if only for three or four hours a day.
"H. G. F."

There will be eight or nine grammar schools open this summer, although it has not yet been decided which schools will remain open. All the plans will be made by June 1, however, and full details will be published then.

"What trade do you think it would be best for a man of 27 to learn, an electrician's trade or that of a fur cutter? Have been an office clerk since leaving school. Do you think I could make a success of a trade?
"T. W. N."

If you are interested in electricity I should say that electricity would be the best line for you to follow. Fur cutting is hardly in such demand as an electrician's work. I see no reason why you should not make a success at a trade. You are still a young man, with a large part of your life ahead of you, and there is every reason why you should make every effort to increase your salary.

"This spring I graduated from a south side high school and I am desirous of taking up medicine. I live on the south side and could remain at home. Would you advise the U. of C. and Rush Medical for me? And why? What subjects must I have credit for to begin the course at the U. of C.? Can you estimate what it will cost excluding living expenses? R. B. C."

Rush Medical college is an excellent school in every respect. I should advise it for medical training and the University of Chicago for the medical preparatory work. You can enter the university if you have graduated from a Chicago high school. Three years of Latin is necessary for your medical training. The tuition at the university is $50 a quarter, and books and fees add a little to the amount. The tuition at Rush is $60 a quarter. Two years of work at the university is necessary before you start in your medical training.

"I should like special information on the agricultural course offered in the Chicago high schools. How long a course is it? What is a good agricultural college? J. K."

The agricultural course offered in the high schools is two years, and includes English, physiology, wood shop work, agronomy, horticulture, elementary physics or chemistry, botany, science, and both free hand and mechanical drawing. The state universities of Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin offer fine courses in agriculture.

"Please give me information as to whether I need a grammar school education for accounting. Where can I find a school which offers private instruction in grade work? M. A."

A grammar school education is the least equipment with which you should start a course in accounting. The public high schools in Chicago offer a two year course in this subject. If you will send me your address I will send you a list of schools offering private instruction, daily and nightly, in grade subjects.

"How shall I go about getting some copies of back examination questions which have been asked by the board of education, Chicago, in its examinations for grammar school teachers? I am intending to take the examinations shortly to teach in the Chicago schools. I have taught for several years in the country.
K. R. E."

Write to Will Campbell, examiner, board of education, 7 South Dearborn street, Chicago. He will furnish you with all information and some copies of previous examinations. Inclose 10 cents. The examinations are held the last of June.

"Please tell me where I can attend in the evening free classes in English for foreigners. A. F."

The Haven school at Fourteenth street and Wabash avenue has classes for adults, foreign men and women who wish to complete their education and improve their English.

THE EXCESS PROFITS TAX.

In his message to congress Mr. Wilson expressed the conviction that the excess profits tax should be maintained as one of the fundamental means of raising federal revenues. Chicago business men, if we may judge by the interviews printed in the news columns, are almost unanimously in favor of its repeal. The Republican leaders in congress are said to be divided in their views on the question.

We do not think the protest of the business men is merely the outgrowth of the common disinclination to pay taxes; if that were the case we should express our sympathy and pass on. The business men insist that the tax adversely affects the entire country; that it seriously hampers industry and thus retards reconstruction.

For the fiscal year 1918 the excess profits tax ranged from 30 to 80 per cent. It is obvious that so high a tax must lessen the incentive for profit. The result on the one hand is to deter business men from undertaking new enterprises and on the other to lower the general standards of management in the conduct of going concerns.

In a transition period such as the present it is doubtless desirable to restrict speculative activity. But when the restriction serves to prevent the development of legitimate productive industry, then it ceases to be beneficial. There is no doubt that the excess profits tax has had something of this effect. The banks have been loath to lend money for new enterprises involving any hazard—and most new enterprises involve some hazard—because even if the business proved successful there was still the tax collector to reckon with. The part of wisdom has been to lend the money where there was no risk.

The lessening of incentive for profit has proved still more undesirable with respect to existing industries. Executives found it was hardly worth while to devote attention to a close figuring of costs. Labor may have benefited, but not the country as a whole. The nation must suffer when the general standard of efficiency is lowered.

These bad effects are aggravated by the fact that profits reinvested in a business are still subject to the tax. Under these circumstances no manufacturer is anxious to enlarge his plant unless he has to. It is this provision which arouses the greatest dissatisfaction among business men. In ordinary times a certain percentage of income is commonly set aside for improvements; now it has to be set aside to pay the excess profits tax.

We can undestand the supposed necessity for preventing reinvestment as a means of evading the tax. But on the whole we think the resulting expansion of industry and business generally might be more desirable than the collection of the tax. The government does not have to rely solely on excess profits for its revenues.

If the tax is to be retained—and we are not advocating its entire abolition—it might be a very good plan to allow a certain amount of exemption in the case of profits that have been reinvested. This would have a decided effect in stimulating the construction of new buildings and the purchase of new machinery. The equipment in many factories has been allowed to become obsolescent because of the excess profits tax and the present high prices. An exemption such as that suggested would furnish an incentive to replace this equipment regardless of prices.

Any decrease in the revenue from the excess profits tax will, of course, have to be made good elsewhere, and we think the income and inheritance taxes should bear the chief burden. The term "excess profits" is rather unfortunate because it suggests a moralistic attitude, an attitude of disapproval. As a matter of fact, these profits, if they are not absorbed by the government, are either reinvested or eventually distributed among security holders, who will, of course, have to share part of them with the government through the income tax.

These security holders for the most part belong to the wealthier classes, and the advantage of taxing their incomes is that we are taking money which is often regarded as money to be spent for luxuries—whereas if we tax the corporate income we are taking money which might otherwise be used for the development of industry.

Under the existing law the excess profits tax for the fiscal year 1919 will be very much smaller than that for 1918. Nevertheless we believe all the evidence shows that it ought still further to be modified. The proposal of the senate ways and means committee to obtain the testimony of representative business men on the subject is an excellent one.

WERE LIVES THROWN AWAY?

The question of whether lives were lost or casualties suffered unnecessarily just prior to the armistice has risen from time to time, and finally has been given official attention in the form of answers by the commander in chief to questions put to the war department officially by Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the military affairs committee.

The fact seems to be as follows: the armistice, it will be remembered, was to take effect from 11 o'clock in the morning of November 11th. General Pershing, to whom Senator Chamberlain's inquiries were forwarded, replies that firing, in fact, ceased at that time except in the case of an isolated unit which did not receive notification until 11:10 and in this position the firing continued until 11:30.

It is not, however, the period immediately after the time at which the armistice was to begin but the period between the actual signing of the armistice and 11 o'clock that has raised the sharpest question. The point in brief is: were casualties suffered after officers knew that the armistice had been signed but before the hour at which the armistice was to take effect? Or, in another form, did officers order their men into action when they knew an armistice had been signed and fighting would stop at 11?

General Pershing's report shows that firing continued along the American front up to 11 a. m.; that in the case of two American divisions with the French army in Belgium "different conditions existed and the firing was not continued in full force due to the fact that no opposition was encountered to the continued advance."

The implication here is that a continued advance was expected of the American troops and that opposition was offered by the Germans and active fighting continued after the American command knew the armistice had been signed up to the moment at which it took effect.

This seems to be borne out by the statement of officers recently quoted, including an officer in the 26th division whose letter has been published in the Voice of the People. At 9:27 a. m. on November 11th, he says, his battalion was set for an attack when a courier arrived with information that an armistice had been signed and that the attack was off. But three-quarters of an hour later, at 10:15, orders came to attack and the battalion advanced under enemy artillery fire, proceeding several hundred yards until 11 o'clock. Owing to fog, no casualties were suffered in this battalion.

In response to the query as to whether British and French officers ordered firing stopped as soon as they were informed the armistice had been signed, Gen. Pershing replies that while this may have taken place in isolated instances such orders were not authorized and no such definite cases are in fact known.

Senator Chamberlain asked if there were military reasons for continuing fire up to the last moment, to which Gen. Pershing replies: "There were military reasons for continuing the firing up to the very hour the armistice went into effect, and orders were issued from these headquarters to insure such action. These orders were dictated by the necessity for taking every opportunity to render certain the complete acceptance by the enemy of the armistice, and were, undoubtedly, concurred in by the allied commander in chief, who, himself, issued orders to the same effect."

To this reply Gen. March adds "Gen. Pershing's reply includes a quotation of the orders of Marshal Foch, directing that the pressure be maintained along the whole front up to the last moment."

There is an ambiguity here in that while Gen. Pershing's reply says that the orders of the American command were "undoubtedly concurred in" by Marshal Foch, Gen. March cites an order of Marshal Foch directing that pressure be maintained along the whole front. Such an order, we assume, would be binding upon Gen. Pershing, but his own statement implies independent action and concurrence on the part of Foch.

Civilians, especially those whose sons were killed or wounded in attacks delivered after the signing of the armistice, will find it difficult to accept any theory of military necessity put forth in explanation. But civilians seldom have a grasp of military conditions. Perhaps it would be well to expand the statement of Gen. Pershing on this point so as to place more fully before the civilian mind the reasons for the action taken. We cannot believe that lives would be hazarded unless these reasons were practical and proportioned to the sacrifice required.

Editorial of the Day

THE GREAT MAN.

[From the State Journal, Lansing, Mich.]

"He had been 'fussing,' as he expressed it, around a motor that morning and the night before, and had inhaled some of the gasoline fumes. He stated the fact as simply as if it were common for millionaires to put on overalls and work around greasy machinery. His headache powder is a brisk walk in the open air, but what he knows as a 'walk' most men would call a hike.

"He made a bee line to the town limits and struck out cross-country. Being a lithe man with not an ounce of superfluous flesh and very agile in his movements, little impediments like farm fences did not impede him at all. He scaled them easily, even the barbed wire ones, one hand on top of the fence post and then a flying leap which allowed even the tails of his spring overcoat to clear.

"He saw everything as he went along, noted the character of the soil, discussed the advantages of draining, told about the tiling machine he used on his farm at home. He went aside to look at a small patch of mandrake growing in the fence corners—the May-apple of ordinary fame. He followed with his eye a bird that passed with a piece of string in her mouth, noting which tree she had selected as the site of her nest.

"There was no letup in his speed. Plowed land and sandy soil retarded him not at all. He seemed to neutralize the difficulties of the ground by putting more strength in his stride. He spoke freely of his ideas of life, of the happiness of making things 'go,' of the satisfaction of giving people a good chance in life.

"He had struck into a road and was nearing the town when he saw an elderly man hoeing in a little garden, and the two held converse over the fence. The gardener was wholly unaware of the identity of his friendly visitor."

And who was this mighty and yet simple man who walked his headache off, who deigned to stop and speak to a simple gardener? Why, it's our old friend Henry Ford. And how do we know all these wonderful facts about this remarkable character? Because he himself says so, or rather his own little private publicity bureau does.

The quotation is taken from Bulletin No. 6 sent out by the so-called Mount Clemens News bureau, which was so generously organized by Ford to furnish the papers of the nation with the facts about the Ford-Tribune trial. The bulletin goes on to tell of the decision of Mr. Ford to move the offices of his gigantic business to Mount Clemens, so he could be on hand, as it were, to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer.

Such a story sent out about Mr. Ford by his own publicity agent should certainly remove all doubt as to Mr. Ford being an anarchist. Who ever heard of a bloody anarchist bragging about taking a walk and stooping so low as to talk to a man with a hoe? An anarchist admits he is of the lower type, and his great ambition is to help the common mass by the destruction of government. It is only royalty and presidents of whom stories are told of their democratic ways, and now here comes Henry Ford putting himself in the same class. This should definitely settle for all time that the great manufacturer is not an anarchist, nor even a socialist, but rather a king of mankind who acts like normal beings occasionally and then tells of it.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR.

While it is generally conceded President Wilson's fourteen points contain much that is good, it is not straining the truth to say there are people in this neck of the woods who would be more interested in a man with fourteen pints.—El Paso Times.

ONE may predict the time, within a year or two, when the industrial problem will be solved. It will be solved when the working man, whether he works with his hands or his feet or his head, has recovered his long lost interest in working. Carpenters, for example, will be contented when they take a tenth as much pride in doing good work as Adam Bede took. Work keeps the race as sane as it can be, and good work used to keep it contented. There is less contentment nowadays because there is less honest work.

THE soi-disant human race appears to its best advantage, perhaps its only advantage, in work. The race is not ornamental, nor is it over-bright, having only enough wit to scrape along with. Work is the best thing it does, and when it seeks to avoid this, its reason for existence disappears.

THE short working day, however, has its advantages. It affords to all of us more time to watch an asphalt pavement being laid, or a safe hoisted to a window, or an excavation made for a building. To these things we seem to be able to give a complete attention, a concentration to which we are strangers in office or in shop.

RENAISSANCE OF A CLASSIC WHEEZE.

"On Such a Night—"

Sir: Memory jostles as I read of Pall Mall, Tennessee, in connection with Alvin York. When I was thereabouts, some fifteen years ago, that slight aneurism on Wolf River held forth no promise of distinction. Nearby—a bagatelle of ten mountain miles—is Jamestown, colloquially Jimtown, where Mark Twain's father kept a tavern and where Colonel Mulberry Sellers loosed his exuberance. At the time of my visit Uncle Wade Erwin was the most distinguished citizen, and his caustic tongue was the terror and quotation source of the region. He was the Marshall Field of Jamestown, and he kept a force of a dozen canine floorwalkers constantly employed in his store. These houn' dawgs would accompany the customer from counter to counter, growling ominously, causing the average stranger to buy promptly and to pay cash. I could regale you for a night—the while you would sit breathless, or perhaps breathing stertorously—with stories of Uncle Wade. Cudjo's Cave—you recall Trowbridge's thriller about it—is close by.

And I? I was in Paris a year ago to-day.

Along the streets the spring had lit
Its candles straight and white
In rows of trim horse-chestnut trees;
And when at nine came night,
After the smoky sun had set
Behind the Ferris Wheel,
We watched the pin-points of barrage
Beside long-mourning Lille.
The faint infrequent lights of blue
Showed emptier yet the "Place,"
But red and white and blue festoons
Claimed Strassbourg for Alsace.
Then sympathies flashed quick and sure
Through the electric air:

I wish that I were there!

The speed of the train decreases and it clatters over switches in the yards. The conductor thrusts his head in the door and shouts: "Ef any you folks goin'ter forget and leave things on' this train don't forget to leave your name and address, and, if you want them sent by parcels post, leave stamps, so we can send 'em to you."

"Yes, I'm the man that tells 'em that," laughingly admitted J. H. Morgan, conductor of the Macon, Dublin & Savannah railroad. "You see, we used to have lots of trouble about folks leaving packages. So I decided something must be done to remind them. Since then we have had little trouble. You see, lots of people come to Macon and buy things. Often when they get off the train they have so many bundles they can hardly carry them. But when I warn them they begin counting, and it's mighty seldom that they forget anything now."

SOME EYE TROUBLES.

FLOATING SPECKS—The scientific name for these floating images is muscæ. They are of irregular shape and size and constantly change position. Most of them travel upward with a sharp, rapid movement, and then float slowly downward. They are enlarged images of small floating particles in the humors of the eye and are not figments of the imagination. They move about just as they seem to do.

They are of no special significance, and nothing can be done for them. In fact, nothing need be done. Most people who have them pay no attention to them and are just as well off. Neurasthenics sometimes manage to get a good deal worked up about them. No one denies that they would be better off if they paid no attention to their floating specks. Some persons with fears as to results of certain bad habits read into these specks dire warnings. They are just as likely to correct the bad habits if they disregard the warnings.

Perhaps persons who use their eyes too much and too strenuously notice specks more than other people. Perhaps they should accept them as warnings of strain and use their eyes less or arrange for resting periods. But even with this group the specks bear only remotely on the case. The eyes sense the tire, and, attention having been focussed on them, specks hitherto unnoted come to be observed.

Near-sighted persons are troubled by specks more than others. The theory is that the eyeball being too long the humors do not fill it as completely as they should and small particles are detached into the fluid and also the long eyeball causes the shadows of the specks to appear unduly large.

SPARKS OF LIGHT—These are of different significance. The trouble is generally in the brain or optic nerve. If these occur with any degree of frequency it will be safest to have the eyes carefully examined. While in the majority of cases it will be found that the symptom is of no significance, in some cases trouble of consequence will be found. Fixed shadows in the eyes are more significant than the floating specks. They not infrequently mean scars on the cornea, partial cataract, and some other organic trouble.

RED LIDS—Red lids may result from ill health or from eyestrain or from the two combined. The first treatment is generally aimed at the lids themselves. The usual remedy is to wash with a saturated solution of boracic acid. There is no objection to this. In fact, as a wash for the margin of the eyelids this solution has some advantages over soap and water. As a wash for the eyeball itself it is almost as good as nature's wash—the tears. Most of the eye washes on the market are colored solutions of boracic acid and have all the advantages of such preparations, with their high cost as their only disadvantage.

The limitation of such treatment is the fact that while the expression of the trouble is local, the real difficulty lies elsewhere. Some of the cases cannot be cured except by the wearing of properly fitted glasses. Some must be given tonics or forced to exercise in the open air or to take some other constitutional treatment. Rather strangely, red eyelids and headache—both signs of eyestrain—are seldom associated. The people with red eyelids, due to eyestrain, seldom have eyestrain headaches, and vice versa.

STYES—A stye is due to an infection of the root of the eyelash. It is advisable to clean the margin of the lids with soap and water or with borax acid solution and then to apply a yellow oxide of mercury ointment. Most of the proprietary ointments for styes contain oxide of mercury. Oftimes styes can be aborted by touching the hair follicle with carbolic acid or a strong solution of sulphate of zinc. No one but a medical man should make such an application. It is too hazardous for a layman to undertake. The eyes should not be poulticed for styes. To do so is to spread infection to other eyelashes and to cause a succession of styes. Whenever styes come repeatedly it is reasonably certain either that glasses are needed or else that some constitutional treatment is demanded.

CONJUNCTIVITIS—The thin membrane lining of the lids and covering the front of the eyeball is known as conjunctiva. Inflammation of this layer is known as conjunctivitis. The eyes may be bloodshot as the result of exposure to smoke fumes, gases, heat, and glaring light. Conjunctivitis may result from foreign bodies or other irritaints, including irritating glasses. If the trouble is due to foreign bodies or irritating bodies these should be cleaned out. Perhaps something is gained by washing with boracic acid solution. If the irritation is due to mustard the washing is done with a weak Dakin's solution. If the trouble is due to glare or to fumes the wearing of goggles helps. If the eyes are bloodshot from eyestrain, as occasionally happens, it is necessary to have glasses fitted. In some cases of goiter the eyes are bloodshot.

The more important forms of conjunctivitis are those due to infections and the most important form of infection is that with gonococcus. As most gonococcus infections occur in the newborn, most states now have a law requiring that the eyes of every newborn babe shall be washed with boracic acid solution and then have two drops of nitrate of silver solution dropped in them. If the eyes are not infected no harm is done. If they are infected but not yet inflamed the cocci are killed and the eye are saved. The board of health generally furnishes the silver solution. Since this form of eye trouble appears before the baby is 5 days old, the birth of every baby should be registered within one day of birth and the solution of silver obtained for use if it has not been obtained in advance. Gonococcal conjunctivitis, known also as ophthalmia neonatorum and also as blindness of the newborn, very rapidly produces ulcers of the cornea and often causes sloughing of the eyeball. It is responsible for one-quarter of all the blindness. The slightest evidence of sore eyes in a newborn baby must have immediate attention.

Adults are subject to infection of the eyes by gonococci. So violent is the infection that Posey says that but 50 per cent of eyes so infected recover without loss of sight. If an adult gets such an infection he cannot temporize or take chances. He must go to bed at once, have his well eye sealed in, and active treatment given the infected eye. Posey says: "I cannot remember to have seen one eye saved unless the patient was confined to bed from the very first and received constant and skillful treatment until the danger had passed."

There are other violent acute infections of the conjunctiva. Whenever such a condition develops the man should go at once to a physician who will examine the pus bacteriologically. This can usually be done in a few minutes. If the germ found is the gonococcus silver salts are almost specific; if the pneumococcus, quinine salts are almost specific; if the Morits Axenfeld bacillus, zinc salts are almost specific. All these infections are violent and none of them should be neglected.

PINK EYE—This is an infection of the conjunctiva usually due to the Koch-Weeks bacillus. This disease generally occurs in epidemic form. In a given case the eyes are red and scratchy, tears are abundant. The disease lasts ten to fourteen days, and then subsides spontaneously.

TRACHOMA—It is probable that most of the cases of old fashioned granulated lids were cases of trachoma, for this disease has been existent in widely scattered sections of our population for a long time. Recently we have been somewhat agitated by a considerable increase of the disease due to importation of the infection in the persons of laborers from southern Europe. It seems probable that the disease came from Egypt and that Napoleon's soldiers returning from their Egyptian campaigns spread it over southern Europe. It is infectious. The infection causes granulated lids.

To avoid it Posey advises the following: "Keep in good physical condition. Have large windows which will admit plenty of fresh air and sunshine into your home. Sleep with your windows open even in winter and keep the room where you live well aired. Wash your face and hands several times a day and keep the finger nails clean. Never touch your face with your hands unless they are absolutely clean. Do not use the family towel, especially where there are cases of trachoma. Have your own towel and handkerchief and do not let any one else use them. Boil your handkerchiefs before adding them to the wash. Do not allow your clothing or bed clothes to become soiled with discharges from your eyes. When your eyes are discharging pus collect the discharges on cloths which can be burned and stay away from other members of your family as much as possible. Always make sure the wash basin is clean before using it. Do not sleep with persons having sore eyes or use bed clothes that have been used by them. Do not wear the clothing of others or use their eating utensils without previous cleansing. Advise any one with sore eyes to have them treated at once. If the eyes become inflamed apply at once for treatment to the nearest hospital or dispensary or to your own physician."

Some of these directions apply to persons who would escape trachoma and others to persons having it and who would like to spare others.

FARSIGHTEDNESS—The farsighted eye is one in which the eyeball is flatter and shorter from before back than normal. In this condition the lens focuses the image back of the retina. There is a muscle called the ciliary, which changes the shape of the lens so as to get the image on the retina, but continued overaction of this muscle strains the eyes, injures their structures, causes the muscle to become too strong, produces headaches and sometimes causes cross-eyes, or squint. Glasses should be fitted and worn slowly. To fit farsighted eyes properly in persons under 40 the use of atropin or haemotropin or some form of drops is necessary. No harm results from such use.

NEARSIGHTEDNESS—The nearsighted eye is too long from before back and the image is focused on a plane lying in front of the retina. There is even more need for the wearing of glasses in nearsightedness. Eye strain, close fine work, overuse—all these make nearsightedness grow steadily worse unless relieved by glasses. It is the nearsighted who are able to read without glasses when they attain old age. While they do not see clearly they are able to make it fairly well without glasses, probably for the first time in their lives.

PRESBYOPIA—This is the form of eye defect which develops in persons as they grow older. It results from hardening of the lens. Presbyopia advances most rapidly in persons between 50 and 60 years of age. In older persons its progress is much slower.

ALLEY HAS NO OUTLET.

Chicago, May 31.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Can you inform me why the alley between Prairie and Indiana avenues south of Sixtieth street is blocked and barred, making traffic herein impossible south of Sixtieth street? What property owner ever secured permission to do this, for what reason, and does the city secure compensation for this? M. S.

The record in the bureau of maps and plats shows that a sixteen foot alley, about 228 feet long, runs from a point about 250 feet north of Sixty-first street to a point about 119 feet south of Sixtieth street, which is without outlet upon any public highway.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

THE "UMBERTOS."

Kansas City, Mo., June 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As an observer on the side lines I cannot help but think that the disgruntled party newspapers of the United States are responsible in a large measure for the outbreaks of our Umbertos. These people do not read the text of your articles of attack, but the spirit which provokes the writing of them—no, I do not think it is exactly that, either, for if they could divine the human littleness which actuates the many clever political cartoons and articles of partisan newspaper propaganda, the Umbertos and Czolgoszs would see themselves in their proper light and go their way seeking rational occupations.

Has it ever occurred to you the effect the printed utterances of our emotional intellectuals might have on the mental tinder of the numerous Umbertos among us? I mean the sayings of the trained editorial writers on the newspapers throughout the country, particularly during those times when the political party which they support is not in power. And as for bolshevikism—why it isn't in it with the American newspaper when it is not on the band wagon. Though they may not state in so many words a bolsheviki platform, their spirit is the same.

The chronic misanthrope can always find in the press an indorsement for his grievances, and it does not take much to start sinister promptings either.

The specious printed attacks one so often sees may not be as direct in their intent, but I do not think they are so far removed from the printed words that prompted the hand that threw the Haymarket bomb.

Feed hate and dissatisfaction long enough, something is sure to happen. The policy of the Umbertos is one of hate, and hate when collectively aroused, as we all know, becomes a serious menace, but did it ever occur to you the many million of educated people in this country who are stirred to a crafty hatred by the mention of only two words—the words—Democrat and Wilson.

Of course, what you write in the columns of your paper is ably expressed, and in consequence receives the plaudits of your immediate confreres—but do not take that as an appraisement of your wisdom.

As with yourself, the Umbertos look upon this country as a free country. And the word freedom is indeed a flexible word. We all interpret it according to our lights and personal motives. The Umbertos interpret the word to justify their unpleasant threats of tyranny—the newspapers long ago put into practice that same interpretation. For the tyranny of the press has been a malady from which this country has suffered for many years.

"ZONING FOR CHICAGO."

Chicago, June 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial "Zoning for Chicago" is the most beneficial step that can be taken in the interest of the home owners of this city. The Chicago beautiful plan is very necessary, transportation system is also vital, but nothing will so affect those who have invested money in small or large homes as to know that businesses of various characters will not locate in close proximity to them. I believe that many improvements would be made if we felt assured that in the future our home streets would remain as they are. Chicago has avenues of trade spreading out in every direction. It would work no hardship to build these streets up solid with businesses, small or large, confining trade to them entirely.

The writer has been through an experience recently where a lumber yard was to be erected on a corner of a desirable residence street, which would have certainly spoiled its home environment. Through the efforts of many this plan was defeated, but efforts of this character cannot always be depended upon.

I assure you I am extremely pleased to see a paper with the influence of The Tribune start the ball rolling for the zoning system, which should be put through without delay. Will you kindly tell us what opposes its immediate conception?

NONFICTION.

"The Amenities of Book Collecting" [Atlantic Monthly Press], by A. Edward Newton.

NEWTON A. FUESSLE has written in "The Flail" [Moffat Yard] a story of Chicago which deserves a place on the very short shelf which shelters the really good things that have been written about our city of youth. It is a remarkably good first book. He writes of the north side German district in a clear, understanding and sympathetic way, devoid of all sentimentality. The life of his hero at the University of Chicago is a trifle bizarre, perhaps, but it is recorded with a faithfulness for detail and an honesty of intention which would be evident even to those who think the name is Chicago university.

His story is an argument for the premise that German blood will tell, and as propaganda for the Americanization of Teutons it isn't a bad novel, but as a novel it could be better propaganda. His hero, after reaching the peak of a success built upon his inherited imperialistic tendencies, realizes his criminality in the moment when his wife, brought back from death, reproaches him for not letting her slip into the valley of forgetfulness. His conversion is almost too immediate and complete.

"The Flail" is, however, a sincere study of a German-American boy and his reactions to life in Chicago, and if the story of his manhood seems less convincing it is not because Mr. Fuessle's sincerity diminishes but probably because the man is less interesting to him than the boy. Certainly, with "The Flail" Newton Fuessle places himself among the promising young American novelists.

Here is an excerpt from a most interesting letter which Mr. Fuessle wrote me: "Without even a redeeming twinkle in the eye, I constantly have people ask me if 'The Flail' is autobiographical. This, despite the fact that an affirmative answer would set me down as a self-confessed petty-larcener, scoundrel, woman-chaser, wife-maltreater, and one guilty of treason. May I not say to Chicago, through you, that 'The Flail' is NOT autobiographical. My people are not roughnecks. Becker street is an imaginary street. None of the Dohmers are drawn from members of my family. I have no brother like Roabert, no sister like Alma. With Theophile Gautier I protest with a roar against the naive and ingenuous assumption that everything a fiction writer sets down on paper is an excerpt from his life. Why, it is even suspected that, like Rudolph Dohmer, I am making $35,000 a year!"

"Winesburg, Ohio," [Huebsch], Sherwood Anderson's new book, is almost something new under the sun. It is neither novel, nor a collection of short stories, nor a group of character sketches. It is a combination of them all, a sort of green room haunted by the spirits of the players with their make-up still on floating in, one by one, with their lines over but not forgotten, with their eyes set toward the moment when they will forget their parts and their stuffy stage clothes and come forth their everyday selves, and yet with a keen sense that the play—life in Winesburg, Ohio—is the thing. The characters are remarkably distinct and individual, the atmosphere of a small town is almost uncannily preserved in words, and through the apparently disconnected episodes there is the sturdy cable of Winesburgness. It is an intensively real and sound record of small town life.

The libraries for French children to which you contributed through the public library—or should have if you didn't—have been started on their joy giving way through the Jardin d'Enfants Unit of the American Red Cross. A letter from the director of the unit says that the libraries are being selected with great care and that the children will themselves write to their benefactors.

"John Ayscough," whose "French Windows" [Longmans Green] has gone into four editions in America, will lecture next Sunday afternoon (June 15) at Powers' theater under the auspices of the Big Sisters. "John Ayscough" is in reality the Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis Bickerstaffe-Drew, senior chaplain of the British forces, with the rank of colonel.

A complete and comprehensive study of the Gary school system has been made by Abraham Flexner and Frank P. Bachman, and is available in an excellent book, "The Gary Schools," published by the General Education Board of New York. Since New York turned down the plan for trying the Gary system little has been said or written of it. This book more than compensates the world for that comparative silence.

Constance Garnett is making for Chatto and Windus of London a selection from Anton Chekov's letters. She will have it ready within a year and it will probably be published in this country by the Macmillan company, who have brought out her translations of "The Tales of Chekov."

Popular actors have cigars named for them, statesmen have streets and towns as their namesakes, but for the first time, so far as I know, an American author has had, within a few years of his death, a hotel named for him. "The O. Henry" opened this week in Greensboro, N. C., with ceremonies in which Mrs. Sidney Porter, Mrs. Cesare, the author's daughter, and Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, his friend and biographer, took part. "The O. Henry" ought to deposit "The Four Million" on the spot sacred to The old Gid-eon Bi-ble, the dust cov-erd Bi-ble, that un-Gid-dy Gid-e-ons plant in ho-tels.

As a memorial to O. Henry the American Society of Arts and Sciences will award a prize of $500 to the author of the best short story written by an American and published in America during 1919. The committee which has charge of the competition consists of Blanche Colton Williams, Edward J. Wheeler, and Merle St. Croix Wright.

In a London letter from Hugh Walpole, whose "The Secret City" [Doran] is said by those who know Russia and the Russians to be a particularly keen and fair picture of them, in speaking of a new volume of poetry by John Freeman, says: "I myself would place Mr. Freeman easily in the first half dozen of the younger poets, my other five being Ralph Hodgson, Walter de la Mare, W. H. Davies, Robert Nichols, and T. C. Squire." Queer choice, isn't it? Especially as W. H. Davies is a "younger poet" only by grace of not having been writing poetry all his life, and—but every man is entitled to his favorite poets. So no more.

THE SADDEST OF ALL

by Marie, H.M., Queen of Roumania

IT was during the winter 1917. A day of intense cold. With one of my daughters I was taking my daily drive, my motor full of provisions for the poor. A great sack of sugar lay heaped up at my feet and another of sweet biscuits; there were also packets of cigarets in quantities, as my people care for tobacco almost as much as for their daily bread. I had also a large provision of flannel shirts, woolen gloves, stockings, and mufflers; my motor was certainly an unusual sight.

In spite of the biting wind and of the precarious state of the roads, I told my chauffeur to leave the town and venture along one of the highways upon which I knew that troops and transports were continually trudging; many a misery had I already met toiling along that road. . . .

The sky was dark and threatening; in cruel blasts the wind cut our faces, making our eyes smart; it was difficult to raise one's head—the cold was only bearable when one kept one's nose buried in one's furs; all the more reason to be out on such a day in search of the different miseries that crawled along the roads.

From far we saw a small troop of soldiers winding its way up the hill towards us.

Even at a distance there was something sinister about its appearance, something weary and discouraged; something that gave one a feeling of anguish, as though those men coming towards us had nothing more to do with hope. . . .

SLOWLY they came, carrying heavy logs of wood on their backs. The road we were driving on was twisting; from time to time those weary climbers were hidden from sight, but each time they reappeared on the horizon the same feeling of anguish filled our hearts.

At last we came up with them, and all of them stood still to watch us pass, straightening their bended backs, easing their shoulders of the burden they carried. Those men were prisoners, prisoners from many lands!

Haggard eyed, with sunken cheeks, covered with torn and tattered uniforms that one and all had taken the color of the earth, rags wrapped about their heads and feet, they stared at us, and their look was haunted as though they were gazing along endless stretches of misery before their eyes could rest upon our faces. Something fierce and hungry that reminded one of starving animals kept at bay was also in their look.

We passed—we did not stop, for were not these men enemies, enemies from different lands . . . but we had become silent, something like a great weight had descended on our shoulders, and the wind seemed colder, and darker the sky—we could not forget the expression of those many, many hungry, hopeless eyes. . . .

"We shall turn," I said, and then again there was silence.

"They were cold and hungry," said my daughter, "and they were carrying heavy weights on their backs."

"My sacks of sugar and biscuits have been freshly filled today; do you think there would be enough?" was the question I asked her.

"We could always give as much as we have," she answered.

"Drive quickly!" I cried to my servants, "and stop when you reach those men with the heavy logs on their backs."

And so it was that we came up again with those weary climbers and this time we did not pass them by, but we stopped.

AT first they did not understand what we were doing; they could not comprehend that those hands full of sugar, of biscuits and cigarets were for them—for them, the outcasts, the aliens, the forgotten. . . . But when they understood a cry went up to the heavens, a cry that was half blessing, half curse, and in an instant our motor was surrounded by a moving mass of ghastly faces; trembling, half-frozen hands with greedy fingers were stretched out towards us, whilst the big logs of wood the miserable creatures were carrying moved about dangerously close to our heads.

We were entirely shut in by a screen of haggard countenances whilst the sky above us was darkened by the burdens they carried on their shoulders. A somewhat precarious position, for indeed those men were like famished wolves and in their extraordinary eagerness not to be forgotten their gestures of course were none too gentle, nor polite!

The sentinels on guard and my own servants showed signs of justified anxiety, for the assault upon our motor was certainly somewhat violent and undisciplined and there was danger that those desperate men with the heavy logs on their shoulders should get completely out of hand.

It was both a terrible and pathetic scene. No wonder those responsible for our safety did not look on without apprehension; certainly at that moment my daughter and I were at the mercy of that excited, screaming, jostling mob; but I felt that with perfect calm and kind words those half savage outcasts were best kept in check.

We gave, and gave all that we had, with full hands, more and more; there was enough for all, though of course those who were nearest had a better chance and it is not to be denied that often our offerings were almost fiercely torn out of our hands. We had begun to give somewhat imprudently, so that no order could be kept amongst the ragged ranks. Words in many different languages were cried into our ears and all while those heavy logs of wood were bobbing, bobbing dangerously over our heads. . . .

BUT there came a moment when I had no more to distribute; my bags were emptied. I lifted up both hands, palms outwards, to show that my provisions had run out, that I had come to the end of my resources, and the excited mob fell back like the tide of a surging sea over which a calm suddenly falls.

"Thank you, thank you, kindly, ladies; may God's blessing be with you. We were very hungry and very cold. . . ."

"It is not because you are prisoners that you are cold and hungry," I answered sadly. "Our own are also cold and hungry and insufficiently clothed!"

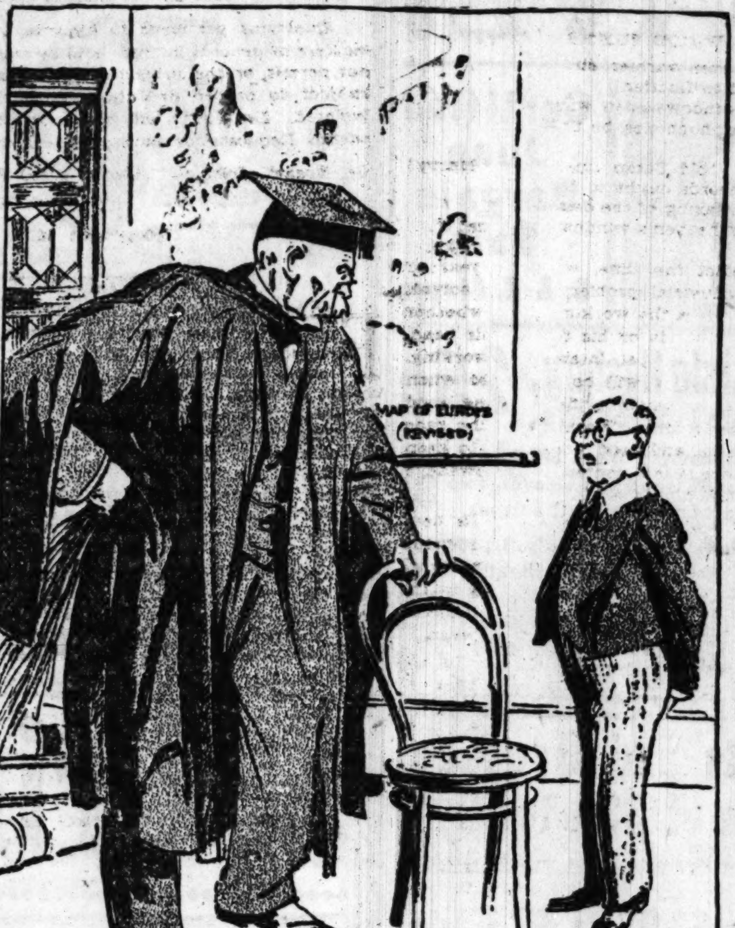
And yet I knew that to be prisoner was the saddest fate of all!

I took one more look at those terrible faces, at the dull hopelessness of those many eyes, and I thought of our own prisoners scattered over many lands, and I wondered if any one would stop on the high road and give them food and good words. . . .

Then we drove on again, and the extraordinary scene we had just witnessed was as a nightmare risen from worlds of despair that war alone can create . . . and turning my eyes to the relentless heavens, the same eternal old question rose like a cry to my lips: "O! Why? Why? O! Why? . . ."

THE GERMAN COUNTER PROPOSALS

[From London Opinion.]



Headmaster Clemenceau—"Now, then, bend over!"
The Culprit—"Excuse me, but I have some alternative proposals to make."

GERMAN SAMOA

by Mary H. Kraut

THE decision of the tribunal which has submitted its ultimatum to Germany presents what might be called a curious study in retribution. Silesia goes to Poland, once parceled out amongst the stronger European powers. France in Alsace and Lorraine receives her own again; Italy in the ultimate acquisition of Fiume obtains an important port in the Adriatic—compensation for the prolonged aggressions of Austria. But results are not confined to Europe. They reach out and affect the uttermost isles of the sea. Even the United States has received belated redress for contemptuous insults long endured at the hands of the universal adversary. The scene of our initial conflict with German imperialism was far-off Samoa, lying near the equator in the Pacific.

The contest of England and the United States disputing its absolute control of that fertile group of islands, in view of the tremendous events of the last five years, may seem unimportant. But in the light of the present readjustment of authority that conflict was sinister and significant.

It is no exaggeration to regard it as the preliminary move in a prearranged seizure of lands, anywhere and everywhere, that could be made to yield a profitable revenue to the imperial German government. The chief exports of Samoa under the triple rule were copra and cotton, almost all of which were controlled by Germans and were marketed in Hamburg. Within the last ten years this trade had greatly increased, and the thrifty Germans were sending out their well educated younger sons as permanent settlers, whose children should inherit their holdings after them.

IN 1839 the first survey was made by Lieut. Charles Wilkes, who commanded a remarkable scientific expedition dispatched upon a purely scientific mission; fitted out with all the necessary equipment in use at that time and carrying a company of highly skilled men. This famous expedition gave to the world its first accurate knowledge of Samoa.

In his admirable report to our government in 1913, Commander W. M. Crose, the naval governor of Tutuila, we are informed that commercial agencies had been established in Apia, the capital, in 1850 by the English, Americans, and Germans. The English and American agents, so far as is known, confined themselves to their legitimate business, while the Germans at once began their intrigues for greater authority. At that time, with millions of miles of uncultivated lands and unlimited resources, hardly able to supply the demands of our home market, we were not greatly interested, if at all, in foreign trade, especially in so remote a region as Samoa. Consequently, no great results followed the establishment of the agency, so far as we were concerned. Mauga, the head chief of Tutuila, however, when Capt. Richard Meade visited that island in the Naragansett in 1872, wishing to establish friendly relations with the United States, offered our government the privilege of establishing a naval station at Pago-Pago, on the island of Tutuila. The offer was not accepted until long afterwards.

In 1873 Col. A. B. Steinberger—a man evidently of German origin—was sent out to Samoa to make a report of existing conditions, etc., and again in the following year, with a letter and presents from President Grant for the chiefs. These were delivered and Steinberger's authority, so far as our government was concerned, ended there. But he returned to Samoa and took it upon himself, personally, to reorganize the government, an act which was promptly repudiated by the United States. It led to such friction with the English and Germans that he was seized and deported by the captain of an English ship.

Except for the manner of its formation, Gov. Crose states that the Steinberger government was the best that the islands had ever known. In 1878 Mamea, a high chief, was sent to Washington and a treaty was concluded between the islands and the United States. This treaty gave the United States the privilege of establishing a naval station at Pago-Pago for coal and marine supplies for our navy and merchant marine, the Samoan government surrendering all jurisdiction within the port adverse to the exercise of such rights, which, it will be perceived, did not give us absolute authority.

ON THE other hand, the fifth article of the treaty provided that in case of difference between Samoa and another nation with which we were at peace, "the United States should employ its good offices for the purpose of adjusting those differences upon a satisfactory and solid foundation." Of this article Gov. Crose remarked:

"The United States here made the first departure from its policy of avoiding entangling alliances with foreign governments; entanglements, which, as a matter of fact, came very quickly." Similar treaties were made with England and Germany in 1879, and a perfunctory peace—so far as the Germans were concerned—prevailed for six years.

It was rudely and characteristically disturbed by Dr. Stubel, who had been appointed consul for Germany, and who, by virtue of his office, laid claim to Apia. This act was resented by the United States, which was called upon to exercise the function agreed upon by the treaty, "to adjust the difference" between the encroaching Germans and the natives. While waiting the decision of the English and German governments, the German officials in Apia seized Malietoa, the Samoan king, who was friendly to the Americans and English, and deported him to another island. They then proclaimed Tamasese, a king of their own choosing, who was to be a passive tool in the hands of the German agent. War followed between the subjects of the rival kings. The Germans then deported Tamasese, also.

In view of the agreement entered into between Samoa and the United States this high handed proceeding was naturally construed as a grave affront, and aroused great hostility in the United States against Germany. Five hundred thousand dollars—an insignificant sum compared to the billions our recent conflict has cost us—was voted by congress to protect our interests in the islands.

The friendly relations, maintained with much difficulty, were soon disturbed, and there was a repetition of rival authority, rebellion, with the deporting of the Samoan leaders of hostile factions, which involved great bloodshed.

In all the disturbance the Germans were the moving spirit, endeavoring to secure and keep the supreme control, until finally the three powers succeeded in arranging a provisional government with Malietoa Tanu as its nominal head.

In this crisis the German Falke was dispatched to Samoa, the Philadelphia, with Rear Admiral Kantz commanding, having arrived previously. The English had also a ship in the harbor. Mataafa, favored by the Germans, whose tool he was, was forced to retire, and Malietoa, who had been deported, was brought back, restored, and remained undisturbed until his death. Pending his restoration a tripartite commission was appointed, with a chief justice at its head. The late Henry C. Ide filled this post for several years, having previously served as commissioner, and his moderation and firmness held the Germans in check and won for the Americans the confidence and gratitude of the Samoans.

Notwithstanding his humane efforts, backed by the Germans, much violence occurred, the followers of Mataafa becoming so hostile that it became necessary to shell their villages, not so much to protect the foreigners, but the Samoan supporters of Malietoa, and in this crisis British and American officers were ambushed and killed.

A most insulting proclamation issued by the Germans in defiance of the Americans and English was also an incident of this rupture, with an attack upon the American consulate. A final arrangement was made in which former treaties were annulled, the United States being given absolute authority over Tutuila, the German claims restricted to Upolu and Savaii, England relinquishing her claims to German territory in Samoa in exchange for a part of the Solomon islands and of German territory in West Africa, the whole of which since the world war has passed into her hands. With this final shifting of authority has come the final blow which transfers all German holdings in Samoa to New Zealand—an English colony.

It has also affected seriously the great German mercantile company of Goddefroy, which has long enjoyed large monopolies not only in Samoa but throughout the South [illegible]

ANATOLE FRANCE

THE LAST PHASE

by James Gibbons Huneker

SOME one, probably Constable, the English landscapist, has said that a good thing can't be done twice. Anatole France has demonstrated the contrary in his latest, let us hope not his last, book, "Le Petit Pierre," another series of exquisite notations of childhood. His delightful "Livre de Mon Ami" gives us glimpses of his early days. Fascinating are the chapters devoted to Pierre and Suzanne in this memoir. The tenderness of M. France, and his power of summoning up the wonder and awe of our youth, may be seen in "Abeille"; the development of the lad is followed in "Pierre Nozière."

A portrait of the young Anatole reveals his excessive sensibility. His head was large, the brow too broad for the feminine chin, though the long nose and firm mouth contradict possible weakness in the lower part of the face. It was in the eyes that the future of the child might have been read—they were lustrous, in shape beautiful, with a fullness that argued eloquence and imagination. Such eyes were possessed by the boy Charles Dickens. France has told us that he was a strange child, whose chief ambition was to be a saint, a second St. Simon Stylites, and after that thrilling experience to write a history of France in fifty volumes!

In "Le Petit Pierre" his memory for the important little nothings of a child's existence is unusual; evidently nothing has been invented, all happened. Through the haze of the immemorial years there now and then sharply cuts some significant incident, some old wives' tales, a portrait of an elderly contemporary—like the Balzacian Uncle Hyacinthe or the incomparable evocation of the beloved servant Mélanie—a dog, like Caire, the truant parrot, the boy chimneysweep, and the sweet smile of Pierre's mother, who seems to be every one's mother so admirably generalized is the type—what a magician is this writer! Told with naïveté and verve, we feel in every page of "Le Petit Pierre" the charm of personality.

ANATOLE FRANCE is 75 years old but his mind is still vigorous, if that word be not too brisk when applied to such a subtle, supple, undulating intelligence as his. He now writes prose glowing with patriotism. Like the late Remy de Gourmont, he shed his cynic's skin when war invaded his beloved land. And it was not the first time that he, a writer of humanitarian impulses, opened the door of his ivory tower and descended into the stormy arena; witness the Dreyfus case.

However, it would be idle to deny that his best work is now behind him. Prefaces to letters to distinguished men and women he occasionally publishes, such as "Sur la Voie Glorieuse," or "Ce que disent nos morts"; but the Anatole France of "La Revolte des Anges" seems to have vanished forever. In the vast whirlwind of European events his skepticism, irony, and pessimism have given way to pity and tenderness for human suffering. The son of the bookseller Thibaut may figure, some day, in a modern hagiography of those lay-saints who fought for a new spiritual freedom.

The subject matter composing "Sur la Voie Glorieuse" is altogether patriotic and contains much that is striking. The cloven hoof of the original faun that lurks somewhere in this Frenchman's temperament is shown in a passage wherein he groups the Christmas festival with other antique festivals and symbols and symbols of Adonis and Mithra. A pagan to the end. Possibly the best pages are devoted to a free translation from Herodotus, a dialogue between the potentate Xerxes and a Spartan slave. The moral rings clear.

Of quite different material is fashioned "The Revolt of the Angels." We cannot conscientiously recommend the fiction to elderly persons of either sex, though, no doubt, it is favorite reading of the "advanced" college girl. What would be vulgarity in another writer is turned to favor and prettiness by the wand of the Gallic enchanter. Violence, rapine, hissing irony, and Rabelaisian episodes make a feast for lovers of Anatolian literature. Those who have retained any old fashioned prejudices concerning propriety—morality is out of the running—may expect to be shocked. Has he not said: "Man, seek not to know thyself! Man is not a reasoning animal."

In this fable the deity that created us is in the new cosmology only a tribal god, who, since he deposed Lucifer in pitched battle, rules tyrannically. He keeps close watch on our mud-ball of a planet because he suspects that numerous angels disguised as men and women are fomenting a second angelic rebellion. With them are the socialists and anarchists, and this gives M. France an opportunity to score monarchical forms of government. The clerical order is lashed. He spares no one. He repeats his familiar axiom: "Les guerres sont toujours les affaires." There are pages in which sensuality and sheer burlesque are mingled in a disquieting compound. The book is one of the most daring. In its essence it is a supreme revolt against all social systems that uphold slavery; industrial, militaristic, religious, political. The debasing Asiatic systems that still make captive the conscience of mankind are mercilessly attacked, and while the castigating hand is encased in velvet the shining steel is none the less deadly.

IN clarity Anatole France is the equal of Renan and John Henry Newman, and though at one time clarity was a conventional quality of French prose, it is rarer today. Symbolism has supervened, if not to darken counsel, certainly to trouble verbal values. Never syncopated, moving at a moderate tempo, in transitions smooth, replete with sensitive rejections, crystalline in diction, a lover and a master of large luminous words, the very marrow of the man, Anatole France is in his style. And what a model he should be for those willful young writers who boast that lumpy, graceless paragraphs are better suited to their subjects than swift, clear, concise prose. It was not so long ago that one scribe positively glorified in his own dull style. He asserted that it was a truthful reflection of his drab themes.

There is, indeed, such a thing as an apposite garbing, a verbal orchestration. The pellucid sentences of Mr. Howells, so free from the overblown, are happily wedded to his admirable character etching. Flaubert, master of ornate, or "numerous" prose, as well as cool, rhythmic prose, wrote "Salammbo" in a purple, splendid key, and "Madame Bovary" in the grayer tonalities of the province; yet nothing could be further removed from the style of either novel than "Sentimental Education," which is urban and flooded with sober daylight. It was a favorite contention of de Gourmont that at his sovereign best Flaubert is to be found in "Bouvard et Pécuchet," the style of which is sinewy, pregnant, powerful. The principal mistake of beginners is to believe that ornament is good style. In Anatole France manner and matter are perfectly welded.

Few writers swim so easily under their heavy burdens of erudition as he. His knowledge is precise, his range wide. He is a humanist. He knows many literatures. He loves learning for the sake of learning. He loves words, treasures them, fondles them, burnishes anew their meanings tarnished by custom. He never tarries in the halfway house of epigram. Over all his interest in humanity sheds a tranquil glow. Without a marked feeling for the dramatic, nevertheless, he surprises mankind engaged in its minute daily acts; these he renders as candidly as snow in the sunshine; just as the old Dutch painters stir our emotion of recognition with a simple shaft of sunlight passing through a half open door, or upon an old wrinkled woman polishing her spectacles.

He sees and notes many gestures, inutile or tragic, and notes them with the enthralling simplicity of a complicated artistic nature. He deals with ideas so vitally that they seem human. Yet his personages are never abstractions, nor do they serve as pallid allegories. They are all alive from Sylvestre Bonnard to the group that meets to chat in the Foro Romano, ("Sur la Pierre Blanche") from his Penguins to his Angels. A dog, a cat, he depicts with the same love; his dog Riquet bids fair to endure long in literature. He is an interpreter of life, not precisely after the manner of the novelist, but life as viewed through the temperament of a poet of extreme delicacy and one doubted by a tolerant philosopher.

THIS ultra-modern thinker, who has outgrown the despotism of positivist dogma, has the soul of a chameleon. He loves, he understands, Christianity with a fervor and a knowledge that surprise, until we measure the depth of his affection for antique cultures. Further to confuse us, he exhibits sympathy with the Hebraic lore. He has rifled the Talmud for half-forgotten tales. He delights in juxtaposing the Greek sophist and the strenuous Paul. He contrasts Mary Magdalen repentant with a pampered Roman matron. He is familiar with the proceeds of science, particularly astronomy. With the scholastic speculations of the Renaissance, with the simple affirmations of mediaeval piety, he is as conversant as with the destructive pyrrhonism of a boulevard philosopher.

So commingled are his contradictory cultures, so numerous his angles, so avid of impressions is he, that we end in wholly admiring the exercise of a beneficient magic that can blend into a happy synthesis moral dissonances and harmonize such a bewildering moral preciosity. But there are moments when we regard the operation as intellectual legerdemain. We suspect dupery. However, it is his humor that is the most potent of his solvents. This humor often transforms a doubtful battle into radiant victory. We see him, the protagonist of his own psychical comedy, dancing on a tightrope in the airiest fashion, deliciously capering in the metaphysical void, and, like a prestidigitator, bidding us doubt the very existence of his rope.

Proofs from life gay pagan Anatole does not demand. He has the hesitations of profound erudition. Possessing the gift of paradox, he rejoices in his philosophic indifferentism. Notwithstanding his famous phrase, "the mania of certitude," Renan was ever pursued by the idea of an absolute. He cried for proof. To Bertholet he wrote: "I am eager for mathematics." To him numbers promised rigid reality. Not so, however, to M. France, who could have asked with Ibsen whether two added to two does not make five on the planet Jupiter! To Montaigne's "What know I?" he opposes the injunction of Rabelais: "Do what thou wilt!" Of Plato he might have asked, "What is Truth?" and if Plato in turn would have posed the same question, Anatole could reply by handing him a copy of "Jarden d'Epicure," that perfect breviary of Anatolian skepticism. In Socrates perhaps he would discover a congenial companion; yet he might mischievously allude to Montaigne "concerning cats," or quote Aristotle as to the form of hats. And then we see him adorning the Wheel of Ixion with garlands. A willful child of belles letters and philosophy, M. France always may be expected to utter the startling, luminous phrase.

HE believes in the belief of God. By the gods of all times and climes he swears. His is the cosmic soul. A man who infuses into his tales something of the Mimes of Herondas, La Bruyère's Characters, and the Lucian Dialogues, with faint flavors of Racine and Lafontaine superadded, may be pardoned his polychromatic faiths. This chromatism in beliefs, a belief in all or none, is rather diverting. But the classic world of thought has several exemplars for M. France, from the followers of Aristippus to the Sophists. Nevertheless, there is a specific note of individuality, a roulade altogether Anatolian in the Parisian. No one but this accomplished skeptic could have devised "The Opinions of Jerome Coignard," and his scheme for a Bureau of Vanity (Villiers de l'Isle Adam invented a machine for manufacturing glory.) "Man is an animal with a musket," declares Anatole.

Here is a morsel for hypocrites: "Even virtue may be unduly praised. Since it is overcoming which constitutes merit, we must recognize that it is concupiscence which makes saints." This sounds like William Blake done into choice French; Blake who has said that "the fool cannot enter the kingdom of heaven be he ever so pious"; that Blake who believed that the road to wisdom lies through the valley of excess.

Henry James has declared that the province of art is all life, all feeling, all observation, all vision. According to this rubric, M. France is a many-sided artist. Philosopher as well, he plays with the appearances of life, lifting betimes the edge of the curtain to curdle the blood of his spectators with the sight of Buddha's shadow in some grim cavern beyond. He shows his Gallic tact in decorating the empty spaces of theory and the blank spots of reality. A follower of Kant, in his denial of the objective, we cannot imagine him approving of that sage's admiration of the starry heavens and the moral law. Both are relative, would be the report of the Frenchman. Yet he yearns for faith. He humbles himself beneath the humblest. He excels in exposing the splendor of the simple soul, though faith has not anointed his intellect with its chrism. He admires the golden filigree of the ciborium; its spiritual essence escapes him.

At the portals of Paradise he lingers, or stoops to pick a rare and richly colored feather. He eloquently vaunts its fabulous beauty. But he hears not the whirring of the wings from which it has fallen. Pagan in his irony, his pity wholly Christian, Anatole France betrays a nuance of Petronius and a touch of St. Francis. Because of this spiritual dislocation—or shall I dare say bilocation?—he is in art, letters, and life a consummate flowering of the dilettante.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Illinois Leaders in the Interchurch Movement to Meet

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Illinois interchurch world movement conference will be held at the Hotel La Salle beginning tomorrow at 2 o'clock and continuing until Tuesday noon. Special attention will be given to rural and city surveys as affecting Illinois. The general purposes and plans of the interchurch world movement in foreign fields will also be explained.

The purpose is to hold a conference for exchange of views and receive instruction as to ways and means for making effective the movement which has received the official indorsement of fifty-eight different national church boards and societies, of the national convention in Cleveland a month ago, and of the Presbyterian general assembly and the Baptist Northern convention, which recently adjourned.

Carl Van Winkle will represent the field department of the national headquarters in New York in explaining the interchurch world movement.

B. F. Lamb, who conducted the Ohio state survey, and Prof. George Van Tungeln of the State Agricultural college, Ames, Ia., will speak on rural surveys and community work. Dr. William H. Brown, a former missionary and the head of the foreign department of the International Sunday School association, will also be one of the national speakers at the conference.

Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston is the Illinois state correspondent. The Chicago Church federation, Walter R. Mee, secretary, is coöperating in the conference.

One of the objects of the conference is the forming of church federations in all parts of Illinois. All other states will organize in a similar manner.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. Francis Bickerstaffe-Drew will lecture at Powers' theater next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Mgr. Drew is senior chaplain to the British forces, with the title of colonel. He is known to the American public as "John Ayscough." His volume of war experiences went through four editions in America.

A convention of students who are natives of Africa will be held in Quinn chapel, Twenty-fourth street and South Wabash avenue, at 7:30 p. m. next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The president of the [illegible] African Students' association is [illegible] bini Mamba Nkomo. He was b[illegible] a kraal in northern Rhodesia, [illegible] and is now studying in the University of Chicago. Native students from China, Japan, India, the Philippines, and South America, will also take part. The meeting is open to the public.

Children's day exercises will be held in most Protestant churches today. Certain churches will observe it next Sunday.

The Rev. William Holloway Main, D.D.
ROOT PHOTO

Dr. Main is the pastor of the First Baptist church, which has purchased the building formerly occupied by the Plymouth Congregational church, Fiftieth street and Drexel boulevard. The Plymouth congregation merged some months ago with the Kenwood Evangelical church, Forty-sixth street and Greenwood avenue. Its building, which is of stone costing $90,000 and only a few years old, will be the home of the First Baptist congregation after Sept. 1.

The former First Baptist church building at Thirty-first street and South Park avenue, was sold last September to the Olivet Negro church. Since then the congregation of the First Baptist church has been worshiping with the Memorial Church of Christ, Oakwood boulevard, near Cottage Grove avenue, of which Dr. Herbert L. Willett is pastor. Dr. Willett and Dr. Main arranged for a joint occupancy of the pulpit according to a regular schedule. The Memorial Church of Christ is itself a union of the University Place Baptist and the First Christian churches. Dr. Main and his congregation will continue to worship with the Memorial Church of Christ until Sept. 1.

Dr. Main came to Chicago from the pastorate of the Memorial Baptist church, Philadelphia, about three years ago. His church notwithstanding its change of location has kept up with all the benevolent movements of the Baptist denomination, contributing $1,800 to the million dollar drive last year, $1,000 to the advance work of the Baptist executive council, Chicago, and $7,500 to the recent victory campaign for $6,000,000 of the Baptist Northern convention. Dr. Main is a graduate of Colgate university and studied law before entering the ministry.

The Rev. Joseph L. Anderson, pastor of the Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church, will receive the degree of doctor of divinity next Thursday from Baker university, Baldwin, Kas., his alma mater.

The annual meeting and lunch of the Agard Deaconess Rest home at Lake Bluff will be held next Wednesday. Miss Isabelle A. Horton will speak and Mrs. Edith A. Thompson will sing. The train leaves the Northwestern depot for Lake Bluff at 10:20 a. m.

The Rev. E. L. Reiner, pastor of the Waveland Avenue Congregational church, has been elected superintendent of the young people's department of the Chicago Church federation. Dr. Reiner has served as state president of the Christian Endeavor society and has been a leader in many church enterprises among young people. Miss Mary F. Balcomb, who has been superintendent of the Young People's Civic league, which has now been merged in the young people's department of the Chicago Church federation, will go to Europe for a year of study of social and economic conditions.

The New First Congregational church, Ashland and Washington boulevards, has organized an alumni association composed of all those who have at any time been members of the First church. An annual homecoming day will be observed. Another feature adopted by First church is the naming of the various rooms, of which there are about forty in the church and its additions in memory of persons or events. Suggestions are that the lecture room be called "Pilgrim hall" and the dining room "Mayflower hall." These and other names will be voted on by the congregation. The Rev. Gilbert Wilson is pastor.

The Associated Catholic charities will require $750,000 for the coming year, according to the statement sent out in preparation for the second annual drive, which begins tomorrow in every parish. Today in all churches the appeal by Archbishop Mundelein will be read. It urges the necessity of contributions of the poor as well as of the rich. The first annual register giving the list of all contributors to the Associated Catholic charities last year has just been issued from the press of St. Mary's school at Desplaines, Ill. A house to house canvass for funds and memberships will be made.

The Church of Our Savior, Episcopal, 526 Fullerton parkway, has paid off its mortgage of over $6,000 which was put on when the edifice was erected in 1889. A special drive was led by the rector, the Rev. Dr. John D. McLauchlan, and the money raised. The cancelled mortgage and the notes with the other papers which filled a large book were exhibited to the congregation recently and a prayer service held. Members of the parish headed by the women's guild are now working for funds to repair the interior of the church and make other improvements.

An appeal for $1,000 for modernizing the pipe organ of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church, to be subscribed before June 30, has been made in the church paper. The present organ, it is said, could not be replaced without an expenditure of $25,000.

The Ashland and Marquette Park Christian churches have united and a new organization effected under the leadership of the Rev. Perry J. Rice, executive secretary of the Chicago Christian Missionary society. The united church has a membership of approximately two hundred and will use the property on the corner of Laflin and Sixty-second streets. Mr. Rice will continue to serve the church, preaching regularly on Sunday until a regular pastor is employed. A committee has been appointed to secure a regular pastor, it is hoped within a few weeks. Mr. Rice will preach today at 11 o'clock on the theme, "Unity for Which Christ Prayed."

A new church plans committee has been organized by the Faith Presbyterian church, Pine avenue and Augusta street, the Rev. Clyde L. Lucas pastor. The building now in use is a frame structure too small, it is said, for the congregation or the membership. L. H. Chamberlain is chairman and Mrs. W. R. Moulds is secretary of the plans committee. The Christian Endeavor pledged $550 towards the new building.

A conference for church workers of the province of the midwest of the Protestant Episcopal church will be held at Racine college, Racine, Wis., July 8 to 18. Among the features on the program will be the following: "A Devotional Study of the Book of Revelation," the Rev. George Craig Stewart; "The Readjustment of the Social and Religious Message of the Church to Meet the Needs of the New Era," the Rt. Rev. Theodore Reese; "Vitalizing Our Forces—Coöperation Versus Chaos in Parish Work," the Rt. Rev. James Wise; "Disinterring the Church," the Rev. Bernard Iddings Bell; "The Old Testament and Modern Life," the Rev. George Richardson; "Prayer Book Revision," the Rev. H. B. St. George; "How Can God Use Laymen in Rebuilding the World," Ted Mercer and Tom Farmer. Dean P. C. Lutkin of the Northwestern university school of music will give a course in the department of church music.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will officiate today, Pentecost, at 11 o'clock at the cathedral of the Holy Name, North State and East Superior streets.

NAIL POLISH
O-MI
O-MI
O-MI SPECIALTY CO.
CHICAGO

Your Nails Tell the Story

No Matter How Attractive the Clothes or How Pretty the Face —Poorly Kept Nails Will Spoil Your Appearance.

BEAUTIFY THEM WITH O-MI

Your dressing table is not complete without the necessary toilet articles required to keep the finger nails in good condition.

They should reflect health and care, —be kept a proper length,—the cuticle pressed back to its place and not allowed to grow up onto the surface of the nail—and the nails themselves be clean and refinely polished.

NAIL POLISH

OIL CUTICLE REMOVER

NAIL WHITE BLEACH

These Three O-MI Preparations Meet Every Requirement for Proper Care of the Nails—There are None Better.

The O-MI preparations, Nail Polish, Nail Bleach and Cuticle Oil, are distinctive and represent the last word in efficiency and refinement.

O-MI Nail Polish is a liquid, applied with the buffer. It is most delicately perfumed and only a stroke or two of the buffer will impart a most exquisite soft glow to the nails that will last for several days, as O-MI is not affected by soap, water, cold cream, oil or similar agents.

O-MI Cuticle Oil is not an acid. Will keep the cuticle soft. Its constant use will avoid cutting of cuticle for it banishes hangnails and dry, dead cuticle.

O-MI Nail Bleach quickly removes stain, restores the nature tone and assures a cleanly and well kept appearance to nails long neglected.

Most drug and department stores sell O-MI preparations. Two sizes in each—25 and 50 cents.

If you have the least difficulty in obtaining any of these O-MI products, send your name and address, enclosing remittance for articles desired, and they will be mailed to you direct.

Orange-Crush Company,
224 West Huron Street,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:

At the request of your Vice President, Dr. N. C. Ward, we have purchased on the open market a 7 oz. bottle of Orange-Crush in carbonated form; also a medium sized fresh, ripe orange.

A careful analysis of these two products shows a food value as follows:

Food Value of 7 oz. bottle of Orange-Crush Carbonated.	Food Value of a fresh, ripe orange, 3 inches in diameter when peeled.
187.4 calories	121.5 calories

You will note from the above that a 7 oz. bottle of Orange-Crush possesses a food value equal to one and one-half times that found in a medium sized peeled ripe orange.

We also find that Orange-Crush consists of harmless and wholesome ingredients and that the flavor is that of a natural orange.

Yours very truly,
THE COLUMBUS LABORATORIES,
Per J. A. Wesener

A single seven-ounce bottle (1 glass) of this most delicious of all drinks contains one and one-half times the food value of an ordinary orange!

THE letter reproduced at the left tells of a comparative analysis between a seven-ounce bottle of Orange-Crush and an ordinary orange, three inches in diameter when peeled.

The analysis proved that the drink contained fifty per cent more food value than the orange.

But that was not all. The analysis also revealed two other most important facts:

First, that Orange-Crush consists of harmless and wholesome ingredients;

Second, that the flavor of Orange-Crush is that of a natural orange.

This means that Orange-Crush is more than a delightful, thirst-satisfying drink. It is also health-giving and body-building. Oranges have long been recognized for these qualities. Just as an orange is "good for you"—so Orange-Crush, which is made from luscious oranges, will tone up your system—will, in the truest sense, refresh you.

Orange-Crush sends thirst scurrying.... delights the palate with its cooling deliciousness. Orange-Crush ice-cream sodas and sundaes are new-found delights.... Orange-Crush malted milk is better than you have known. Try Orange-Crush in any form but try it today.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

SOME MUSINGS ON NATURAL HISTORY.

BIRDS.

For birds I entertain a care;
I like the way they take the air;
Their singing soothes my inner ear,
And I am pleased when they appear,
In crimson feathering and blue;
In short, I think that birds will do—
But they eat worms, which proves, I'm sure,
Their taste is far from epicure.

SQUIRRELS.

I quite approve of squirrels, I think,
Although I'd much prefer them pink;
Their teeth are sharp, their fur is soft,
And nimbly they can shin aloft,
But I can't understand why they Should chew on hard shelled nuts all day
When they could find much softer eats,
Like peas, bananas, soup, and beets.

WORMS.

I would not for a single term
Agree to underwrite the worm;
The way he rises after rains
Is proof to me he has no brains,
For he is stepped on in his flight,
Which must be quite distressing, quite;
Another reason why I think
The garden worm's a silly gink,
His chassis is assembled wrong
And his wheelbase it is much too long.

PEOPLE.

People are nice, but then I fear
There are too many people here;
When one would watch a function gay
They're always standing in your way;
And when in need of much repose
They park themselves upon your toes.
I think they're ordinary, too,
And that includes myself and you.

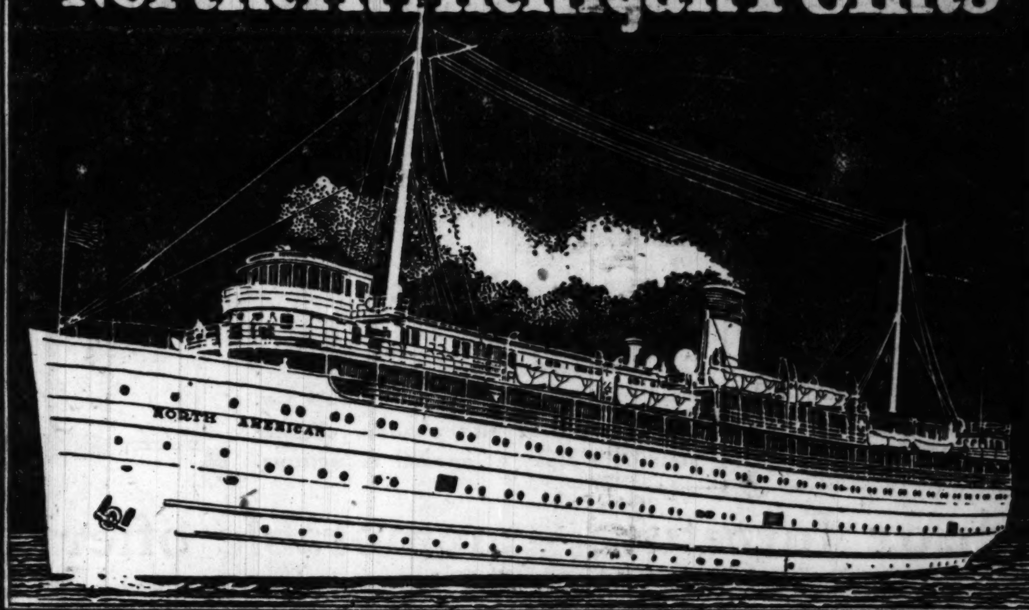
Delightful Short Cruises Between Chicago and Northern Michigan Points



There is a wonderful attractiveness in a trip on the lake when every comfort is at your command. Think of the enjoyment of spending a couple of days upon the clear blue water, watching the changing scenery and sights of interest at the different ports of call. Then there are the wonderful moonlit evenings upon the broad and roomy decks, dancing and music in the ballroom and other sources of joy and entertainment. Think of the restfulness of such a trip—the energy and strength it will give you—how well you will eat and how well you will sleep. If you desire to take such a trip or wish to reach some Northern Michigan resort you will find the most alluring route via

The Big, New Passenger Steel Steamship "North American"

This magnificent steamship, sister ship to the "South American," is equipped to give a service equal to the best Atlantic Liners and offers many innovations for travel, comfort and amusement—a ballroom, children's open air playgrounds and deck games—all these are free. The "North American" was planned and built for roominess in every quarter, with promenade and sun decks of unusual width, large grand salon, commodious lounging rooms, and dining and service rooms for perfect catering. State rooms and parlor rooms are all outside (no inside rooms), have regular size windows to insure perfect ventilation; running water, call bells and electric lights. Parlors have brass beds, some double, others with twin beds, baths and toilets. The cuisine is the best a master steward and chef can produce.

SEMI-WEEKLY SAILINGS to

Ludington, Portage Point (Onekama), Frankfort, Charlevoix, Harbor Springs (Petoskey, Bay View, Roaring Brook, Wequetonsing) and Mackinac Island

The "North American" will leave Chicago (Municipal Pier) every Monday and Friday, 6:30 p. m. (first trip July 7th). Tourists and Summer Cottagers in Northern Michigan Resorts will find this new service particularly attractive as it offers, besides commodious and luxurious accommodations, many other enjoyable features of travel.

"AMONG US MORTALS"

Friends and relations around the entrance to a pier when a transport is due

By W. E. HILL

The sympathetic M. P.—"I'd be glad to let you on the dock if I could, lady, but orders is orders. Why, yesterday an admiral and a brigadier general got turned away!"

"If she can get on the dock, why can't I?" It must be encouraging for the canteen worker who has been on duty at the docks since 6 a. m., to hear Bessie discourse on how "them women just hang around for the excitement!"

Irwin has been togged out in a complete new outfit, to give poppa a surprise, and now they won't let him on the dock.

Somewhat anxious young man who offered to hold the baby for a soldier's wife while she tried to get a pass to get through the gate.

On hand to see a gentleman from the South.

"Maybe my brother knows your nephew—he was at Toul for a while." His cousins and his sisters and his aunts, who find a great deal in common.

"I had a friend who knew a man who used to get to meet all the boats by just showing a laundry ticket at the gate—but guess they are getting more particular now."

Miss Flippin, from Dallas, Tex., whose patriotism led her all the way over to Hoboken to greet the Texas, has failed to convince the authorities that her presence is essential to the boys on the dock.

"I just want to get a little peek at him—he's never seen baby!"

"You can't miss him—he always stands with one shoulder higher than the other, and he's got light hair." (K. of C. men intrusted with messages for men on the boat.)

The Theaters

By Percy Hammond

MR. AND MRS. COBURN, having found the rainbow's end with "The Better 'Ole," will invest some of their treasure in other enterprises next year. They announce "All the King's Horses," which Dr. Anspacher, the author, says, "deals with a subject of vital interest and national importance." The Coburns themselves are to return to the classics, playing between walls, however, instead of under the stars.

* * *

The heat of something caused an exodus of many plays from New York last night, and many more are due to follow next Saturday. Among those who hit the trail to the storehouse or the suburbs were "Three Faces East," "Dear Brutus," "Some Time," "Pretty Soft," "Good Morning, Judge," "Forever After," "Toot Sweet," and Walter Hampden, who had barely started in "Hamlet." "Pretty Soft" was the smutty show by Paul M. Potter which made the New York newspapers so ashamed; and "Toot Sweet" was the "Overseas Revue," which did pretty well here at the Playhouse, but which was pooh-poohed in the east.

Thompson Buchanan, once a playwright of promise, but of late lost in the oubliette of film authorship, peeps up again with a comedy called "Civilian Clothes." Oliver Morosco, who hasn't built a theater in Chicago for nearly three weeks, will produce it this summer in Los Angeles, where the author's muse pipes the silent notes of the movies.

* * *

Not the Shuberts, but Erlanger, will do "Beaucaire" with music next year. Associated with the doughty veteran will be Henry Miller and his son, Gilbert, a captain in the army and a London manager of large activities. The incorrect announcement that the Shuberts would have "Beaucaire" in charge was given to the press not by them, but by Miss Eleanor Painter's manager, who was anxious to have his star sing the rôle sung by Miss Maggie Teyte in London.

As further evidence that this pencil is no dependable finger-post upon the theater's beaten road, but rather a vagabond and irresponsible courier along the obscure by-paths which only the peculior and eccentric enjoy, it must record definitely its odd preferences in the season's drama.

Mr. Hampden's "Hamlet" was possibly the best show of the year, remembering that there were four months during which I saw nothing by French shows. "Scandal" was another, because it was flip and well performed, and it made you suspect that the author, if called upon to do so, could read and write. The Blackfriars of the University of Chicago, performed a revue, which though local in its theme, was witty, sophisticated, and utterly without the "boob" aspect of professional things of its kind.

There are at Powers', the Woods, and the Blackstone plays and playing that do not belong in the same world with Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton," as presented by children the other night at the Francis Parker school. The comedy, one of the few that an adult may attend without hiding his face, is as fresh today as it was fifteen years ago, a classic, renewing itself, if ever there was one. It deals, as you know, and if one may be permitted to say so, with Rousseau's insistent subject, "the return to nature," and it treats of it in a pathetic, ironic, whimsical, serious way. The children of the Parker school understood it admirably, and they acted it much better, to my way of thinking, than did Mr. Gillette and his troupe years ago. That, of course, sounds absurd, but they were, indeed, so intelligent, so authoritative, so without stagy tricks, so good at interpreting the play's symmetry and contrast, its humor and thought, that I am forced to include it among the best times I have had at the theater this year. There was, in the scene of the desert island at the end of the second act, an exhibition of stage direction and lighting that was worthy of Belasco in his less cynical moments.

Mr. Ziegfeld is blowing himself, as the saying is, on this summer's "Follies." One hundred thousand dollars, he cries, is his initial expenditure on the new show. Words, tunes, fabrics, dyestuffs, shapes, figures, forms, and personalities have so increased in cost that $20,000 weekly will have to be separated from the public ere he gets his bit. Mr. Ziegfeld in painful reminiscence recalls that the first of the Follies, twelve years ago, cost $19,000, with a weekly upkeep of $7,000. While wringing his hands over those halcyon days Mr. Ziegfeld admits, between moans, that he made a hot $100,000 on the Follies last year, and that this summer the price of seats in the nearest ten rows will be $3.50, f. o. b., without the peace tax. The agencies will do the rest.

Morris Gest is worrying himself sick about a prima donna for "Aphrodite," one of his naughty Parisian importations. The lady he fancies for the position besides being chained irrevocably to another producer, is not that kind of a girl; and he is in despair. Mr. Gest wires that he will consider an unknown, which is encouraging news, and as Mr. Kaufman observes this morning in the New York Times, "the line forms to the left."

Mr. Gest, of whom it may be said that he regards the dollar as an implement rather than an ambition, is to bring over from London Oscar Asche's spectacular "Mecca" for production at the Century in New York, the Auditorium in Chicago, and other points west. Mr. Asche's "Chu Chin Chow" is in its third year in London, that war-impoverished capital, and they say that it will run there for three years longer.

A war acquaintance, billetted in London, writes that he has seen the Drinkwater play, "Abraham Lincoln," in the outskirts there, and that he is glad William Harris Jr. is going to produce it in America. "It does not show Lincoln as being cold and serious, as you have reported," says he, "but otherwise.

"Here is one instance: The scene is a cabinet meeting on the day the Emancipation Proclamation is to be discussed. The cabinet members argue with heat and considerable bad feeling while they wait for the president. Lincoln comes in carrying a small book, and after a word of greeting he says: 'It's an exciting morning, gentlemen. I feel rather excited myself. I find my mind not at best in excitement. Will you allow me? [Opening his book.] It may compose us all. It is Mr. Artemus Ward's latest.' And then, to their surprise, he reads a joke or two.

"I should like to see you and tell you about this Drinkwater play to get your support for it. It is a fine bit of dramatic literature and will have no appeal for the Broadway crowd. It probably will appeal to those who like to see sincere work in the theater—not the high-brows who discuss 'drama' in their clubs, but the people who actually go to plays, once they are convinced the plays are worth going to see. As you know, it's some job to convince them. They are the people who will give 'Abraham Lincoln' its chance. But the play is worth doing."

A determined campaign for the repeal of the war tax on theater tickets has been begun by the United Managers' Protective association, which, through its president, Marc Klaw, has filed with Representative Fordney, chairman of the ways and means committee, a protest. In consideration of the blood shed by the theater in the war and the incredible sacrifices of all connected with it from supes to critics, it makes the following appeal:

"In behalf of the theaters and theatrical enterprises of the United States we respectfully urge a repeal of the admission tax.

"This tax is on the public and not on the theaters, and the theaters are only concerned by reason of the loss of patronage which this tax occasions.

"The theater has occupied a unique position under war conditions. Its costs have doubled. Its direct federal taxes have doubled. Its indirect federal contributions (in the way of increased railroad fares and railroad ticket taxes) have almost doubled. But the theater, unlike other enterprises, has been unable to increase the price of its product or pass on any of these costs to the public.

"The theater is not now appealing for a repeal of its direct taxes, such as the federal tax based on seating capacity or indirect taxes in the way of taxes on the traveling expenses of companies on the road, but asks that the tax on its patrons—on the theatergoing public—be repealed.

"This organization represents the legitimate theaters from Maine to California and from the Great Lakes to the gulf. It asks that the attendance of theaters be not further discouraged and lessened by the tax on the theatergoing public."

The appeal, it was announced, is being backed up by thousands of individual appeals from the various legitimate vaudeville and motion picture theaters throughout the United States, the Vaudeville Managers' association, the Exhibitors' league, and organized labor connected with amusement enterprises, including the musicians, stage carpenters, property men, electricians, and motion picture operators. Representative Fordney, who has succeeded C. Kitchin as chairman of the committee; Representative J. Hampton Moore, and many others have already expressed themselves as favoring the repeal of the admission tax.

The New York managers and the Actors' union are at each other's throats, and a strike is threatened. Nothing, as Bunker Bean used to say, could be of less consequence. We have the record of times when the theaters were closed—after the fire in the Iroquois and during a recent epidemic, when the public managed to get along with scarce a whimper. Some of us have erroneous ideas about the need of the theater. Many legislators, for instance, are more concerned about the price of theater seats than they are about the price of bread. They grow bilious and indignant because the theaters' wares are regulated by supply, demand, and the service of the broker, but they cannot be bothered seriously about pork chops. The butcher and the grocer are as much brokers as are Oppenheim and Ernie Young. And they traffic in produce which is much more important. It might be a good thing for the actors to walk out. In a month they would discover that bridge whist, the Victrola, Robert W. Chambers, Harold B. Wright, a supply of Spearmint, the ukulele, and an early bed are satisfactory substitutes for histrionism and the current drama.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sometimes I suspect people who go most to the theater are least likely to tell the truth about their preferences in plays. For instance, when the season closed last Saturday—closed, at least, by the calendar—I asked one young woman who makes a fad of playgoing which plays she had most enjoyed. She thoughtfully adjusted her permanent wave, borrowed a pencil, and, following a moment's concentration, wrote out the following list:

Maeterlinck's "The Betrothal."
Barrie's "Dear Brutus."
Dunsany's several short plays.
Sem Benelli's "The Jest."
Tolstoy's "Redemption."
Megrue and Sloboda's "Tea for Three."
St. John Ervine's "John Ferguson."
Shakespeare's "Hamlet" (Hampden version).
Haddon Chambers' "The Saving Grace."
Capt. Bairnsfather's "The Better 'Ole" (if you call it a play).
Smith and Bacon's "Lightnin'"
Laurence Eyre's "Miss Nelly o' New Orleans (because of Mrs. Fiske).

What the young woman did, you may easily see, was to select the so-called "high brow" list, the quality plays of the year, the literary output. I happen to know, from her previous confessions, that she had a "perfectly lovely" time weeping with Alice Brady in "Forever After," that she was "positively thrilled" by "Three Faces East," that she thought "A Prince There Was" "just too dear," and that she could "see Fay Bainter every night in the week and never grow tired of her."

Of this superior list several were popular successes, appealing quite as strongly to the crowd that is attacked by the "O-let's-go-to-a-show" fever at 7:30 in the evening as they did to the "We-must-see-that-they-say-it's-good" crowd. And it is to the credit of the better public that the most literary of the lot were the most popular. These include "The Jest," "John Ferguson," and "Redemption." And more particularly "Dear Brutus," which stood the test from Christmas time till June.

Cyril Maude had a better than average Broadway engagement with "The Saving Grace," "The Betrothal" almost succeeded and is one of the really worth while memories of the year, "Tea for Three" went through the season partly on the strength of its unusually clever dialogue and the good performances of its players, and partly because with a cast of four people it was possible to play to small receipts and still turn a profit, and "John Ferguson" is a belated but seemingly substantial hit with the better public.

Now let's turn to the popular list, to those plays that all publics, high and low, have indorsed. Nine plays, we find, have come through the entire season and entered June, including:

"Friendly Enemies."
"Three Faces East."
"Lightnin'."
"Daddies."
"Forever After."
"Tea for Three."
"Some Time."
"The Better 'Ole."
"Three Wise Fools."

The first of these started last July, the next two in August, the next three in September, and the last three in October. Eight of the nine are comedies, and the one drama, "Three Faces East," earns almost as many laughs as a comedy. It has been a comedy year. Not because the war had a depressing effect upon the people, but because we are Americans and Americans in the theater are a gay people, given to the quick chuckle and the lightsome snicker. We may be intellectual and exacting at the movies, but not at the talkies.

These nine comedies do not represent all the verified hits of the year. No less than seven entertainments that began their engagements as late as December were still playing this week, including two midnight shows, Mr. Ziegfeld's "Frolic" and Mr. Gest's "Whirl." The other five include "Dear Brutus," "Somebody's Sweetheart," "Listen, Lester,"—"East Is West," and "A Little Journey."

Of these Fay Bainter's personal popularity in "East Is West" has kept that trivial but entertaining comedy very near the head of the list of popular entertainments. It held up even the one week she was having her influenza and an understudy played the part. Each night announcement was made from the stage that Miss Bainter was in a hospital and not in the theater, and that those who came only to see Miss Bainter could cash in their coupons at the door. Each night from two to twenty persons filed out, but the tickets they turned back were as promptly taken up by others who were waiting for them.

January is credited with two hits that have continued, "The Woman in Room 13" and "Up in Mabel's Room," the first of the "room" series that threaten to follow the bedroom group. Of the two, the first being a dictaphone melodrama and the other a chemise farce, "Mabel" is the more popular, the most consistently amusing, in fact, of all the bedroom lot.

A Grand makes a room
IT IS THE FURNITURE of the true artist in home-making. If a piano is to be yours, why an upright? The Grandette takes up no more space, but it is a grand. It costs but little more than a good upright, but it is a grand.

Ideal dream? No indeed, and the strength of the assurance that your Grandette is a grand is the name of Kranich & Bach. A house whose reputation for the best in musical instruments has been made in more than a half century of honest dealing, can't afford to endanger it with a product not of the best. On the other hand, the Grandette is doing more to enhance the reputation of the house than any other instrument in its extensive line.

Benefit Recital for Chicago Osteopathic Hospital—Final Chicago Appearance Till Opera Season.

No War Tax

AMBITIOUS CHICAGO WOMEN never let a morning pass without a careful reading of The Tribune. They know they can't afford to.

"Of Ballads, Songs, and Snatches"

By Frederick Donaghey

FOR the recital she gives this afternoon in the Auditorium to benefit the Chicago Osteopathic hospital, Galli-Curci has made her program of items that have been liked, she says, in other appearances here. The mad-scene of "Lucia" is in it; so, also, is Amina's sleep-walking aria in "La Sonnambula," "Ah! non credea mirarti," in which the soprano gives one of her loveliest exhibitions in the pure style of the Italian tradition. Another of her best exhibitions, in a different style, is with the English text of Liszt's "Oh!—in My Dreams," which, of itself, is one of the great Hungarian's finest songs. Most of the bill is in English—an aspect of Galli-Curci's showmanship which has played its due part in her immense popularity when she sings in recital. "Mary of Allendale," "The Lass with the Delicate Air," Homer Samuels' "The Little White Boat," and Sinding's effective "Sylvelin" are among the songs.

"La Sonnambula" is, by-the-way, one of three operas by Bellini that Campanini schedules for next season. It and "I Puritani" are for Galli-Curci; the third, "Norma," is for Raisa, about the only dramatic soprano I know who is capable of singing the name-part well in all its exactions, although one of the arias, "Casta diva," is in the ready répertoire of most coloraturas. A third opera for Galli-Curci mentioned for revival in Campanini's prospectus as at present arranged is Donizetti's "Don Pasquale," a comic piece not used in this country since Sembrich was at the height of her vogue. It is a good medium for Galli-Curci in her aspect as a soubrette; and you who have heard her in "The Barber of Seville" or "Crispino" know what a bully soubrette she is.

Galli-Curci's season, which ends with today's recital, has involved her in ninety-seven others, apart from her appearances with the Chicago Opera; and, save for the engagements canceled when the flu raged, she has kept every date. The record is amazing for any singer of the first class in battling with the changing climates of this United States. The high, delicate sopranos and the lyric tenors are those who oftenest go under to the weather. Once, when a slight cold made nonappearance advisable, she waited in the town two days, and gave the recital as a postponed event; and that was the only episode even resembling a slip-up in the entire itinerary. She did not miss a single scheduled appearance in opera.

Twitter in the ateliers and like haunts of the "real musicians" of the community can safely be switched to a topic other than the return of Bruno Steindel to the first-cellist's chair in the Chicago Symphony: Joseph Malkin gets the post. He is a Bohemian; and he has been for some years in the position with Boston's orchestra.

Riccardo Martin, for a time one of the Metropolitan's tenors, comes to Ravinia Park; and he is the fourth so far announced by Mr. Eckstein. The three others are Orville Harrold, Francis Maclennan, and Morgan Kingston; and there is, perhaps, a measure of oddity in that all four, each with an extensive répertoire in other tongues, are English in native speech. Kingston is the only foreigner; he is Welsh; the others are Americans. Their activities are, among other things, just so much indication that the chatter about discrimination against singers not from the Continent is sheer blah. Kingston for some years has been with the Metropolitan; Harrold goes there next season; Maclennan was for two years of Wagner and Humperdinck an important fellow with Campanini's company; and Martin last season was restored to the Metropolitan's roster, although illness, it seems, kept him from taking part. His last singing in opera in Chicago was with the little Japanese, Miura, in "Madama Butterfly" when, three years ago, the Boston-Pavlowa venture gave some performances in the Blackstone theater.

Edna Kellogg, a Chicago soprano and a niece of Anna Fitziu, has been engaged for the Metropolitan Opera.

The autumn tour, preceding the Auditorium season, of Campanini will be devoted to three operas—"Aïda," "Madama Butterfly," and "La Bohême." The first will have Raisa, Sophie Braslau, Dolci, and Baklanoff in the principal parts. Miura, Irene Pavloska, Forrest Lamont, and Clarence Whitehill (as Sharpless) will be in "Butterfly"; and Alma Gluck, Bonci, Myrna Sharlow, and Rimini are named for "La Bohême." Miss Braslau and Whitehill return to the Metropolitan for the regular season; and Gluck resumes her recitals after the tour. Bonci is to sing some "guest" performances for Campanini; and Verdi's "The Mask-Ball" is named as among the operas in which he will reappear. He is remembered as a great lyric tenor, although thoughtfully suppressed after transferring from Hammerstein to the Metropolitan: Caruso was worried about Bonci. Miss Sharlow, who has been with Campanini since 1915, is not named in his roster for the regular season.

Campanini, talking for print to a Paris correspondent of the New York Evening Post, said that his sympathies were with modern music, that his life had proved it, but that he could not help noticing that, "so far as popular music is concerned, Paris has not changed during all these years of war. You have always the same pieces. It may have been on account of the war; but there has been no progress. The young composer still follows the lines taken by Debussy; but neither by him nor by them has anything vital been added since his 'Pelléas and Mélisande.'"

Julia Culp and Tilly Koenen, both Dutch, are coming back next season. The former has dispensed with a German husband and taken on a new one of Bohemian make. She has managed to intimate that her sympathies with the Allies helped estrange her from No. 1; and that is good press-work, if not, perhaps, necessary: few of us either knew or cared that she had any kind of a husband.

Schönberg, after devoting a great deal of time to search for the Diminished Octave, is reported from Vienna as a down-and-out. While an up-and-in, he not only served as the provocative of vast quantities of comic conversation, but also did more than one modern's stint in helping clinch the clutch of Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms on immortality.

Alice Gentle
PHOTO © MISHKIN

Miss Gentle is a contralto, and is one of the summer's newcomers in Ravinia Park. Like her predecessor of last summer, Sophie Braslau, Miss Gentle is in that division of the roster which Mr. Eckstein classifies as "from the Metropolitan opera-house," where she has been singing for two seasons. She is, so far, unknown in the Chicago territory; and she is numbered, it is said, in the imposing list of Oscar Hammerstein's "discoveries."

From Indianapolis, Ind.:

"Dear Mr. Donaghey: You will be glad to be told, I know, that you have been misinformed about the purposes of the Musical Alliance of America. You need not feel bad about it—most people are mistaken in the matter. My brother, who used to be a good pianist until asthma cost him his voice, since which time he has been takin' vocal in Chicago—my brother, who is of the intelligentsia and very educated, says that the high aim of the Musical Alliance is to bring about the establishment of a United States department of the arts, with a place in the President's cabinet for some really great man.

"Now, that's worth a dollar a year just to think about, isn't it? Brother says Mr. Freund, head of the Alliance, would be the ideal man for the place. In case Mr. Freund should refuse it (for, Brother insists, the Alliance will have its way if the dollars keep rolling in), whom do you suggest? I think that, next to Mr. Freund, who deserves it for having seen it first, that Col. House would be good and funny.

"The lady who told you that the purpose of the Alliance was to compel every member of congress to employ a private pianist evidently did not know that every member of congress already possesses a personal organ.

"Helpfully yours,
"(Mrs.) STEPHANIE T. ALLEN."

Mr. Al Jolson, who long has had his mind on what he regards as the ease with which John McCormack earns important money, tried something in the way of a recital the other night in Boston. That is, he didn't black up, and stood still while singing part of his bill. The verdict is that Jolson is still an amusing chap in burnt-cork.

Although Leo Sowerby has written concertos, suites, rhapsodies, quartets, and other things in the widely known and justly famous sonata-form, and has been celebrated in an all-Sowerby program played by the Chicago Symphony, he is not yet of the notion that he knows it all. He is going back to France to study with Vincent d'Indy, most cerebral of the French eminences, although not, as Sowerby thinks, the greatest. This youth is one of the most vital and interesting figures in American music, and has already written three or four pieces of high value. One is a suite for violin and piano. Another is a string quartet: the Berkshires played it in January in the Playhouse, between a good one by Beethoven and a good one by Borodin; and Sowerby's held its own.

Americans who sing opera abroad are expected by Italian, French, and German audiences to possess perfect diction in those languages. European opera-singers who appear in America are allowed to murder our language in our concert-halls. The peace treaty, while it is regulating justice for all the world, should take up this point—the fifteenth.—Leonard Liebling in the Musical Courier.

Sylvester and Jones:

"Last night I had a funny dream. I dreamt that the King of Greece was being pursued by the enemy and in order to save his life I hid him inside of my coat."

"I don't see how you could possibly hide a king in your coat."

"Why not? In a game of pinochle I've often hidden a king up my sleeve."

"What is your favorite game of cards?"

"Poker. Last night Abraham Jackson and I had a game of poker down in my kitchen and now my wife has to cook soup in the wash boiler."

"Why does your wife have to cook soup in the wash boiler?"

"Because Abraham Jackson won the pot."

"You look as if something is worrying you."

"My wife isn't well."

"Can I do anything for you?"

"Perhaps you can give me a job."

"I can give you a job next week."

"Too late. My wife will be able to work herself by that time."

IMMUNE

By Guy F. Lee.

Some are born, it is said, into wealth and renown,
With swell country places and mansions in town;
With autos and airships and Airedales and such,
And fine blooded cattle and currency much.
They eat, it's reported, from silver and gold,
And idle as idylls continued unfold.
I can't swear it's true—it's quite likely, oui, oui,
But nothing like that ever happened to me.

I'm told it is pleasant to flirt with success,
That fame wields a most edifying caress;
It's rumored that work, if it's properly scored,
Will end up, like Virtue, its own sweet reward!
If one with consistency sticks to his tasks,
Some day he is certain to get what he asks.
Perhaps that is so—I can't prove it, you see,
For nothing like that ever happened to me.

I've heard there are people who treasure content;
Who find in this vale everything that was meant;
They are perfectly sure it's a wonderful life,
And slip on, serene, without worry or strife.
As to just how they do it, I'm 'way in the dark—
I've always encountered the bite with the bark—
The world may treat some to a grand jubilee,
But nothing like that ever happened to me.

It's a rough old and tough old existence, b' gee,
No sinecured cinch have I found it to be;
It doubtless hands others great thrills, I'll agree,
But nothing like that ever happened to me!

The Year's Greatest Gift to the Theatre

A Cockney Maid of moon-spun curls and sky-touched eyes, the little beauty of Limehouse, searching for kindness and for love, comes within the door of an Oriental Man, a handsome crusader from Old China, who came to London on a soul's adventure, and lingered with the rainbowed pipe of vice, until his heart awoke to sympathy and love. He took the precious beauty to the treasure chamber of his home, dressed her in magical robes from China, put flowers on her little breast, brought sunshine to her heart—then came A Prize Fighter, —the bravest battler in Limehouse, who hated a "Chink," and acted—well—

Such the tale of temple bells afar, of the love of London and China, "of sensuous chastity, of voluptuous restraint," as Ashton Stevens, in The Herald and Examiner, says.

The orchid miracle of the cinema that awoke the bitterest critics of motion pictures to ardent praise, converted Charles Hanson Towne, editor of McClure's Magazine, who called it "Art, indeed—as great as Poetry or Music"—excited Charles Collins of the Chicago Post, who hailed it as "the motion picture that converts dramatic critics, to whom the cinema is anathema, into film fanatics." The marvelous creation of Griffith's glorious genius—America's supreme work of art—a thundering drama of the theatre that pales the products of the past.

GRIFFITH revealing for the first time his new invention that brings the magic of colors to the screen, that makes paintings live, the glory of most delicate colors with the miracle of life.

THE SCREEN set for the first time with absolute scientific accuracy by engineers from the Armour Institute of Technology that the most perfect vision be provided for every seat.

THE MUSIC, contributed through the wistful romance of Russian strings, the mystic croon of Chinese instruments, flute and violin and deep-breathed cello—and then the Symphony Orchestra of 32 pieces playing haunting themes composed for this production. This in a splendid theatre, hung with apple blossoms, kissed with the scent of the Orient, ushered to seats by Chinese maidens.

The Importance of Being Diverting

"LIFE is a serious affair these days. Folks haven't time for diversion," said our friend the Highbrow.

"Life without diversion is flat as a six month's bevo," said we. "Come along and see how diverting it can be."

We saw men and women, leaders of their communities, sitting with their neighbors in enthralled contemplation of the gymnastics of a chap called Fairbanks whose only "message" is the health that's in laughter. We saw sedate heads of families roaring their own off as one Mr. Chaplin met up with a policeman. We saw finally these same substantial folks buying and reading a magazine that is primarily diverting and that never once in all its pages mentions industrial unrest, the all too high cost of living or the salvage of profits.

Man can't live on work and worry alone. Hence the motion-picture and Photoplay its leading magazine.

The tonic breeziness of Photoplay wins a heart-felt welcome in the real homes of the nation.

Photoplay has come to be a serious factor in American life because it realizes the importance of being diverting.

THE 'BROKEN BLOSSOMS' STAR.

By Mae Tinée.

THERE was a lot of excitement in our office last Wednesday. The reason—Miss Lillian Gish was coming in.

At least the brown eyed Adonis who handles the publicity for "Broken Blossoms" had given his solemn promise that she would come in. He said she would be over at 2. About half past 1 everybody began coming back from lunch. People from adjoining offices discovered that the drinking water in the Sunday room was infinitely colder and better than in their own domain and everybody seemed to have suddenly acquired soiled hands, which for some reason or other they wished to wash in the Sunday room lavatory. Two o'clock came and everybody faced east, which is where the entrance to the room is. Five minutes past 2 and faces began to wear strained and worried expressions. Ten minutes past and everybody said: "Aw, I bet she isn't coming!"

At a quarter after 2 she came!

She did not come alone. She was accompanied by her mother, a girl friend, the brown eyed Adonis, and a burly personal representative, undoubtedly qualified to protect her in case she and the moving picture critic came to blows, and it looked bad for Lillian. These two of the male persuasion hung in the offing as 'twa, while Lillian and mother and friend and myself sat down for a chat.

Miss Lillian Gish in the flesh is fragile and lovely as a piece of Dresden china. She has soft, fair, cloudy hair (poetry comes to some people just as easy) that frames a delicate face. She was guiltless of makeup, and her skin was as fine as a baby's. This little face has big blue eyes and a sensitive mouth. The owner of the little face is a little girl—not more than 5 feet tall if that.

She dresses as simply as—you or I, and her manner is charming and unaffected.

As I looked at Miss Gish and Miss Gish looked at me there was no doubt but that we were thinking of the same thing—the narsty remarks I have made about her work in various pictures. I felt kind of queer. You know how you do feel when you've said something about somebody and they know it. The fact that you meant what you said doesn't make the least bit of difference in the way you feel. Queer is the word. The more I looked at Miss Gish, however, the more anxious I was to be on good terms with her, so again I hurriedly said something I meant:

"I loved your work in 'Broken Blossoms,' Miss Gish!"

"I'm awfully glad you did like me—for once!" returned my visitor calmly. I smiled a foolish smile.

"It must have been a very difficult part to take!" sezzi, admiringly.

"O, no," says she; "the easiest part I ever played."

We didn't seem to be agreeing vurra well. Miss Gish, however, noting my worried countenance, unbent, thereby proving herself a little sister of charity. She explained:

"The character parts are always the easiest to play. It's these straight heroine rôles that are difficult. Just what is it you don't like about me when I play straight heroine rôles, Miss Tinée?"

"I don't like the way you wave your hands and your feet and hop up and down," I said.

"Take my word," Miss Gish replied fervently, "it's not half as hard on you as it is on me!"

"What do you do it for, then?" asked the motion picture editor anxiously.

"Mr. Griffith makes me," Miss Lillian accused. "He says that young people always hop up and down."

"O!" says I.

"Yep!" says she. And that was disposed of.

Miss Gish then told me how she first met Mr. Griffith. She and Dorothy and Mary Pickford had all been stage children together, and when Mary Pickford started to work at the old Biograph studio she and Dorothy went down to call on Mary.

While they were all chatting together along came Mr. Griffith, who stopped near them, stared, and commenced to sing. This is what he sang:

"She'll never bring them in! She'll never bring them in!"

They thought he was crazy. Any one would. They thought he was crazier when he asked them if they wouldn't like to do a sister picture. But he stuck to his point and they agreed to work for him.

He said he didn't care about knowing their names, because they looked just alike. One of them, though, would have to wear a red ribbon and one a blue.

"For a long time," said Miss Gish, "Mr. Griffith never called us anything but 'Red' and 'Blue.' 'All right, Red!' 'Hey, there, Blue!' and so on."

"I suppose," Mrs. Gish said, smiling, "that if the girls had wanted to be movie stars they couldn't even have gotten inside the studio. That's the way it always happens."

The Adonis and the representative showed signs of restlessness. It was time, it seemed, for Miss Gish to make her appearance at the theater.

"But I won't say anything," the little star declared nervously. "I've only made one public appearance in my life, and that was to oblige a high school superintendent who said all his pupils were leaving him to go into the movies and asked me if I wouldn't come and advise them against it."

"Well, did you?" I asked.

"O, certainly!" Miss Gish replied, rising. "I'm an obliging little thing."

And then we drifted out to the elevators and everybody who had been busy washing up and powdering and drinking water, suddenly finished and decided they must get back to their offices—to reach which they would have to pass by the elevators.

In about six weeks Miss Gish and her sister Dorothy will be in town again. I think that's nice, don't you?

You're always hearing about the expensive gowns the movie stars are wearing—little old ginghams and things that cost them $150 or so. Claire Du Brey proves herself rara avis. She says she has a dress for which she only paid $28.37.

* * *

Tom Santschi not only has a wife, he has a rabbitry. Here he raises pedigreed rabbits. He likes them better than his wife does, however. She says it's fierce when Tom's away on vacation and she has to take care of the bunnies. I'll say so, too.

Ask Me! Ask Me!

FLIRTIE: Kathleen Clifford was the star in "Who Is No. One?" Single so far as I know. Address her in care of Kathleen Clifford Films, Long Beach, Cal. I'm glad your father likes THE TRIBUNE. How do you like stenography?

M. L.: We forwarded the letters. Glad to do it for you.

CHARLES RAY'S ADMIRER: Guess you must have addressed your letter wrong, otherwise it would have been answered before. Charles Ray is with Ince, Culver City, Cal. He's been in pictures for a number of years. He is married to a nonprofessional. His picture has been in the rotogravure section. O, fudge!

* * *

FILM FAN: I was sure glad to get your letter, but the postcard made me sad. Those old Huns! When you come back maybe you'll drop in and see me? I wish you would.

* * *

FAN: O, you think so, do you? Well, the principal reason is that I don't happen to have one.

* * *

M. H. R.: We haven't had any information regarding Marion Leonard and Vivian Prescott for the longest, longest time. Perhaps your question will set some wheels going. If so, I'll tell you what I learn.

* * *

M. M'E.: My information is that Charles Chaplin was born in Paris in 1889. Who told you that Canada was his birthplace. He claims his parents were of English extraction. Y'wekkum.

* * *

K. P. H.: Anita Stewart is the wife of Rudolph Cameron. I do not believe she has any children. Owen Moore will be seen in Goldwyn pictures, I believe, from time to time.

E. O'GRADY: Tom Mix is with Fox, Los Angeles, Cal.

J. M.: All right, me dear—back to Griffith we'll send Miss Marsh—if we can. Didn't you see Tom Forman in "For Better, For Worse"? Richard Barthelmess is 24 years old. Thanks! My best wishes to you.

* * *

MYRTLE S.: I recommend no schools of motion picture acting. Sorry if you're disappointed, but such is our attitude.

* * *

M. W. M.: You're the kind of a professor I like! If my review made you happy, your letter certainly returned the favor. It was doubly acceptable, coming right after another billet-doux on the same subject which told me how awfully rotten the writer thought I was. Thank you, sir, said she.

* * *

MISS TERRY: I love to receive your letters, they are so beautifully written. When I take my pen in hand, how different! Double jointed people never can write, you know. Your French paper is lovely. Address Constance Talmadge in care of her own studio, 318 East Forty-eighth street, New York. Address Lew Cody in care of the Stowell hotel, Los Angeles, Cal. Awfully glad to have heard from you. Don't be so long about writing next time.

* * *

BESSIE C.: Same answer for you as for Myrtle. Write again.

* * *

LOGAN SQUARER: I can't give you a minute, but I'll give you as many minutes as you want. Arthur Johnson played with Mary Pickford at the old Biograph studio. Yes, Maurice Costello still plays occasionally in Vitagraph productions. He did not appear for several years, however. Not that I know of. I haven't space in this column to tell you how cartoons are made, but if you care to send a self-addressed and stamped envelope I'll do the best I can for you.

* * *

JACK S.: Glad to help you out. Elliott Dexter is with Paramount; so is Marguerite Clark. Address them both at Hollywood, Cal.; June Caprice in care of Fox, Fort Lee, N. J.; Jane Cowl, Goldwyn, 16 East Forty-second street, New York; Tom Moore, Goldwyn, Culver City, Cal.; Clara Kimball Young, care of the Clara Kimball Young Film corporation, Los Angeles, Cal., and Geraldine Farrar, Metropolitan Opera house, New York.

A Girl With A Past

Mary McGuire just had to have a past. The owners of the Peach-Tree Inn wanted a dancer with one, and if she had one, they promised her a bright future. Mary wanted a job—and so she invented the past.

She picked a good one while she was at it. The Sunday newspapers told in great detail of the Duke de Sauterne's "affaire" with an unnamed Parisian dancer. Mary's name was as good as the dancer's, whatever it might be. And she could dance. And she needed that job.

So she got it, on the strength of her newly acquired "past." But the unfortunate thing about a past is that it sticks. It clung to Mary like an 'mpecunious aunt. And all sorts of men made all sorts of love to her. But one of them was different from the rest.

As to how he was different, and what he, and she, and all the rest did about it, you must see.

By Field Marshal Viscount French, of Ypres

This is the fourth installment of a serial which has caused a great sensation in England. On Tuesday last former Premier Herbert Asquith launched an attack upon Lord French's disclosures, declaring them false and subversive. Lord French's exposures have mainly to do with mismanagement and inefficiency on the part of the Liberal government at the outset of the war, and with charges against the late Lord Kitchener and various French and British generals. It is thought in England that Mr. Asquith's speech denouncing this serial history of the first months of the war heralds the return of the Liberals to power.

THE hope of making a stand behind the Somme or the Oise or any other favorable position north of the Marne had now to be abandoned owing to the shattered condition of the army, and the far-reaching effect of our losses at the battle of Le Cateau was felt seriously even throughout the subsequent battle of the Marne and the early operations on the Aisne. It was not possible to replace our lost guns and machine guns until nearly the end of September.

In my dispatch written in September, 1914, I refer eulogistically to the battle of Le Cateau. I had been, together with my staff, directing the movements of the British army day and night up to the time of the battle of the Marne—in the course of which battle I received an urgent demand from the government that a dispatch should be forwarded.

It was completed, of necessity, very hurriedly and before there had been time or opportunity to give thorough study to the reports immediately preceding and covering the period of that battle, by which alone the full details could be disclosed.

At the time the dispatch was written, indeed, I was entirely ignorant of the material support which was rendered throughout the day by Gens. Sordet and D'Amade, and I accepted without question the estimate made by the commander of the 2d corps as to the nature of the threat against him and the position of the German forces opposed to him.

It is very difficult for the uninitiated to realize the concentration which the direction of an army carrying out a vigorous offensive like that of the Marne demands from the brain of the commander in chief, if he is to make the best use of the forces under his command.

In the surroundings and under the conditions of a great battle the preparation of material for and the compilation of any dispatch is a matter of great difficulty. It is very easy to say, "Why not employ others?" I have always held that it is only the general who conducts an operation of any magnitude who can, or should, sum up and describe it. No one else can know what was passing in his mind, or how his judgment was directed and formed by the swiftly moving procession of events.

In more than one of the accounts of the retreat from Mons it is alleged that some tacit consent at least was given at headquarters at St. Quentin to the decision arrived at by the commander of the 2d corps. I owe it to the able and devoted officers of my staff to say that there is not a semblance of truth in this statement.

Joffre Arranges Conference.

GEN. JOFFRE had arranged for a conference at my headquarters at St. Quentin with Lanrezac and myself to take place early on the 26th.

I had reached St. Quentin at about 8 a. m. on the 25th. There had been little sleep during the night for any of us. In the earlier hours continual reports came in regarding the dangerous position of the 1st corps. In addition to the unfortunate but inevitable delay in commencing their march in the morning, the troops were further greatly embarrassed and worried by the retirement of the French from the Sambre, and their convergence on our own line of march.

The enemy's cavalry, supported by guns, Jäger, and detachments of infantry carried on motor cars and lorries, closely pressed our columns through the Forêt de Mormal. The result of this was to make it imperative that the 2d division should make a firm stand at Landrécies and Maroilles before the 1st corps could reach the line assigned to it in the morning. A gap of some eight miles existed between the right of the 2d corps at Le Cateau and the left of the 1st corps at Landrécies.

The moment this news reached me I summoned Huguet, and through him dispatched an urgent request to two French reserve divisions (which formed part of the 5th French army and were nearest to the British) to move up and assist Haig.

They readily responded, and the effect of the diversion enabled Haig to extricate his corps from this most dangerous situation, which he did with great skill and judgment, while inflicting severe loss on the enemy.

Toward morning it was reported to me that the enemy had drawn off, and at dawn the retreat was resumed by the whole of the 1st corps as ordered. The fighting of the 1st corps through this night, combined with its skillful and efficient withdrawal in the morning, was one of the most brilliant episodes of the whole retreat.

No sooner was my mind made easier by this happy deliverance of the 1st corps when the trouble commenced with the 2d corps.

It was not until 8 a. m. on the 26th that I knew the left wing of the army was actually committed to the fight. At this time I was anxiously awaiting the arrival of Joffre and Lanrezac.

Staff officers were sent to Gen. Smith-Dorrien, carrying peremptory orders to break off the action and to continue the retreat forthwith.

Shortly afterward the French commander in chief arrived with his chief of staff. He was followed by the commander of the 5th French army, and we proceeded to discuss the situation.

I narrated the events of the previous two days, and pointed out the isolated situation in which the British army had been placed by the very sudden change of plan and headlong retirement of the 5th French army on my right.

Lanrezac Resents Inquiry.

LANREZAC appeared to treat the whole affair as quite normal, and merely incidental to the common exigencies of war. He offered no explanation, and gave no reason for the very unexpected moves he had made. The discussion was apparently distasteful to him, for he remained only a short time at headquarters, and left before any satisfactory understanding as to further plans and dispositions had been arrived at.

Joffre remained with me some considerable time. I gathered that he was by no means satisfied with the action and conduct of his subordinate general. No very definite plans were then decided upon, the understanding, as the French commander in chief left, being that the retreat was to be continued as slowly and deliberately as possible, until we found ourselves in a favorable position to make a firm stand and take the offensive. The commander in chief urged me to maintain my position in the line, which I told him I hoped, in spite of the heavy losses which we had suffered, to be able to do.

Immediately Joffre left I set out for Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien's headquarters, as I could get no satisfactory report from that general. For the first few miles we were able to make fair progress, but as we went on the road got worse and worse, and sometimes we were absolutely blocked for several minutes together.

The whole countryside was covered with refugees and their belongings, while our own transport was endeavoring to make all the haste they could to convey much needed food, ammunition, and material to the divisions in front.

Several messages reached me on the road, and at last I got information that Smith-Dorrien had broken off the action and that his columns were once more on the march. He was only just in time, for subsequent reports reached me during this motor journey of considerable Uhlan patrols in the neighborhood, and toward evening St. Quentin itself was threatened by hostile cavalry, which, however, did not succeed in entering the town.

On reaching headquarters I found that more or less detailed reports had arrived which showed the shattered condition of the troops which had fought at Le Cateau.

All idea of making any prolonged stand on the Somme south of St. Quentin, which had during the day seriously entered my mind as a possibility, was definitely abandoned.

The first necessity was to rally and collect the troops, which had become mixed up and scattered by the trying experiences of the previous days and nights. The great essential was to recover order, restore confidence, and infuse fresh spirit, with a clear aim in view. To enable all this to be brought about, we had first to look to the cavalry. Orders were at once sent to Allenby to make such dispositions as would effectually cover our rear and western flank. I told him he was to enlist the coöperation of the French cavalry under Sordet. The corps commanders were ordered to move toward the line La Fère-Noyon.

On the evening of the 26th headquarters were moved to Noyon, where I arrived late at night to consider the possibilities of making a stand behind the Oise.

On the 27th the orders issued for the efficient conduct of the retreat began to take effect, and the cavalry kept the enemy well at bay.

Smith-Dorrien reported himself in the early hours of the morning, and later Maj. Dawney (2d Life Guards)—the recollection of whose splendid and invaluable services, until he fell at the head of his regiment, will forever remain with me—brought news of Haig's progress, while Shea of the Indian cavalry—afterward a renowned leader of a division at the front—told me of the valuable rôle which was being so efficiently performed by the cavalry.

Joffre Praises English.

IN a telegram, which I communicated to the troops, Gen. Joffre very handsomely acknowledged what he described as the "invaluable" services rendered to the allied cause by the British army throughout the last few days.

It was a sincere gratification to the army to see the generous terms in which the French commander in chief expressed his appreciation.

The one idea which now possessed my mind was the possibility of making a stand with the object of obtaining the necessary time for rest and to make good equipment and bring up reinforcements.

At first sight it appeared to me that the line of the Oise and its tributary canalized waters offered such an opportunity.

The cursory examination of the ground which I was able to make on the morning of the 27th satisfied me that it possessed decided capabilities for a defense which was not intended to be prolonged, and I thought, also, that the tortuous course of the river afforded some alternative features, by availing ourselves of which a powerful offensive might be commenced at the right time.

During the day I had another interview with Joffre, which took place before I had time to estimate the actual fighting capabilities of the 2d corps and the 4th division.

I was not even then fully aware of the terrible extent to which we had suffered at Le Cateau. That these losses were heavy I never doubted, but I had no idea, until many hours later, that they were such as must paralyze for several days any movement in the direction of taking the offensive.

My early morning deliberations were very much in accord with the view of the French commander in chief. The proposal Joffre then communicated to me was that the allied armies should fall back on a line, roughly, from Reims on the east to Amiens on the west, which would bring the British forces into the zone of country south of the Oise, whose course I had already reconnoitered. We discussed the situation thoroughly, and Joffre was most sympathetic and "understanding" in reference to our special position. He promised that the 5th French army should be directed to take energetic action to relieve us from undue pressure by the enemy, and told me of his projects for the formation of the 6th French army on our left.

We parted without coming to any actual decision; for my part I could give no promise until I knew exactly what I had to rely upon; whilst energetic pursuit by the enemy might well prevent Joffre rendering me that support on both flanks which the situation imperatively demanded.

As a matter of fact, no more was heard of this project, and the idea of standing on the above mentioned line was abandoned.

Decides Stand Impossible.

ON the morning of the 28th general headquarters moved to Compiègne, where we remained till the morning of the 31st.

It was during Friday the 28th that I fully realized the heavy losses we had incurred. Since Sunday the 23d this had reached, in officers and men, the total of upward of 15,000. The deficiency in armament and equipment was equally serious. Roughly, some eighty guns and a large proportion of machine guns, besides innumerable articles of necessary equipment and a large quantity of transport, had fallen into the enemy's hands.

It became quite clear to me that no effective stand could be made until we were able to improve our condition.

It was on this day that I received the assurance, the most welcome to a commander in retreat, that the cavalry under Allenby's skillful direction was effectively holding the enemy's pursuit.

Gough with the 3rd cavalry brigade at St. Quentin, and Chetwode with the 5th at Cérizy vigorously attacked the leading troops of the German cavalry at both these places, and threw them back in confusion and with heavy loss on to their main bodies.

On our left D'Amade with the two French reserve divisions and Sordet with his corps of cavalry attacked the Germans in and around Peronne.

Allenby's headquarters were then at Cressy (northwest of Noyon), and Sordet called upon him for support in this enterprise.

Before arrangements could be made for such assistance the French were driven back.

Although this attack failed to drive the Germans north, it was most valuable and effective in checking the pursuit, and by their vigorous action the troops of D'Amade and Sordet showed the stuff of which the embryo 6th army was being formed—that army which a few days later covered itself with imperishable glory on the Marne and Ourcq.

On our right there still appeared little encouragement to hope for an early effective stand. The 5th French army was in full retreat, the reserve divisions, after fighting at Urvillers, were retiring on the Oise, while the 18th corps on their right was thrown back from Itancourt to the Oise by a violent German attack.

I spent several hours of the 28th in going the rounds of the troops, as it was possible to intercept various columns on the march or at their temporary halts. I was able to get the men together on the roadside, to thank them for the splendid work they had done, to tell them of the gratitude of the French commander in chief and the immense value of the service they had rendeerd to the allied cause. I charged them to repeat all this to their comrades and to spread it throughout the units to which they belonged. There was neither time nor opportunity for any formal inspection or set parade. The enemy was on our heels and there was little time to spare, but it touched me to the quick to realize how, in the face of all the terrible demand made upon their courage, strength, and endurance, these glorious British soldiers listened to the few words I was able to say to them with the spirit of heroes and the confidence of children. It afforded me gratifying evidence of the wonderful instinctive sympathy which has always existed between the British soldier and his officer. These men had seen how they had been led, they knew the far greater proportionate loss suffered by their officers, they felt that they trusted them and were ready to follow them anywhere. It is this wonderful understanding between "leaders" and "led" which has constituted the great strength and glory of the British army throughout all ages.

Soldiers Had No Complaints.

IN all these roadside talks and confidences never did I hear one word of complaint or breath of criticism. The spirit of disciplines was as palpably shown among these scattered groups of unkempt, overstrained, tired soldiers as on any "king's birthday" review ever held on the horse guards parade. Their one repeated question was, "When shall we turn round and face them again?" And they would add, "We can drive them to hell."

It was distressing, indeed, to look at some battalions, which I had seen near Mons only some three or four days earlier in all their fresh glory and strength, now brought down to a handful of men and two or three officers, but the glorious spirit I saw animating the men gave me the keenest pleasure and inspired a confidence which was of the utmost help.

On this day I inspected a large proportion of the transport of both army corps, which I found in a much better condition than could have been thought possible.

I did not reach my headquarters at Compiègne until 5. I found Huguet waiting for me with a staff officer of the 7th French army corps, which was to form part of the new 6th French army. It was from the talk I had with them that I learned how Joffre was forming the new 6th army.

Huguet informed me that a considerable force was being railed round from Verdun to Amiens and that the new army would be commanded by Gen. Maunoury. I knew nothing then of the French commander in chief's ultimate plans, and I doubt if at that moment he had been able to formulate any decided line of action. At this particular time I think the unprepared condition of Paris loomed largely in his mind, and that his original intention with regard to the 6th army was most probably to make further provision for the protection of the capital.

Joffre had particularly asked me to undertake the air reconnaissance on the western flank of the allied forces.

Our intelligence service had been admirably organized and was working most effectively under the able direction of Brig. Gen. MacDonough.

During my stay at Compiègne all appreciations of the situation pointed to the immediate investment of Paris by the right wing of the German army as being the enemy's first objective.

It is fairly certain that the concentration of an important new army on the western flank of the British, to the north of Paris, was quite unknown to the Germans and did not enter into their calculations until some days later.

We had also the best reason for believing that the German higher command regarded the British forces as shattered and almost useless, at any rate so far as any effort which we could make for the defense of Paris was concerned. In fact, believing the capital to be practically at its mercy, the right wing of the German army was blindly marching into a veritable hornets' nest in spite of the backward condition of the Paris defense.

French Assist Retreat.

ON THE 29th a very brilliant and successful attack by the French 5th army at Guise heavily defeated three German army corps and threw them back with severe loss. This had a great effect in assisting the retreat, for it not only enabled the 5th army to hold its own for some time on the Oise, between Guise and La Fère, but it considerably relieved hostile pressure on the British and French troops on our left.

From Roye on the west, Montdidier, Noyon, La Fère, Guise, up to Hirson on the east, the heads of the allied columns were established, well covered by their advanced cavalry.

Throughout this day reports often contradictory and conflicting reached me. It was quite clear that our position on the Oise was being dangerously threatened by superior forces, and I felt it to be impossible to stand on that line even until we could make good some of our heavy losses, and I could not hope to get anything up for several days to come.

With great reluctance I ordered the retreat to be continued to the line of the Aisne from Compeigne to Soissons, but in view of the knock given to the enemy at Guise by the 5th French army and the desire expressed by Gen. Joffre that the allied forces should hold their ground as long as possible and retire only when necessary, I directed commanders to carry out their marches with all deliberation and to take advantage of every opportunity to check the enemy's advance.

It now became known to the allied command that the enemy had detached a considerable force to his eastern frontier, where he was being seriously threatened by the Russians. Joffre's natural desire to profit by this, coupled with his fears for the safety of Paris, made him very anxious to take the offensive at the earliest possible moment. He came to see me on the afternoon of the 29th of August at Compiègne, and urged these views upon me. I remained firm in my absolute conviction that the British forces could not effectively fulfil their share in such action for some days, and that, so far as we were concerned, a further retreat was inevitable. I assured the French commander in chief that no serious gap should be made in his line by any premature or hasty retirement, but I imperatively demanded the necessary time to refit and obtain reinforcements.

I strongly represented to Joffre the advantage of drawing the German armies on still further from their base, even although we had to move south of the Marne. Indeed, the ideas which I afterward expressed at the British embassy in Paris to Mr. Millerand, the French minister of war, in the presence of Lord Kitchener, were the same which I had in my mind during this interview with Joffre, namely that our stand should be made on some line between the Marne and the Seine.

The French army was still in full retreat. The 6th French army on our left was not yet formed, and the commander in chief had put no definite plan of attack before me, with an assigned rôle which he desired me to fulfil. All he asked me to do was to remain in the line and fill up the gap between the 5th and 6th armies. This I had every intention of doing.

Subordinates Oppose French.

I AM bound to say that I had to make this decision in the face of resistance from some of my subordinate commanders, who took a depressed view as to the condition of their troops. When I discussed the situation at a meeting of British commanders held at Compiègne, Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien expressed it as his opinion that the only course open to us was to retire to our base, thoroughly refit, reëmbark, and try to land at some favorable point on the coast line. I refused to listen to what was the equivalent of a counsel of despair.

Our communications with Havre being now dangerously threatened, it became necessary to effect a change of base and establish a fresh line. St. Nazaire and Nantes were fixed upon, with Le Mans as advanced base.

The morning of the 30th found our cavalry with two brigades to the northwest of Compiègne, one to the north and one to the northeast. The 5th, under Chetwode, covered the retirement of the 1st corps. Our line that night was through Nampiel on the west to Coucy-le-Chateau.

Huguet today communicated to me Joffre's new dispositions. He was retiring the 5th French army to the line of the Serre, their left on La Fere; their army toward Rethel. The 6th French army was to fall back to the line, Compiègne-Clermont. Sordet's cavalry corps was to be on the left of the line.

Joffre sent an urgent request to me to destroy the bridges over the Oise between Compiègne and La Fère.

Huguet once more pressed upon me Joffre's urgent desire that I should remain and fill the gap between Compiègne and Fère. In reply I again repeated emphatically what I had previously stated, namely, that I could be in no condition to stand and fight for several days and therefore I could not consent to fill any portion of a fighting line. I was fully prepared to continue the retreat slowly and deliberately, retaining my present position between the 5th and 6th armies.

Now, as before, the view I took of my responsibilities in accordance with my interpretation of the special instructions given me guided my deliberations in these difficult days.

These 16 Maxwell Trucks Ran 90,010 Miles; Total Repair Cost, $830.59

IT is one thing for a motor truck to show long mileage on gas, oil and tires—and quite another to stay out of the repair shop. Maxwell trucks have become well known for their obvious economy. This deals only with the repair side of the Maxwell.

It is printed after the second mail of returns has come in from a canvass of 10,000 Maxwell owners. The first fifteen trucks examined showed a mileage of 109,700 at a total repair cost of $313.07.

These sixteen did not do quite so well, yet they hung up the magnificent average of $.009+ per mile on repairs.

One ran 20,000 miles at a cost of $220. A second covered 12,000 miles at a cost of $12. A third did 5000 miles at a cost of $15. Another passed 4320 miles without a penny's cost. Still another passed 3000 at no cost. Again a fifth did 4000—and no cost.

It is further proof of the contention that Maxwell trucks are efficient in more ways than one: they run at small cost and it doesn't cost much to keep them running.

A further analysis disclosed 15, 18, 22 miles to the gallon of gas, 200, 250, 275 miles to the gallon of oil. And not a single owner among these sixteen hesitated to state he would purchase Maxwells again!

And the shining dust
  Of which stars are spun.

A cave there is,
  On the edge of the world,
Where the three Fates sit
  With their threads unfurled—
Past, Present, Future—
  The melody sings
From their spinning wheel
  Of the round of things.

ONE of the more recent paintings that has been presented to the Art institute by the Friends of American Art is "The Fates Gathering in the Stars," by Elihu Vedder. The picture is hung with the other canvases that go to make up this collection in the east wing of the institute. Among the others, it stands out by the very force and simplicity of its construction and by the dark, dusk warning quality of its coloring.

They are young, these Fates of Vedder, and full of a vigorous strength, brutelike in its intensity. They pull on the silver gray cords of cloud, where the twinkling stars lie enmeshed as though they were not women, but sailormen of such breed as sailed the Spanish main in the days of Drake or the more universal Capt. Kidd. Yet for all their strength they are women, more divine than mortal, and more mortal than spirit.

On a great rock that yawns over a bottomless abyss they stand. Their distaff thrown aside, the threads of time a tangle at their feet. The lone wind whistles about them, blowing their robes in billowing sweeps of color. The flash of a single star escaped from their net bursts like a meteor below them. And all about is the dull, dead gloom of light which spells day, on the edge of the world.

Those of us who know the institute know without further comment from this column the beauties of the paintings that are numbered in the exhibit of pictures by the Friends of American Art. To emphasize a bit the work that has really been accomplished by the society during the last several years there has been published this year an interesting portfolio of halftone prints of the canvases and sculpture which the Friends of American Art has acquired in the nine years of its existence. A list of the works to supplement year books of older issue has also been compiled. These few paragraphs taken from the foreword of the announcement are of value as showing to a certain extent the meaning and purpose of the society:

> The aim of the society has been to acquire, so far as its resources allow, a collection of modern works of art representative of the best that is now being done and also of the present standards of art and taste. The society feels that such a collection, made now, will hereafter have a unique value. In addition to acquiring works by artists of established reputation, it has tried to encourage younger artists—to recognize them early by purchasing their works. Some mistakes may have been made, but these can be corrected later. The society also feels that its purchases, frequently made from exhibitions held at the Art institute, tend to encourage exhibitors and to improve the quality of these exhibitions.
> This list shows that many artists of national reputation are still unrepresented. In this connection it is interesting to note that the committee of prominent American artists recently appointed to assemble an exhibition of American pictures to be exhibited in the Luxemburg museum at the invitation of France has invited about 140 artists. This is about twice as many as we have represented in our collection. It is also interesting to note, by way of comparison, that our collection includes only about a dozen artists not invited to the exhibition in France. From this we may draw the conclusions that our collection must be largely increased in order to become fairly representative of living American artists who have acquired reputation, and also that we have in the main concurred with this committee in our choice of artists.
> Bu it must be remembered tht young artists are continually gaining recognition and are doing excellent work. Contemporary judgments are not always final, but these younger artists should be recognized.
>
> The society has acquired a few portraits by early American painters. There are not many early American portrait painters whose works are worthy of preservation, and it is therefore hoped that the society may have sufficient support to complete this collection.
> For all these reasons the Friends of American Art ask you to inspect their collection, to consider their plans, and if it appeals to you to join in their support by becoming a member. Membership costs $200 per annum. During the war we have made little effort to keep up our subscription list. The time has now come when we think that it should be maintained and increased. We cannot make a general appeal for this purpose, but must appeal to those who are especially intrested in the maintenance of art, in art collections, and in our Art institute.

This appeal is an earnest one and deserves at least a sincere hearing. For those of us who will answer it there is no more vital piece of municipal work than this which is offered to us here.

For the purely personal pleasure that I receive in transcribing occasionally by notes on an exhibition without change to the more dignified field of this column I shall set down here as I find them my impressions of the exhibit of Persian miniatures now being shown in gallery 46 of the institute. The miniatures are lent by Miss Maude Buckingham.

Evidently many of these pictures are of Biblical significance. There is a quaint scene of the lion lying down with the lamb and two little fawns farther on, resting beside a purling stream. In the background women make obeisance to a naked lad who sits beneath a flowering tree with his dog close by. The figures are wooden but charming. In this and the majority of the other scenes there is fantastic coloring and exotic grouping. To point the exception, there is a lone, white, long fleeced sheep with crinkly horns standing on a hilltop.

Farther on a splendid battle is taking place. Soldiers shoot with cross bows from thick wooden turrets at mounted knights upon a bridge, who, stuck, fall splashing, horse and all, into the flooded moat.

Beyond this there is a snake charmer seated on a huge, flat, round, pink stone. He wears (or is it she?) a green skirt, short, brilliant anklets, and a chain of beads—one regrets the necessary smile is not present. The snakes chortle with delight about her, rising on their slim tails to evidence the distinct pleasure they take in her presence.

And there are other pictures. Several are charming panels of birds; another is a city garden; another a circus with elephant and sturdy, milk-white steeds; another a gray wizard with countless arms who stands in a chariot drawn by two sleek tigers; and, last, a wise man, in these days when wisdom is rare, with the dove of peace.

Miles and Service

THE big Sterling Truck Tires have proportionately the same sturdy strength that has made their little brothers give such marvelous mileage on small and medium size cars and trucks.

35x5—36x6—38x7—40x8.

These are the sizes for truck use on long hauls over bumpy roads. Day after day, year in and year out, they carry heavy loads of Sterling Tires to our own branches—Rutherford to Washington—Rutherford to Rochester—Rutherford to Boston. We know what they do for us—so we know what they will do for you.

Built of superstrong cord fabric in many layers, thickly impregnated with the Sterling rubber compound that knows no parting.

Air bag cured—long time cured—three or four times as long as many tires. And long cure means long wear—if the rest is right. No short cure tire can wear long.

The Vacuum-Bar tread holds the road and makes chains needless except in severest conditions.

REO

If It Isn't a Reo It Isn't a "Speed Wagon"

RIVALS ARE COPYING not only the general features of design, but even the very term by which we designate the light, speedy Reo Motor Truck.

WE SAID "GENERAL" features. Note the distinction! For that is as far as the imitators go.

THEY CANNOT imitate Reo in the fundamental features—motor, transmission, axles, steering and control system—without actually counterfeiting the Reo.

AND EVEN THEN, there would still be lacking that quality which you have come to know as Reo.

SO DON'T BE MISLED by the term "Speed Wagon" for legitimately that belongs to the Reo exclusively.

REO ENGINEERS developed this special type of motor truck—and in the Reo advertising we created the term.

IF IT ISN'T a Reo then, it isn't a "Speed Wagon."

AND IF IT IS a Reo—then you can be certain it is the best motor truck of that type, because it was the pioneer and therefore represents the ripest practical experience.

THIS REO WAS RIGHT from the very first—that is why it has enjoyed such a tremendous success—that is why it is being so generally imitated now.

AND THAT ALSO is the answer to the unprecedented over demand which the Reo "Speed-Wagon" now enjoys.

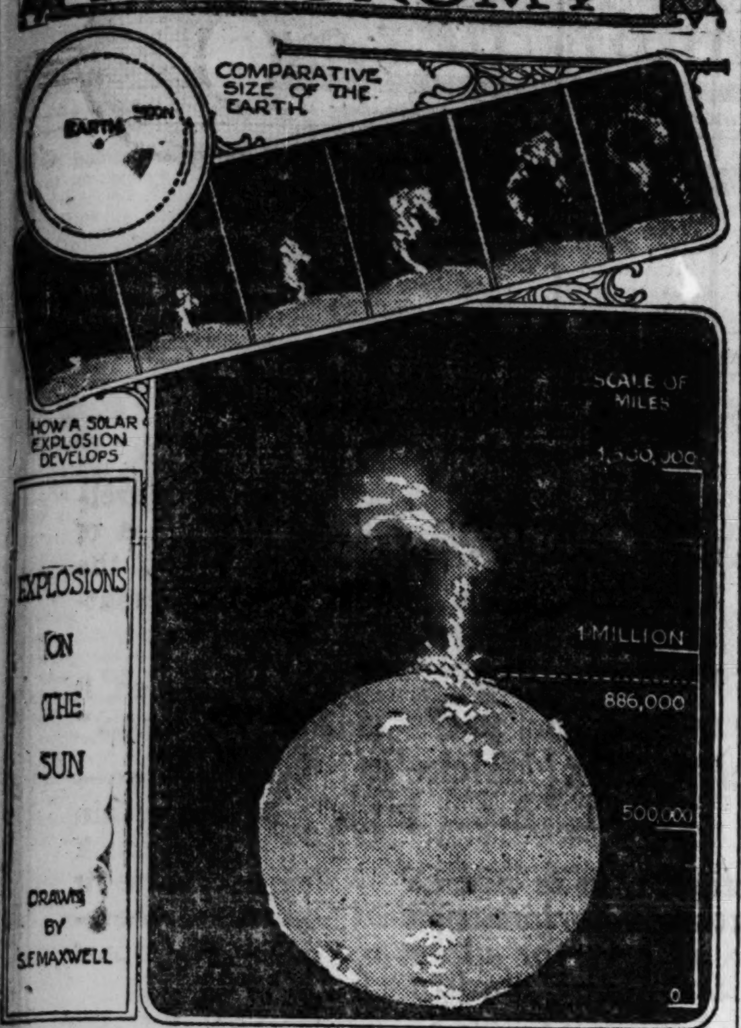
ASTRONOMY



A GREAT explosion has been observed on the sun. It was no little eruption, involving a space the size of the continent of America, for such outbursts are too common to more than mention. Nor was it the size of a giant spot, big enough to hold all the planets rolled in together. The flames from this explosion shot almost half a million miles into the sky, or half the diameter of the sun itself.

We cannot comprehend so much energy suddenly released. There was enough power in this one burst to run all the engines on earth full speed, day and night, for the next 10,000 years.

Eruptions of this size are fairly common solar occurrences. The sun is too bright to be easily observed and for this reason unusual disturbances often pass unnoticed. If we could see it as plainly with the naked eye as with the special arrangement of glasses that astronomers use, we should behold its round shining disk spotted over with bright scarlet beads, and a pearly glow would be constantly playing round the edge. The beads are tree shaped or fan shaped clouds of erupted metals and the glow is the sun's air that the clouds are floating in.

Occasionally there comes a brilliant white flash and then, while one looks, a flaming cloudlike scarlet shape begins to mount upward. It moves slowly, like a train seen a long way off, but at the sun's distance of 93,000,000 miles such a motion indicates the terrific speed of over 250 miles per second. In the space of a few minutes the great red cloud will climb 200,000, 300,000, or even 400,000 miles above the solar surface, expanding as it rises, curling over, and then falling back upon the sun again.

The largest explosion that has taken place on earth within historic times occurred in 1883 on the volcanic island of Krakatoa, near Java. Eye witnesses at the city of Anjer, Java, fifty miles away, said that they saw the sea crack open from the volcano to the mainland. The water poured in in two great cataracts and then, a few minutes later, the whole island of Krakatoa was blown to atoms.

It is said that the flying débris rose to a height of seventeen miles and measured over a cubic mile of solid contents in the shape of dust and powder. But if an explosion were to take place on earth in an equal ratio to the one which has just occurred on the sun, the ashes would be driven 3,000 miles high, instead of seventeen. Such an explosion would shatter the earth's solid shell like so much glass. The sun escapes injury only because it is made of gases, which can always return to their original condition when the turmoil is over.

When we remember that gravity on the sun is twenty-seven times as strong as here on earth we must realize to some degree what a terrific explosion it must have been to do this.

Cooper and Lacy:

"Ever go to the theater?"

"Yes, indeed. The other night I saw a brand new play, it's first production on the stage."

"What was the name of it?"

"'Uncle Tom's Cabin.'"

"Who was the play by?"

"Shakespeare. In the scene where Eliza chases the bloodhounds across the ice she asked an awful funny conundrum."

"Let's hear it."

"Why is a gay widow like a newspaper?"

"Because she's often seen in wrappers and goes out with the mails."

"I only like to talk to people of refinement."

"I was educated to be a gentleman."

"You left before your term was finished."

"Candidly, now, what do I remind you of?"

"A flying machine."

"And why do I remind you of a flying machine?"

"Because you're no good on earth."

A Performance That Has No Parallel

Time after time, with inveterate regularity, Goodyear Cord Tires have in the past four years captured the honors on speedway, road course and straightaway.

Today, by virtue of their unmatched and indefatigable performance, they hold all important world's records in motor racing from one to six hundred miles.

Yet it is doubtful if ever they have served with higher honor than in the International 500-mile Victory Sweepstakes at Indianapolis, May 31st.

Nine of the ten drivers in the Sweepstakes who finished in prize-money positions piloted their cars through the savage contest on Goodyear Cord Tires.

Howard Wilcox, driving his able Peugeot over the difficult course to victory at an average speed of 87.12 miles an hour, rode on Goodyear Cord Tires.

So did Hearne in his Durant Special, Goux in his Peugeot, Guyot in his Ballot, finishing second, third and fourth in the order named.

So did DePalma in his Packard, Louis Chevrolet in his Frontenac, Vail in his Hudson, Hickey in his Hudson, and Gaston Chevrolet in his Frontenac, finishing sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth, respectively.

Ira Vail and Denny Hickey in their Hudsons, the only two drivers to cover the entire 500 miles without a tire change, both rode on Goodyear Cord Tires.

Twenty-seven of the 33 cars that started were equipped with Goodyear Cord Tires; 13 of the 14 cars that finished were so equipped.

Despite a pace exceptionally punishing, there were 38.5% fewer tire changes in relation to the number of cars starting, than in any previous 500-mile race on this course.

The speed, endurance and stamina demonstrated by Goodyear Cord Tires in this contest constitute a performance that has no parallel in racing annals.

It is the capacity for such performance in everyday as well as exhibition service that has made Goodyear Tires the most popular tires in the world.

More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind

Present Racing Cars Barred in 1920 Contests

Hazards of Speed Bring Decree for Smaller Power Plants.

RACING cars next year will be smaller — and, presumably, slower.

At the close of the Indianapolis race a week ago it was announced that the 1920 contest on the Hoosier course will be for cars not more than 183 cubic inches (three liters) piston displacement instead of 300 cubic inches, the size to which the present racers conform.

This means that the same rule will apply to all American speedway races, for the announcement was made with the sanction of the American Automobile association contest board, and builders of racing cars generally are being notified that engines of a new size must be built for next year.

Every one agreed at the Indianapolis race that the cars were too fast for the track. Predictions that the drivers would come to grief on the low banked turns found grim fulfillment in the death of three of the contestants. A tragedy was expected, and the tragedy came.

Moreover, there is a movement on foot to revive road racing at Elgin and elsewhere, and this, with cars developed to their present terrific speed, would mean risks greater than the drivers have ever before faced.

The national automobile organizations of France and Great Britain voted several weeks ago to adopt three liters as the maximum racing size when the big European contests such as the French Grand Prix are revived in 1920. So, after this season, the day of the present racing machines will be over and an entirely new type of small fast power plant will be developed.

Reducing the element of danger, of course, is not the only consideration. Except in the very earliest days of the automobile, mechanical development has been the aim of the racing authorities rather than attainment of the greatest possible speed.

Thus the designers, with the size of their engines limited, have been forced to use their ingenuity to get power through devices other than the mere construction of large cylinders. Many mechanical improvements have been the result. For example, it was the racing game that brought to this country the idea of equipping each cylinder with two sets of valves instead of one, a principle used by Stutz, White, Pierce-Arrow, and a constantly increasing number of other builders.

The present racing size, 300 cubic inches, is approximately that of the average passenger car engine. The size of the lighter cars is usually in the neighborhood of 250. That of the heavier cars, with "multicylinder" power plants, runs up above 400.

With the new 183 inch size we shall, for the first time, have racing cars with engines smaller than those of the machines we buy and drive. Of the better known cars only the Ford has an engine as small. Its piston displacement is 176.7 cubic inches.

It is reasonable to suppose, however, that with smaller engines on the speedways a general tendency toward lighter, more efficient power plants will follow. What the racing men do is always reflected, sooner or later, in ordinary passenger car design.

No Glare in New York.

There will be strict enforcement of the no glare headlight law in New York state this year. State troopers have received orders to patrol the highway at night to enforce headlight laws, while in the cities police officers will attend to the enforcement. Lists containing the names of fifty-one lenses and devices, approved by the state bureau have been sent to police chiefs, justices of the peace, and other officials in the state. These show just what lenses are legal and also give angles at which lights must be tilted when this is necessary.

RESTA OUT FOR LAURELS WITH NEW 'MYSTERY CAR'

NEW YORK, June 7.—[Special.]—Dario Resta, the Anglo-Italian speed demon, was the first driver to reach the Sheepshead Bay speedway to tune-up for the $35,000 International sweepstakes, which will be staged at the two mile course next Saturday afternoon.

Resta, whose English Sunbeam was entered for the Indianapolis race and abruptly withdrawn, appeared with a "mystery car," which he put to a test yesterday, providing a thrill for the few railbirds who happened to be out. After circling the track ten times he opened up and for two and a half miles attained a speed slightly above the 110 mile an hour mark. The Italian says his racer, which he has spent a whole year in constructing, can travel close to 120 miles an hour.

Jean Ballot, the French millionaire motor racing enthusiast, has notified the management that he will enter the fast Ballot racing team, the machines to be driven by Rene Thomas and Louis Wagner, the same as at Indianapolis.

Fred Wagner, who will wave the checkered flag as starter, will start work on Monday perfecting his new automatic timing device. The working principle of this machine comprises a special wire strung entirely around the two mile oval and cross-covers placed in certain positions. Every time a car passes over this position it is recorded on the timing machine, which is operated from the starting point. The device is operated by two experts and three scorers.

"Y" Autos Still Busy.

Peace has not reduced the importance of the overseas motor transport department of the Y. M. C. A. war work council. The association has spent $827,126.20 for cars and accessories since the signing of the armistice, exclusive of $52,000 expended for motorcycles.

The motor transport material consists of 1,700 cars, of which about 900 are trucks consisting of twenty-two different makes. The touring cars include twenty different makes, while there are four makes of motorcycles. This combination gives forty-six varieties of engines for the mechanicians to struggle with and catalog parts for.

Transport in Italy.

The use of motor vehicles as feeders to the railroads is believed to be more extended in Italy than in any other country in the world. This is owing to the fact that Italy is a mountainous country in which railroad lines can only be built at considerable cost. The total length of normal track railroad lines in Italy is 8,700 miles, while the length of routes over which motor services are run with a fixed time table is 8,070 miles. There are 400 motor lines over which regular public services are operated.

Financial Men Puzzled Over Tire Price Cut

BY GLENN GRISWOLD.

THOSE of the financial district whose interest in the tire business is confined to corporate earnings and share quotations find the present price cutting movement disconcerting.

A month ago, when reconstruction was the all important consideration, and those whose mental processes are usually sound took for granted an early horizontal reduction of commodity prices, the present policy of the tire companies had been accepted as entirely logical.

Now that the financial community is coming to an appreciation of the fact that inflation and not depression is the early reaction of peace—that prices tend upward and that the cost of living, both for the individual and the corporation, continues to creep forward—a general policy of price reduction on the part of so important an industry is something for La Salle and Wall streets to worry about.

There are those among industrialists and bankers who wonder if the tire makers have developed a special prescience and are making a move that other manufacturers must make as they sense the business trend. The majority, however, believe that the tire companies are engaging in an expensive contest, which may hurt some of the weaker of their number and will do no good to any unless some monopolistic advantage develops.

The government decreed that steel was too high and attempted enforced reductions, but the paternal tendency has been discouraged and prices have moved upward as to rails, ship steel, some wire products, and other manufactures of the metal. Copper followed a similar course and is now on an upward trend. Silver has done likewise. Every commodity has followed the trend of peace inflation as soon as artificial restraints were removed.

In the past price cutting has been costly to some and disastrous to others among tire and automobile makers. The financial district will watch closely the experiment of the former; the latter for the most part appear to have abandoned price-cutting notions which beset them three months ago.

30% More Wearing Material

Than in old-style tires of equal rating

No old-style tire can attempt to run as far or ride with the easy spring of the Uniform Miller Cord. In the first place the Miller is made of the finest materials and contains more of them than any ordinary tire of equal-rated size. The Miller is also heavier and thicker.

For proof behold the picture below, drawn from an actual photograph. Both tires are rated 30 by 3½ inches, but the Miller is bigger 'round and bigger through. It gives you 30 per cent more actual wearing material and over 11 per cent more air capacity.

Buoyant, Elastic

The Miller is built of thousands of cable cords, floated in new live rubber layer on layer. These tires are the latest, most improved type. They give and take as they roll on the rough of the road, protecting the car or truck from destructive vibration. They are longest wearing, lowest in cost per mile.

Men who equip with Miller Cords are amazed at the ease and comfort the old car gives.

Geared-to-the-Road

The famous Geared-to-the-Road tread has many caterpillar feet that engage the ground like cogs, giving positive traction and safety in slippery weather.

Like all Miller Tires, these Cords are uniform. Casing after Casing they give long-distance mileage, because every tire is built the same. And built to a championship standard.

You should get a set of Miller Uniform Cords from the authorized Miller dealers. These tires make any car look handsomer and bigger.

Look to the Cause When Your Engine Gets "All Het Up"

Steaming Radiators Are Danger Signs; Don't Neglect Them.

BY HIGH SPEED.

WE are now approaching the season when overheating of the engine is a trouble frequently encountered and in some instances becomes almost a chronic condition. This is not to say that overheating is a seasonal ill of the engine, because it often occurs in zero temperatures. However, it is more frequent in summer and consequently the owner should take all due precautions to prevent it.

In the first place it should be understood that overheating is no mere annoyance; it is more serious than that. If the condition becomes chronic it contributes to the rapid deterioration of the engine and its equipment and it should be remedied as quickly as possible.

A number of conditions may produce overheating, some functional and some mechanical. Perhaps the commonest cause of all is driving with the spark lever too far advanced. When this is done the spark occurs while the piston is a considerable distance down in the cylinder, leaving a more than normally large area of the cylinder wall exposed to the flame, whereby an increased amount of heat is carried into the cooling water, which rapidly boils.

The car owner frequently notices that when he is obliged to climb a steep hill with the spark retarded to keep the engine from knocking by the time he gets to the top his radiator is steaming. If this is characteristic of any given engine the owner of that outfit had better get at the fundamental cause of it and cure it, so that the spark lever may be kept further advanced on hills.

In the race to determine the most prolific cause of overheating our old friend carbon is well in the van, if not the actual leader. Carbon deposits cause preignition with just the same effect as if the spark lever had been too far advanced. The specks of carbon become incandescent and fire the incoming charge before its proper time. In this case also the flame occurs when an undue area of cylinder wall is exposed, so that an excessive amount of heat finds its way through into the water. The symptoms of this cause of overheating are knocking, backfiring, and a noticeable falling off in power. The only cure, of course, is removal of the carbon deposits, which may be done by scraping or by the oxygen method.

Naturally enough, a second common cause of overheating is to be found in some failure of the cooling system. This trouble is easily discovered, simply by removing the radiator cap while the engine is running and noting whether or not there is a circulation of the water. If the water is not running obviously the system is clogged up, and the next thing is to find the cause.

Now the causes behind impeded circulation vary according to whether the system is thermo-syphon or pump.

In the thermo-syphon cooling system the only thing that can stop the flow of water is a direct stoppage in the system. The first thing to do is to open the drain and permit the water to run out of the radiator and engine. By watching the rate of flow it is easy to determine whether the stoppage is in this part of the water system.

If the radiator is stopped up it should have a thorough cleaning. As a general rule this job should be handed over to a firm that specializes in this sort of work. When it is mentioned that sometimes as much as four pounds of muck will be taken out of a single radiator the reason why special treatment is necessary is shown.

Let it be emphasized that the average car owner is far too casual in the sort of water he uses in his cooling system. If dirty water is used in this connection a little foreign matter entering at each filling soon creates the material for a complete stoppage.

On the other hand, with the pump system there is not much danger of overheating due to stoppage of the system because the positive action of the pump forces the water around and prevents the tying up of the system in this way.

But when anything goes wrong with the pump the system at once ceases to circulate the water, which immediately boils, with the usual consequences. By opening the drain of the pump system and observing the rate at which the water pours out you can get an accurate line on the way in which the device is functioning.

Many engines in use today include a so-called thermostat, the function of which is to keep the temperature of the engine at the favorable operating point. If anything happens to the thermostat, so that it fails to open at the appointed time, circulation in the water system stops and overheating is instantaneous.

So much for the functional causes of overheating. There are other causes of this trouble, principally mechanical.

Valve and ignition timing must be considered in this connection. Faulty carburetion will overheat the engine. Poor mixture, which burns slowly instead of exploding with snap and vim, will do the same thing. The effect of a bad mixture is the same as running with an unduly retarded spark. The slow burning mixture is still burning after the piston starts on its way down, leaving an abnormal area of the cylinder wall exposed, so that the excess heat finds its way into the water system.

The tendency of the average car owner to use too rich a mixture tends to increase this trouble.

Valve and ignition timing do not produce emergency overheating. These incorrect adjustments are more likely to produce the long standing, chronic cases of overheating, and they usually call for a visit to the service station.

Lubrication is another possible cause of overheating if it is not properly carried out. The moving parts are deprived of the protective film of oil, friction is generated, and this means excessive heat.

IT MAY BE SLOW, BUT IT'S AMBITIOUS—Now that the NC-4 has crossed the ocean and a five ton motor truck has crossed the continent and all that, they had to think of something else. So a Wheat tractor has set out from New York for Los Angeles by way of Cleveland, Chicago, and St. Louis. The speed of a tractor is only slightly greater than that of a glacier, but it expects to arrive some time. They gave the contraption a sendoff luncheon at the Automobile Club of America's headquarters in New York, and when the picture was taken it was making its actual start from the "Jersey side." Why, you ask, should a tractor cross the continent? Well, why does a chicken cross the road?

Gossip of the Auto Trade

THERE is a strong demand for motor cars in Europe which cannot be satisfied unless the embargoes over there are raised to permit American cars to enter, according to C. C. Hanch, secretary of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, who has just returned from a four months' tour of investigation in European countries. England has permitted imports of a limited number of cars, but France and Italy have taken no action, and the foreign factories, Mr. Hanch thinks, "will not soon be very strong competitors of the American product." "It is worth noting," he adds, "that there is only one car for every 400 people in France and one for every 225 in England, while there is one for every eighteen in this country."

The 500 mile race at Indianapolis was a triumph for at least two of the tire builders whose products were in the contest. Goodyear, which specializes in racing tires, was in the majority of course. Nine of the ten winners finished on this make, but the really notable feature of the record was that Ira Vail, who came in eighth, drove the entire distance on the difficult brick course without a tire change. Tom Alley, who took fifth place, put a feather in the cap of the Mason organization, which has made no special campaign for speedway honors. Ally drove with Masons and finished with three of them unchanged.

Another sign of the times in the matter of tire economy is the announcement that "adjustment" on Goodrich tires will be made hereafter on a basis of 6,000 miles for fabric tires and 8,000 for cords instead of 3,500 and 5,000, the figures previously in force. Presumably the other big companies will follow suit, as they did in the matter of the recent tire price reductions.

Baker runabout No. 1, an ancient and honorable of the electric car world, and the Baker "torpedo kid," an old electric racing car, have been attracting attention at the Michigan avenue salesrooms of the Magnetic Motors corporation, where they have been on exhibition. The runabout, built in 1897, weighs only 600 pounds and has a maximum speed of fifteen miles an hour.

Three letters, bearing Swiss postmarks but signed by Germans, have been received at the National factory in Indianapolis, seeking National agencies or advertising in Germany. "All received waste basket priority," reports an official of the company. "Germany, Austria, and Turkey are the only countries in the world where the National has no desire to establish foreign agencies."

A newcomer among Chicago automobile dealers is the Hartnett-Stewart Motor company, which has undertaken the marketing of the Atterbury truck in these parts. The concern's headquarters will be at 1515 Wabash avenue.

Owen tires also have invaded "motor row," the makers having opened a factory branch at 2636 Michigan avenue. N. H. Smith will be in charge as branch manager.

Questions and Answers

> Readers who wish measurably prompt replies to requests for motoring information will do well to provide a stamped and self-addressed envelope, so that they may be answered by mail. Limitations of space are such that only a few of the many inquiries received can be answered in this column.

Please give me the latest and correct report as to the winners of the 500 mile race at Indianapolis.

W. M. E., Chicago.

According to the corrected report, which varies somewhat from that given out at the close of the race, the first ten drivers finished thus:

Car, driver.	Time.	M.P.H.
1—Peugeot, Wilcox	5:40:42.87	87.95
2—Durant, Hearne	5:44:29.04	87.00
3—Peugeot, Goux	5:49:06.18	85.90
4—Ballot, Guyet	5:05:03.92	84.35
5—Bender, Alley	6:05:03.92	82.2
6—Packard, De Palma	6:10:10.64	81.05
7—Frontenac, L. Chevrolet	6:10:10.92	81.00
8—Hudson, Vail	6:12:42.00	80.50
9—Frontenac, G. Chevrolet	6:17:21.79	79.45
10—Ballot, Thomas	6:21:10.92	78.75

Timing and scoring a big race is a difficult job, at best. In this case the timers' difficulties were increased by the fact that one of the cars, toward the end of the race, tore out the timing wire. Thus, in checking over the tapes of the electric timing device, the officials found that their first announcements were inaccurate in some respects. For example, it developed that Louis Chevrolet's Frontenac crossed the line approximately a quarter of a second behind De Palma's Packard, a hairbreadth finish, which did not appear in the first report, because the Frontenac's time had been taken on its two hundred and first lap, whereas the race was over at 200 laps. The worst error had to do with eighth place, which was given to Vail first, then to Hickey's Stickel, and finally to Vail again.

With the same schedule of fees in force for the years 1918 and 1919 the total amount of money received for Illinois automobile licenses for the first four and one-half months of 1918 was $2,189,064.73, as compared with $2,543,023.59 for 1919, indicating an increase of $353,958.86. The 1918 figures represent a total of 322,047 registered cars, while those for 1919 show a registration of 377,212, an increase of 55,165.

The motorcycle, however, is not as popular as it was a few years ago. Since 1912 a gradual decrease in the number has been noted. During the foregoing period in 1918 fees to the amount of $17,730.85 were received, representing 6,353 machines, while $17,443.65 was collected in 1919, for a total of 6,255, a loss of $287.20.

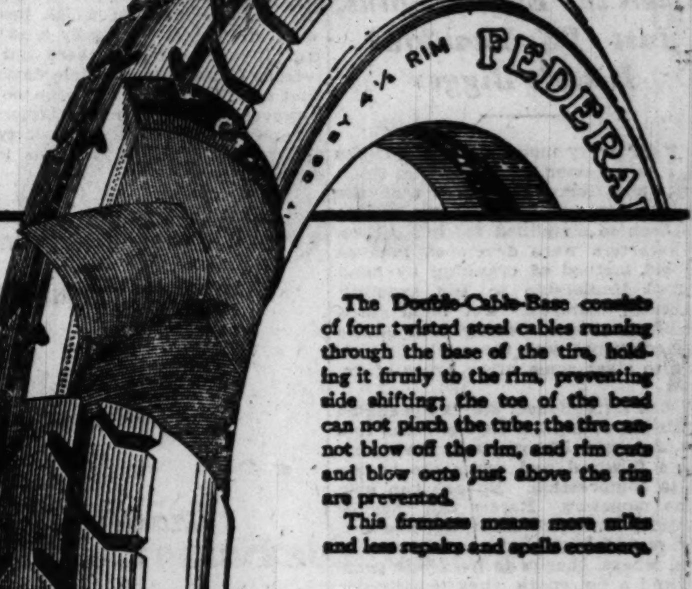
FEDERAL
DOUBLE CABLE BASE CORD TIRES



The Double-Cable-Base consists of four twisted steel cables running through the base of the tire, holding it firmly to the rim, preventing side shifting; the toe of the bead can not pinch the tube; the tire cannot blow off the rim, and rim cuts and blow outs just above the rim are prevented.

This firmness means more miles and less repairs and spells economy.

Economy and Satisfaction

Federal Cord Tires are built to stand the brunt of many miles of road wear.

Strong cords run transversely in layers to withstand punctures, each layer impregnated with live rubber to give resiliency and all moulded to form under air pressure to insure compactness and durability.

More miles — easier riding — less trouble — greater satisfaction — less ultimate cost — all are yours when you use Federal Cord Tires.

Cheer Up; What if You Had to Start with a Crowbar?

When the Engine Balks, Just Be Thankful It Isn't Bigger

NOT every motorist, as he presses his starter pedal, stops to think how fortunate he is that the process of cranking the engine has been so simplified for him. Electric starters were developed because the old method of cranking by hand proved intolerable to the exacting American motorist. Yet hand starting of an automobile engine is child's play compared with the method necessary to start some other types of engines.

When a tractioneer starts the engine of his big caterpillar he fits a bar into one of a series of sockets in the big engine's flywheel and rocks the engine up to compression. No one can spin these monsters. Rarely can they be rocked past compression, but are usually rocked backward up to compression, where, thanks to generous priming and a hot spark, they usually fire and the wielder of the pinch bar pulls it from the darting socket hastily.

The petty officer on a submarine chaser relies upon compressed air to start his unwieldy engines. He, too, must prime copiously and has the additional responsibility of an auxiliary engine, hand started, to pump the air.

A most picturesque but risky method is ordinarily used to start airplane engines. The mechanic shouts "Off!" as he approaches the propeller and is answered in kind by the pilot at the switch. He then spins the great wooden blades by hand to charge the cylinders with gas.

Having worked up a warm perspiration, even on the frostiest morning, he springs clear and shouts "Contact!" The pilot indicates that he has closed the switch by repeating the signal and the mechanic once more approaches the propeller—gingerly this time, however. With a single swift motion he twirls the blade through an arc of more than 90 degrees and steps quickly away from and to the side of the murderous whirling stick.

A 150 horse power engine is about all any but a Samson can swing. When heavier engines, culminating in the 400 horse power Liberty motors, made their appearance, new methods had to be devised.

* * *

At first the blade was pulled over compression by running past it and giving a smart pull in passing. Sometimes two men with hands joined were required. As many as three were required to do the preliminary "winding up" or charging. More than one unwary mechanic was sucked into the whirling circle of the propeller and cut to bits before a safer method was devised.

Owing to their weight and complication, electric starters were not considered seriously, but an ingenious auxiliary magneto was contrived. This magneto was operated by a small hand crank in the pilot's cockpit.

The engine was charged in the usual way, whereupon the mechanic stepped back, shouting "Clear." The pilot then closed the switch and turned the crank of the starting magnets a few times. The supercharged cylinders received a shower of white hot sparks and failure to start at a lively clip was exceptional.

Your duty to your Differential

You have a distinct duty to your Differential.

And it's a duty that is most costly to neglect.

It is up to you to see that the lubrication is right—that the gears and moving parts get a fair chance—that there is no metal-to-metal contact with its ruinous, wearing friction—and no metal-to-metal contact even when the gears are not in motion.

DIXON'S

LUBRICANT

You can accomplish these things by using Dixon's Graphite Transmission and Differential Lubricant. This preparation has been scientifically compounded to meet and overcome just such difficulties as are met with in the differential and transmission of your car.

It clings tenaciously to the surfaces of the moving gears under the constantly changing pressures of varying loads. Heat does not lessen its lubricating qualities. Cold does not congeal it.

It makes your whole car run more smoothly and keeps it running smoothly for a longer time.

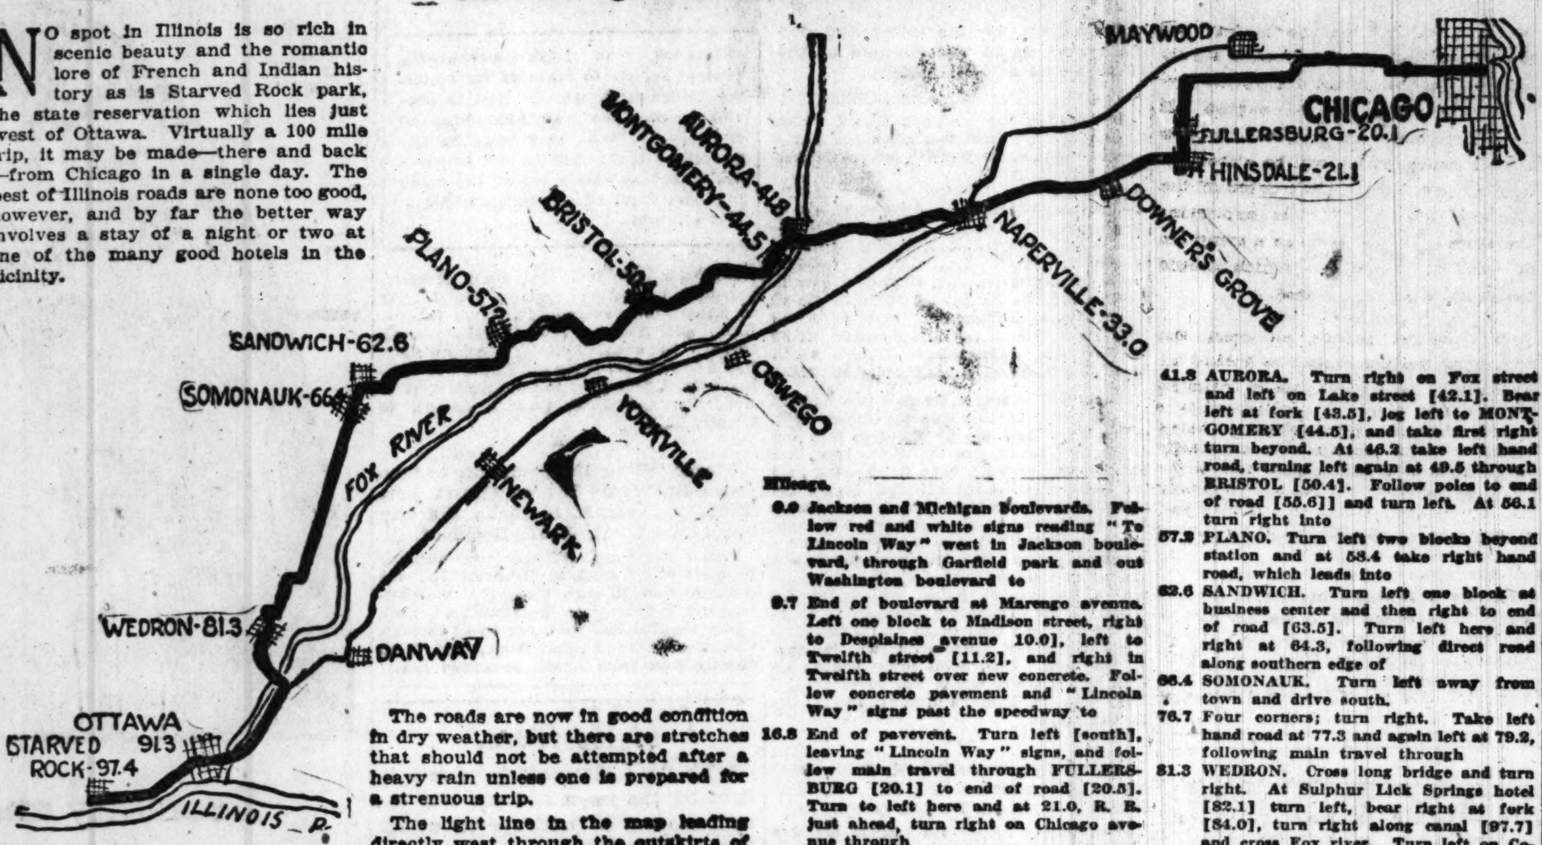
IX.—Chicago to Ottawa and Starved Rock.

NO spot in Illinois is so rich in scenic beauty and the romantic lore of French and Indian history as is Starved Rock park, the state reservation which lies just west of Ottawa. Virtually a 100 mile trip, it may be made—there and back—from Chicago in a single day. The best of Illinois roads are none too good, however, and by far the better way involves a stay of a night or two at one of the many good hotels in the vicinity.



The route outlined herewith in detail is not the shortest of the several ways to be followed, but it is, on the whole, the best as to road conditions. In leaving Chicago the tourist will do well to disregard the familiar markers of the Starved Rock trail, driving out Twelfth street instead and turning south through Hinsdale. At Naperville the Starved Rock trail is picked up, and its markers (yellow and white bands on the telephone and telegraph poles) follow the rest of the way. These insignia are so closely placed as to make a road guide virtually unnecessary.

The roads are now in good condition in dry weather, but there are stretches that should not be attempted after a heavy rain unless one is prepared for a strenuous trip.

The light line in the map leading directly west through the outskirts of Maywood and swinging around to the south indicates the older route into Naperville, which constitutes the beginning of the Starved Rock trail. The map also shows an interesting fair weather option lying south of the Fox river, through Oswego, Yorkville, Newark, and Danway.

Briton Declares U. S. Makers Keep Foreign Cars Out

THE recent arrival in this country of Laurence Pomeroy, one of the leading automobile engineers in England, is of more than ordinary interest in the American motor industry in view of the announcement that he has come here to investigate the possibilities of manufacturing the Vauxhall car in the United States. It is one of the well known English cars.

In commenting on the Vauxhall venture and its prospects for success H. Massac Buist, motor critic of the London Post, characterizes the American automobile industry as "a very close corporation" and states that it prevented, just before the war, a plan to manufacture another British car in this country.

"As showing," he adds, "that it is possible on occasion to secure the consent of the powers that control the American motor industry to the reproduction of European cars in America, there is the case of the Fiat company of Turin, which for years has had in America large works, where cars of popular types are made in considerable quantities."

The making of Fiats was abandoned here over a year ago, but it is rumored that the manufacture may be resumed in the near future.

England Lifts Ban.

The wartime ban on the importation of American cars into England has been lifted. The controller of import restrictions announces that 50 per cent of the number of motor cars, motor trucks, motorcycles, and accessories imported between Jan. 1, 1913, and Sept. 1, 1913, will be allowed entry into England under license. The restriction to this amount is to be maintained until Sept. 1, 1919.

It was a most severe test, over mountain roads, through a blinding storm, with mud hub deep in places. The Model 90 never faltered, never failed!

The performance of the car and the time made is the more remarkable because it is what more than 150,000 Model 90 owners know their cars are capable of.

This run, on the heels of the Oklahoma victory—where Model 90 stock car set the world's Non-Stop High Gear record, 4370 miles in 7 days, readily shows why owners are proud of their cars—and why you will be proud of a Model 90.

Let us show you a duplicate of the cars that made these records.

Stretched, as in the tire, good tubes do not rip when cut. They cut but do not rip. Make your dealer prove that the tube he sells will stand the Norwalk test.
The slightest cut in an inferior tube—rip! And the tube is ruined.

At Every Step You're Sure

WITH a pair of scissors today, you prove that Norwalk Tubes do not rip when cut or blown out. With the Norwalk Tube itself you realize the significance of floating stock*. Greater safety because of greater strength.

And then you will ask for a Norwalk Casing—either a fabric non-skid or a cord. Both have black tread and snow white sidewalls.

If your local dealer cannot supply you write to

The Scissors Test

Take sample piece of tube ¼ in. by 3 in. Stretch to 9 in. or three times its original length. Cut on edge with scissors. This cut should not be more than ⅛ in. across the sample. If the strip tears apart the rubber is inferior.

Boche Truck with "Synthetic" Tires at Coblenz Show

THE motor transport corps of the 3d army held a motor show at Coblenz, Germany, during the carnival given by the army of occupation in the week ending April 26. One of the interesting exhibits consisted of four captured boche military motor trucks. These were three ton types of the following makes: Adler, Opel, Burkopp, Vomag, the first three chain driven and the fourth shaft driven. All four contained the full equipment of tools and supplies required by German specifications.

The Opel truck was fitted with tires made of the much advertised synthetic rubber, the prospective production of which by the Huns during the war gave the allied army authorities not a little worry. The three other trucks had steel tires.

Some captured boche trucks have layers of rubber between the rims and the steel tires, but most of the success of the steel tired vehicles and their proven practicability in warfare is due, according to motor transport corps experts, to clever auxiliary spring devices.

Many different designs of coil type springs are used on these trucks to give resiliency to vehicles traveling empty, and the heavier leaf type springs come into play only when the trucks are loaded.

"Gypsy Tours" This Week.

Motorcycle clubs throughout the country are planning their third annual "gypsy tours," which will be staged in various localities next Saturday and Sunday. The tours take the form of open air outings in which the motorcycle clubs gather their members for a tour of one or two days of seventy-five or one hundred miles a day. The parties camp out gypsy style enjoying the recreation of outdoor picnicking. Many of the tourists will start the their Saturday morning and camp out overnight, returning Sunday evening.

Minnesota Gets Busy.

At the fall election in 1920 the voters of Minnesota will be asked to express their attitude toward a big state road improvement program involving a bond issue of $100,000,000.

My Funniest Motoring Experience

Every one who has taken the road in a motor or has some story to tell. What is your best one? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "My Funniest Motoring Experience." Write as briefly as possible, on one side of the paper only, and address Automobile Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. Manuscripts submitted in this contest cannot be returned. Make a copy and keep it if you wish to preserve what you have written.

Repeating the Offense.

It was my first drive without a man in the car. I was silent for a while, but later gained confidence and started chatting with the girls in the rear seat.

All of a sudden I felt an awful jolt. Was it actually true? I had knocked a man down and felt something go under the wheels! The girls screamed, "You have run over a man!"

I wanted to put on the brake, but in my excitement "threw it into reverse" and backed over my victim a second time. When I finally stopped I rushed horrified to the unfortunate one.

By this time a crowd had gathered, and the victim—well, he was saying: "Can you beat it? And I just got that new one this morning." Thank goodness, I had only run over a wooden leg!

Rubbing It In.

Not long ago I was driving along Michigan boulevard with some friends. When a front tire exploded with a loud report I quickly drew to the curb and stopped. While I was sadly gazing at the wreckage of canvas and rubber I noticed that everybody in the car was giggling and looking at the store in front of which I had stopped. There, on a snow white sheet of muslin, bright red letters spelled this cheerful message:

"Your old tires are now worth 9 cents a pound."

MAX.

Friend Wife to the Rescue.

One afternoon while coming through mountains in Wyoming, I struck a ditch which was deeper than it looked. Car, engine, and all stopped dead. I thought of course we had broken something from such a severe bump.

The starter would not turn engine over, nor could I budge it with the crank. Not knowing too much about a motor, I thought we were surely done for. I worked thirty minutes in vain, only to discover that I had not released the gear shift. I did this, and away we went laughing, my wife more than I, for it was she who had actually made the discovery.

National Park for Maine.

At last the east is to have a national park. Congress has created in Maine the Lafayette National park, comprising a tract of more than 10,000 acres on Mount Desert island, on the coast of which lies the city of Bar Harbor, long a Mecca for motorists and "resorters" generally. All the land was donated by public spirited citizens for the express purpose of founding this national reservation.

Building It Themselves.

California motorists are being called upon for a fund of $1,000,000 to build an all year paved highway into the Yosemite valley. Two hundred thousand certificates have been issued at $5 each and these entitle the holders to admission to the valley. A ticket into the valley at any time costs the same amount, but the money now being taken in for the tickets is to go for the building of the paved route.

The Experts Say - - -

EXPLOSIONS in the muffler are caused by the presence of a fuel charge not ignited during the previous stroke of the engine. If these explosions are frequent there is a basic cause, which will be either too rich a mixture or some trouble in the electrical system. Muffler explosions therefore must be taken as a symptom of some deeper trouble which should be immediately eliminated.

Once every month, at most, the wheels of the car should be jacked up and tested for smoothness of running and for side play. If a sharp click is heard when the front wheel is being spun, or if its motion is momentarily checked, it is probable that one of the balls is broken or split. Obviously the injured ball should be removed and a new one be substituted or the entire bearing will go to pieces.

On the car which has been operated for some months the operator frequently finds that gear changing cannot be accomplished without noise. The gears do not mesh easily, which is not only annoying but interferes with the operation of the car. Harsh gear changing is generally caused by a spinning clutch—that is, one that rotates after it has been disengaged. Sometimes, however, the trouble is a misalignment of the shafts of the gearset, due to distortion of poor bearings. When a cone clutch spins it is usually possible to remedy the trouble by adjustment. Roughness of the leather may be the cause, and in this case a coating of neatsfoot oil or a dressing of fuller's earth will cure the condition. In a disc clutch, thinning the oil sometimes helps the spinning. When a dry disc clutch spins it is generally caused by gummed discs.

An effective method of detecting a suspected leak is to dust a piece of fine wire gauze with chalk or even fine dust from the road and pass it over the suspected area while the engine is running. Whether the air is being forced out or draw in, the chalk or dust will be blown away from the gauze when it is brought within the influence of the leak.

SURE AS SOLDER
JOHNSON'S RADIATOR CEMENT
Mends Leaky Radiators
MADE AND GUARANTEED BY
S.C. JOHNSON & SON
RACINE, WIS., U.S.A.
London
Sydney

THE easiest and quickest way to repair leaks in radiators, pumps, water jackets, motor head gaskets, hose connections, etc., is with Johnson's Radiator Cement. It will stop leaks immediately without laying up the car.

Johnson's Radiator Cement is not a make-shift—it will give permanent satisfaction. It contains nothing which can clog or coat the cooling system and is absolutely harmless in every respect.

JOHNSON'S RADIATOR CEMENT

It requires no experience to use Johnson's Radiator Cement—all you have to do is remove the radiator cap and pour the liquid into the radiator. It will ordinarily seal a leak in from two to ten minutes.

Johnson's Radiator Cement blends perfectly with the water until it reaches the leaks—just as soon as it comes in contact with the air it forms a hard, tough, pressure-resisting substance which is insoluble in water and consequently makes a permanent seal.

A half-pint of Johnson's Radiator Cement is ordinarily sufficient for a Ford or other small radiator. For medium size cooling system use a pint and for large cooling systems use a quart.

JOHNSON'S CARBON REMOVER

A dose of Johnson's Carbon Remover, the engine laxative, will cure 80% of engine troubles. It will increase the power of your car—improve acceleration—stop that knock—quiet your motor—save your batteries—cut down your repair bills—and reduce your gas and oil consumption.

More Mileage for Tubes and Casings

JOHNSON'S HASTEE PATCH

This is the ideal repair for tubes, casings and rubber goods of all kinds. No time, labor or heat required. A Patch can be applied in three minutes and it's so simple a child can use it. Gives equally good results on a pin hole puncture or on a large blowout. Conveniently put up in strips.

JOHNSON'S BLACK-LAC

Here is a preparation with which you can make your gray, dusty top and side curtains look like new. Johnson's Black-Lac is unequalled for blackening fenders, rims, hoods, lamps—and, in fact, all worn metal parts. Prevents rust and keeps your car in a high state of repair.

Drive around to our service station at 113 E. Superior Street (Chicago) and get an estimate on having the finish of your car put in perfect condition without revarnishing—simply with the use of Johnson's Cleaner and Johnson's Prepared Wax. Phone Superior 6816.

This is the Firestone YEAR

During the past year the news of the remarkable mileage of the Gray Sidewall Firestone Tires has passed from car owner to car owner.

Most miles per dollar is a phrase packed full of meaning for men who build Firestone Tires, men who sell Firestone Tires, and car owners who use Firestone Tires.

To the builders—90 per cent of them are stockholders in the company—it is a personal pledge to turn out a product capable of delivering more miles per dollar than any other tire made. Gray Sidewall Firestone Fabric Tires and the new Standard Oversize Firestone Cord Tires are living up to that pledge.

As for the tire dealers—

MOST MILES PER DOLLAR

has become the foundation of their faith. Their confidence is a fighting confidence because these gray sidewall Firestone Tires have driven home the truth that most miles per dollar pays and that most miles per dollar is Firestone.

To the tire user the Firestone name is the sure guide to tire purchase. Car owners have been getting more mileage than from any other tire. They bear the message to their friends, "This is the Firestone Year."

With this increased mileage from every Firestone Tire, Firestone adjustments never have been so few. In fact, these mileage records brought about the new basis of adjustment recently announced—

6,000 MILES
FOR FABRIC TIRES

8,000 MILES
FOR CORD TIRES

10,000 MILES
FOR SOLID TIRES

Now is the time to stop shopping. Generous values are not to be found in "tire bargains" but in most miles per dollar. Buy Firestones all around.

The tide is running strong for Essenkay—the Better-Than-Air Tire Filler—which eliminates punctures, blowouts, slow leaks, doubles tire mileage, and obviates the use of tubes, spare tires, spare rims, pumps, jacks, etc.

We gladly offer motorists a free trial of Essenkay in their own cars, that they may prove to their own satisfaction our claims that Essenkay—RIDES LIKE AIR, DOUBLES TIRE MILEAGE, ELIMINATES PUNCTURES AND BLOWOUTS.

There are over 300 sales depots in Chicago, any one of which will be glad to explain the merits of Essenkay. See list on this page.

There are over 75,000 Essenkay users, and our files are literally filled with testimonial letters, all of which are open to the public.

Over 20,000 motorists have installed Essenkay in their tires in the past 5 months. They are now enjoying freedom from punctures, blowouts, slow leaks—all tire troubles—and are forever free from the inconvenience, delays and expense caused by air filled tires.

Doubles Tire Mileage

The use of ESSENKAY is a proved economy, because ESSENKAY should last as long as your car. Tires filled with ESSENKAY are always at uniform pressure—cannot be deflated or run flat. 10,000 to 20,000 miles on ESSENKAY-filled tires is the rule, not the exception. ESSENKAY comes in sections to fit perfectly into all sizes of casings and fills the casings completely. It can be installed on all types of rims.

First Cost—Last Cost

ESSENKAY is an investment, not an expense. When ESSENKAY-filled tires are worn down to the last layer of fabric the old tire may be discarded and the same ESSENKAY transferred to a new casing. ESSENKAY is now in use on thousands of pleasure cars, trucks, converted trucks, and tractors. Many municipalities, departments of Government, newspapers, etc., have increased truck and delivery efficiency to 100% and proved that first cost is last cost.

What Essenkay Is

ESSENKAY is a flexible, light and highly resilient material—NOT A LIQUID—therefore cannot leak out of tires. It looks like rubber—has all the desirable flexible qualities of finest Para rubber—yet it actually contains NO RUBBER IN ANY FORM, and so has none of the imperfections and weaknesses of rubber, hence cannot oxidize, "bloom" or rot.

Free Trial Offer

ESSENKAY is installed by us on FREE TRIAL. We do not say "buy" ESSENKAY. We say "try" ESSENKAY. We ask you to test it in your tires, under your own loading and road conditions. Ride over smooth roads, then over the roughest you can find, including hilly and sandy country. Allow the car to remain under maximum load on a concrete floor to prove that ESSENKAY does not flatten. Then—if you are not convinced that ESSENKAY rides like air—that it will end your tire trouble—that you will no longer be bothered with punctures, blowouts, or slow leaks—that ESSENKAY will not flatten, crumble or deteriorate—return it—THE TEST WILL COST YOU NOTHING.

WANTED—MALE HELP.

Executives and Managers.

GENERAL MANAGER—THE OWNER OF two large factories manufacturing a line of automobile and truck bodies, including cabs, truck accessories, doing painting and trimming, employing 400 to 600 men, desires to secure a man with proven ability, who has been successfully engaged with large manufacturers of similar lines.

The business was established in 1887 and has been internationally known for 30 years and has shown an average earning capacity of 30% on capital stock for the same period.

Located in a beautiful little city of 25,000 population on three railroads and the river with correspondingly low rates. Where the climate is good, schools and churches above average, and where all things necessary to make life desirable are at hand. Labor trouble is unknown and many operators own their own homes.

The man desired must have actual practical experience in large production of wood and metal products. He must be competent to advise with the present financial department with a view of expansion occasioned by ever increasing business. He must know just what he can do with the capital in hand and must be able to determine factory capacity and work the factory up to that capacity.

He will be expected to take chief executive position in the present organization, but will be at liberty to reorganize in order to secure highest efficiency, thus paving the way for the proper handling of the enormous business on hand, which is far greater than ever before in the history of the institutions.

To gain consideration of application the applicant must answer the following questions in detail:

AGE?	SALARY RECEIVED?
EXPERIENCE?	PERSONAL QUALIFICATIONS?
CONCERNS SERVED?
POSITIONS HELD?

REFERENCES IN FULL WITH PHOTOGRAPHS?

In a word, he must cover the ground thoroughly and explain why, accompanying his explanation with undoubted proof, he is able to handle such plants as above described.

Actual proof of his ability to head the organization as it should be, will open the possibility of securing controlling interest on most favorable conditions.

The present owner, by reason of age and other large interests, is compelled to retire from active duties.

He realizes that this is an extraordinary proposal and he is prompted only by his desire to see this business which he organized and guided from nothing to its present success, carried on successfully and honorably.

Under proper management the business should pay for itself in three years. The concern and its owner are nationally known and nationally advertised, and the present opportunities for supplying the automotive industry with bodies are greater than ever before.

Applications will be treated in utmost confidence, but in order to save time do not apply unless you are confident, by reason of experience, of your ability to fill this position.

A production man with proven experience in large, successful woodworking factories and possessing a sound business knowledge will be considered, as the production end is our weakest link.

ADVISING YOURSELF

In regard to matters of such importance as your lifetime opportunity, compares with the blind leading the blind.

YOU NEED the best advice and knowledge of the best VOCATIONAL COUNSELLORS who have been tried and proven by years of actual test.

WE MUST PLACE YOU in the kind of a position you want to attain our success.

Service to you is our basis. We firmly believe in that great slogan: He profits most who serves best.

We have several hundred positions open from the beginner up to $20,000 per year, with hundreds of the highest grade concerns in the country, large and small, young and old.

Come in and advise with us. It costs you absolutely nothing to talk it over.

WRITE US.

22 VOCATIONAL COUNSELLORS AT YOUR SERVICE.

Grouped into five great Departments:
EXECUTIVES,
SALESMEN,
BOOKKEEPERS AND ACCOUNTANTS,
STENOGRAPHERS AND CLERKS,
TECHNICAL MEN.

Regardless of who are what you are, what your opinion may or may not be, the facts as related in this brief statement remain the same.

If they are as we state, why should you hesitate? Why hide your light under a bushel? Why impede your own progress any longer? We could fill columns describing hundreds of positions, many of which fit your case exactly.

Why take up your time? Our service is institutional, international. All interviews strictly confidential in private offices.

To give you an idea as to how we operate, last week a Sales Manager dropped in from Detroit and we placed him at $100 a week the next day.

A Credit Executive came in from New Orleans and we placed him the next day at $4,000.

We sent 6 men to the east coast at $2,000 to $3,000 with one large eastern manufacturer. We hire these men direct and have 60 other openings to be filled the next few months.

We placed the Assistant Chief Accountant of a multi-million dollar corporation, at a large salary, besides hundreds of others placed during the month, such as Clerks, Bookkeeper, Stenographers, Advertising Men, Technical Men, Engineers, Draftsmen, etc.

NO REGISTRATION FEE TEMPORARILY

On Clerks and Stenographers less than $20 per week. We do not care if you have not had a day's experience or if you have had 5 years' experience. We have a wonderful choice of the better grade positions, paying far beyond your imagination.

Although conditions are such that we could promise to place you immediately, in reality our proposition is for the man who is looking for the ideal opportunity. That's the fellow we want—the constructive type—the fellow thinking ahead. We place you in stock and send for you only when that opportunity arises.

The past month one out of every four men sent for interviews by special appointment with the employer landed. In some departments we have placed as high as seven out of eight men sent to positions.

Will you be one of these men placed the next 30 days or are you going to continue to rut it?

Come to us direct. If we cannot do it, who can?

June 8, 1919.

Dear Madam:

While talking to one of our inspectors in the lunch room of our new factory the other day we asked what she liked best about our place.

"Well," she said, "I like the clean and airy factory and the other girls working here. And the foremen treat you right, which goes a long way. My girl friend is looking for a job and I am going to bring her to the Employment Office tomorrow morning."

This young lady, like many others working at our Maywood factory, had no experience in any kind of factory work when she started. She was given instructions and was able to do good work within a few days. Now she is earning more money by doing productive work than she could make in any other way.

If you live on the West Side or in the western suburbs, we would like to have you call at our Employment Office, 7th-av. and St. Charles road, Maywood, and let us give you more details about the various positions now open.

Yours very truly,
AMERICAN CAN COMPANY.

P. S.—Tear this ad. out and take any west bound Madison or Lake-st. car to the end of the line. Ask the conductor to let you off at the Employment Office.

OFFERING
EXCEPTIONAL
EARNING OPPORTUNITIES

One of the best and most reliable Chicago organizations offers splendid opportunities to young women between 19 and 24 years.

The applicants who will receive consideration must come from good homes, be neat in appearance, and have a desire to accomplish more than the ordinary employe. A high school education or its equivalent is essential.

Our work is intensely interesting and high grade in nature. It is carried on in a department exclusively for women. An abundance of light and fresh air is available, together with the association of other refined young ladies.

We teach you our business in a very short time, during which you receive $15 a week. It is not at all unusual to earn between $20 and $25 a week in a few weeks.

We prefer those who have had some business experience, although this feature is not essential. Aggressiveness and resourcefulness are very important.

In reply, give age, education, and telephone number, and anything which may help us to decide in your favor.

WANTED—FEMALE HELP.

Employment Agencies.

WOMAN'S GREAT PROGRESS IS DUE to her own ability to place herself in the position to learn, understand, and realize her position, her power, and demand by coming in contact with those able to help her and recognize her place in the business world. In good plain English, no matter how much we know, it is of little use until our knowledge and ability is used by those needing it—in other words, finding the demand.

After placing thousands of business women with the best concerns in the country the past 12 years, the kind of women like yourself, your sister, or your most capable, smart business woman friend, we feel we are justified in arousing you to a FULL REALIZATION of the demand for YOU.

You have the ability. We have an organization of 15 VOCATIONAL COUNSELLORS able to place your ability to the best advantage.

We have several hundred openings. Without referring to the order box, briefly speaking, it runs something like this:

100 STENOGRAPHERS, beginner up to $35.
100 CLERKS, with or without experience.
SWITCHBOARD OPERATORS, TYPISTS, all kinds of OFFICE DEVICE OPERATORS, FILE, BILL, ENTRY, BANK, INSURANCE, RAILROAD, AND GENERAL OFFICE CLERKS.

Naturally, the volume as well as quality of the positions we handle is brought about by our connection with the Business Men's Clearing House, who have placed several hundred thousand high grade men, from the beginner up to $25,000 per year, the past 15 years.

It costs you absolutely nothing to come in and talk it over. Come in and let us advise with you. All interviews strictly confidential. Our private offices; and, by the way, our suite of offices, in equipment and appointment, is equal to the finest ladies' shop in the city, arranged for your convenience in the heart of the shopping district, where you may shop for a job as you would for a hat.

NO REGISTRATION FEE TEMPORARILY.

The demand upon us must be taken care of. We want you to come in and look over these hundreds of openings. We want you to send your friends to us. If you have a brother, or know a young chap, send him to our Male Department.

We are the strongest placing power of business women in the world, and we are positively obliged to place you in the kind of a position you want, to earn our compensation.

An introduction by us to the employer, which is always a definite special appointment, lends that dignity and standing to your case that you must have and you cannot secure elsewhere. Now is the time.

What are you going to do—be a business woman, or just plug along in the same old rut?

RECONSTRUCTION

THE VITAL QUESTION:

What must one do to provide best for his family and promote his own interests?

REASONS.

HAS IT OCCURRED to you that the farmers are practically the only class of working people who do not have to worry about reconstruction? They never were disorganized. If you were a farmer today, would you worry about your food, clothing, or work? No, not when all now concede that everything the farm raises will sell at high prices for years to come. Well, then, why not plan to put yourself in that class as soon as possible.

LOCATION.

THE SWIGART LAND COMPANY has been "pathfinders" to farm homes for twenty years, and they can find one for you. Why not deal with a firm of long experience and high financial standing? It costs you no more; in fact, for these very reasons you enjoy many advantages in dealing with this company that you can get nowhere else. Recently, in Antrim and Kalkaska counties, Michigan, they have opened up 40,000 acres of hardwood lands that are rapidly being taken up by a thrifty class of people who are desirous of bettering their living conditions and their finances. This is made possible for many, not only by our easy terms, but more especially by our many ways of helping the new settler.

A FEW HELPS.

Free insurance while paying for the land.

Free expert farm advisers.

No taxes for five years to the actual settler.

Money loaned to help buy live stock and to erect buildings.

Our free booklet tells you of many other advantages.

SOIL.

THE EXCELLENT SOIL (no swamp or stones) produces as good crops as any raised in the North Central States, and excels in the production of clover, potatoes, beans, fruit, and vegetables. Sometimes a single crop of potatoes pays for 40 acres.

PRICE.

YOU CAN GET 10, 20, 40, 80, 160 acres, or more for stock raising, for only $15 to $30 per acre, balance on very easy monthly terms, and in a short time you will have a Warranty Deed and a clear Abstract for a tract of this land, a solid foundation for a farm home of your own. $10 to $25 starts you on the purchase of 10 acres, $50 on 20 acres, and $100 on 40 acres, etc.

INVESTIGATION.

ALREADY THERE ARE good schools, churches, towns, hard roads, railroads, telephones, and R. F. D. Help in the work of reconstruction and at the same time help yourself by buying one of these farms. Put yourself in a position that, regardless of what may happen hereafter, a good living will be assured to you and your family. Start your investigation at once by writing today for our big free booklet, also for excursion rates and dates. Then arrange to make the trip as soon as possible. We take you over the lands in our own autos, without charge.

OUR FIRST SETTLERS

are already at work on their farms. Many had enough money to finance themselves. Many paid $500 down and took advantage of our Home Lands Credit System, which furnished them a new house and barn, small tools; provided teams at reasonable rates so that they to start with did not have to invest several hundred dollars in horses. We stand ready to furnish them with stock and sell on credit; rent them clearing machinery; finally, they do not have to make any further payments on principal or interest for five years unless they want to.

We have also sold many prospective settlers under our Sales Plan No. 2: $25 down, $10 to $15 monthly, and $100 down and $120 yearly, with settlers' privileges, under our Sales Plan No. 1, when $500 is paid. Come and talk to these settlers and hear what they have to say. We offer you a farm on the above basis.

A NEW FIELD.

Investigate this district in Forest and Oconto Counties. You can buy agricultural land for $20 to $30 per acre and grazing land at much lower prices. We sell large or small tracts. This is a real chance to get a farm home. Many fine farms have already been developed in this district. Your labor invested here will be profitable. It will make you independent. Get our literature, which is free, and learn all about it.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Wisconsin.

UP

Going up—good farm land values are rising everywhere. This is particularly true where values are still under $100 per acre. The next few years will see a tremendous rise in the value of farm land now worth $50 to $100 an acre—especially in the productive clay loam dairy belt of Wisconsin. The world must be fed and this great cloverland will do its share. Ask for govt. figures on crops.

We are OWNERS of improved farms, REAL FARMS, in Taylor, Lincoln, Langlade, and adjoining counties. These are real farms with and without stock—buildings, clearings, fences, well, etc. Price, $1,000 up.

WE SOMETIMES TAKE IN DESIRABLE PROPERTY IN PART PAYMENT, TAKING MORTGAGE BACK FOR BALANCE.

We are owners—40 years of continuous LOEB-HAMMEL activity in Wisconsin. Send for booklet "Letters from Satisfied Customers." Reference: Fort Dearborn National Bank, Chicago, or any bank in Wisconsin.

We have horses, cows, wagons, harness, etc., on hand all the year round, which we sell on very liberal terms.

WE HELP THE SETTLER TO HELP HIMSELF.

Medford and Merrill offices open the year round. R. R. fare refunded to buyers. Write today for FREE literature.

OWN a farm of your own in a section where WORK WINS. We also have unimproved land for sale on liberal sale plans.
